This well known firm propose to set up a JAR of BEANS for their Customers, (not to eat); but to guess the number therein contained.

THE PLAN IS THIS: A Jar of Beans is placed in a conspicuous place in their Store. It will remain there until NEW YEARS; and every Purchaser of GOODS to the amount of

$1.00 AND UPWARDS FOR CASH

Will be given an opportunity of Guessing the Number of Beans in the Jar! which number will be Recorded. On NEW YEARS DAY a Committee of Disinterested Citizens will count the Beans, and the Person who has come the nearest Guessing the number contained in the Jar, will be allowed to SELECT AS A PRESENT THE FINEST OVERCOAT IN THE STORE!

And the next nearest one CAN HAVE THE CHOICE OF THE CLOAKS IN THE STORE!

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Chicago Press: The Republican party have evidently determined to eat, drink, and be merry and die hard.

—Chicago Herald: The most ferocious confederate brigadier eaters of the present day are the men who, when the republic was forced to resort to a draft so great was its need for soldiers, kept their precious carcasses carefully out of the way. Twenty years having elapsed, they are now in favor of enacting for the war in order to crush out the rebellion. God pity them for cowards then and braggarts now. They are the real traitors of the period.

—Lewisburg Journal: As the possession of millions and the power to influence other money kings is the leading qualification for the chairmanship of the republican national committee, Mr. Sabin is a fit man for the position. Marshall Jewell had nothing but his money to recommend him for the chairmanship; Zach Chandler, Don Cameron and E. B. Morgan, the former chairman, had political sagacity, but their millions were their principal recommendation.

—Evansville Journal: Hon. Wm. S. Holman appears to be getting a boom for the democratic nomination for governor of Indiana. It is not good sense nor good policy to underestimate the strength of the opposition. Holman is one of the strongest men in the state among the people. His political record is as nearly invulnerable as any man's. Those papers who are endeavoring to belittle him are wasting their time. Should he be nominated, our very strongest republican will be required to defeat him. If he is a demagogue, as some people charge, he is one of the smartest ones in the union.

The New York Times the other day alluding to the apprehension that a revision of the tariff would disturb the business interests puts the apt inquiry if business was not already disturbed and if this disturbance mainly because of overproduction? The Times since returning to the subject makes these sensible observations:

The tariff is a business question. It does not follow because action must be taken upon it that that action must be either toward absolute free trade or toward the maintenance of protection. As it stands the tariff is unequal, it is moderate as to some articles and oppressive as to others; it is a tariff for revenue as to some, protective as to others, prohibitory as to still others, and as to a large number of articles it is simply absurd and stupid. The business men of the country are much more interested in having its evils removed, its nonsense eliminated, and its oppression relieved than they are in the effect of those changes upon one party or the other. If the Democrats in the House and the Republicans in the Senate would treat the matter from a business point of view, they would show their wisdom and their patriotism, and could very safely ignore the captious criticism of purely partisan journals on either side.

—Stockton Mail: If ever the time comes for any uprising of labor, the army will sympathize with the revolutionists, as the French troops did in 1798. The American soldiers will understand as well as any other class of citizens what struggle means, and, as they come from the ranks of the poor, and can read and know what is going on, it is easy to see on which side their hearts will be. The fact is that no military establishment, however strong, can prevent a crisis between capital and labor, if, by the neglect of Congress to pass the necessary laws to relieve the increasing distress of the poor, such an issue of affairs is invited. The man who does not discern this tendency of things in the United States applies the lessons of history to his own time to poor advantage indeed.

—Elkhart Sentinel: Everything is promising for Democratic success next fall, and from present appearances only apathy and indifference in our own ranks can endanger it. There should be no danger from this source. Every consideration that should have weight with the patriotic affairs. If there were not, as there are, a hundred other urgent reasons for it, the mere fact that one party, dominated and managed for the most of the time by the same men, has for a quarter of a century held the reins of power in this Republic, is sufficient cause for its overthrow. Such a case of power can not safely be given to any party. It is dangerous to free institutions. Let every Democrat do his part of the work of bringing about a change, and the nearest, most effective effort in this direction will be to strengthen his home paper.

Algeron Brown and Nettie Mollen were wed when the trees began to robe in the vesture of spring, and eight happy months had elapsed, freighted with sunbeams undimmed by a single cloud. Algeron was a man of thirty-five; and, as we have seen, of many business engagements, while his pretty wife was scarcely twenty, with no engagements which interfered with her passionate devotion to her husband. But while he would have throttled the thought had it entered his mind, the truth existed, that he was surfeiting on

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

St. NICHOLAS

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York TRIBUNE once said: "In the annals of immortal literature that threatens the children, none strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St.
NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries."
The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. NICHOLAS was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge,
Capt. Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen
Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton,
Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller
Elizabeth Stewart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney
Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter,
Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Fred'k Schwatka,

THE CENTURY CO. New-York, N. Y.

Cin. News Journal says republican papers are in tears because Mr. Carlisle doesn't proceed to destroy the "business interests" of the country.
They say he is the natural foe of business and would like to "bust" it, and that it is cowardly and mean in him not to proceed with the disturbance.
It is very evident that our esteemed republican contemporaries are in a state of mind.

In the first months of her married life she lived on love; it was her food and drink, and now her starving soul sought vainly for a substitute.

There was no change in their outward relations; no distrustful glance; no harsh bickerings; no studied avoidance. There was acquiescence in design and harmony in detail in all mutual affairs, and even their most intimate friends deceived themselves with the belief that they were the happiest couple in the great center of drama and song.

But all this did not satisfy a hungry heart instinctively seeking food to appease its craving. By all the little artifices which love, aided by beauty, could desire, she sought to again arouse the dormant passion of his soul.
But he was satisfied with her presence and his certainty of possession, and did not even permit his eyes to speak comfort to her aching heart.

So they drifted farther and farther from each other, and when Charlie Manning arrived at home from Europe, a month ago, poor little Nettie's love was floating like a rudderless bark upon the great ocean of uncertainty.

Charley had been her lover in her girl days, but nearly five years before he had departed for Germany to finish his education.
For a while they continued a regular correspondence and vowed vows of eternal constancy. But the flowers of early spring fade the quickest, and the love of childhood drips "neath the chill frost of absence. If not forgotten, he was at least dethroned in her heart's dreams when she erected Algernon Brown, the handsome and wealthy bachelor, the best catch of the season, in his stead.

But Charley had returned, a magnificent fellow of twenty-three, highly accomplished, graceful in manner, and irresistible in attractions which awayed beauty as completely as the magnet attracts the shilling steel.

He had met his quondam playmate and sweet heart at a large party given by his parents in honor of his return, and thenceforth he had no eyes save for the beautiful face of Nettie Brown; no voice except to magnify her wondrous charms.

As Mr. Brown was so absorbed in speculation that he seldom gave an evening to his

A Colorado Mining Town.

It does not take many days to build the kind of town miners are willing to ve in, and they don't care what sort of a place they put it in, either, if it is only near the mines. It may be in the dry midst of a pine forest, or out on the steep, bare side of a mountain, all twines and rocks. They cut down a few trees, and leave all the stumps standing; or they clear away the biggest of the stones, enough to make a sort of street, and then every man falls on and builds the cheapest house he can, in the quickest way. Sometimes of logs, sometimes out of rough boards; often only with one room, very rarely with more than three. When they wish to make them very fine they make the end, fronting the street, what is called a "battlement front," that is, a straight square wall, higher than the house, so as to convey the impression that the house is much bigger than it is. It is a miserable make-believe, and goes farther than any other one thing to give to the new towns in the West a hideous and contemptible look. These log cabins, board shanties, and battlement fronts are all crowded as near together as they can be, and are set close to the street: no front yards, no back yards, no yards at the side, — out, around the whole settlement, a stony wilderness. It is not worth while to put anything in order, because there is no knowing how long the people will stay. Perhaps the mines will not turn out to be good ones, and then everybody will move away, and in very little more time than it took to build up the town it will be deserted. There are a great many such deserted towns in Colorado and California. They all say, seem to me to look like a kind of graveyard. From "Christmas in the Park Boarding House," by H. H., in St. Nicholas for January.

The policy of the Republican party at present is like the peculiar fabric which the ladies call "crazy-work." It is made up of an infant number of misshapen contributions from the several leaders with no two alike. —Detroit Free Press.

Upon due reflection, we are led to the conclusion that the love of country holds but a feeble sway over the average minds of the people, when brought in direct competition with the money power. When we remember this our own beloved State was ignominiously bought up by Dorsey's stolen money to elect Garfield to the Presidency, what shall we say about patriotism, but that it is the fulsome cry of the demagogue to mystify the minds of the unwary?—Mount Vernon Democrat.

His Honor and Bijah.

His name was Joseph Henry,
His age was twenty-three,
His face betrayed a terror,
'Twas painful for to see.

"Young man," observed His Honor, "you were picked up in an intoxicated condition."

"Yes, sir."

"You were not only drunk, but so ugly that it took two officers to bring you down."

"Yes, sir."

"The end of your nose is frost-bitten, your clothes have been ruined, and you have bumps and bruises sufficient to last you for three months. Please explain where the fun comes in?"

"I—I can't, sir."

"Let's see? You came to the city yesterday with pretensions?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, where's the money you got for your stuff?"

"Gone, sir."

"And where's your team?"

"Gone, sir."

Then Joseph Henry Jackson,
He bowed his classical head;
And wiped a tear from either eye,
And wished that he were dead.

"This is neither a lunatic asylum nor a place for idiots," remarked the court, as he looked down upon the young man. "Go home!"

"Judge, I'll never forget your kindness."

"Kindness! There's no kindness about it! The fact is, you don't know enough to run down hill, and they don't want you in the work-house! Skip out of this!"

"But, sir—"

"Go away—get out!"

Joseph Henry went out doors, and growled and muttered and used exclamations, and wanted to fight some one, but when even the bootblacks refused to pay any attention to him he finally sneaked off.—(Detroit Free Press.)

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

After the stove-pipe had been knocked down by the efforts of Gilead Jones to treat both his feet on the hearth at once and Judge Cadaver, Pickles Smith and Blossom Johnson had heroically restored it to place Brother Gardner arose and said:

"One great cause of human misery can do back that mankind expects too much of Providence. Take the case of Elder Toats, for instance. For de las' sixty years he has been waitin' for Providence to stop de leaks in his cabin roof an' he am waitin' yit. He somehow expects dat Providence am going to furnish him de an' cako an' oyster soup, an' when he sets down to cold 'taters an' tuff meat he feels as if he had been wronged."

"Take de case of Brother Jethro. He has allies had de idea dat he would some day be rich, an' as a consequence he sets on de fence an' plans new houses an' drives fast horses, an' wares good clothes, while his wife goes ragged, and his children have cold toes. What he might earn by honest labor he won't earn, because he hopes to git a fortune widout work."

"I tell you, my friends, de man who waits for tomorrow to sharpen his ax, am certain to do poor chop-pin'. De man who sets on de fence to wait for a legacy will h'ar his wife scrip in de bottom of de flour barrel every day in de week. De man who lets himself believe dat de world owes himself a libb' am gwine to eat some mighty poo' fodder afore he dies. De world doesn't owe nobody nuffin'. We am put here to sot an' starve or kit up in dust. Providence won't pay house rent, buy our 'taters or de de cook-stove hot. Let us now purposed to bizness."

A Natural Kindler.

The Hydrocelice gummifera grows in the Falklands, as well as in Tierra del Fuego, and is known as the "gum-plant," because of a viscous substance it exudes in large quantities; this sap is called "balsam," and is used by the natives of the countries where it is found as a poultice for wounds. But its most important property, in their eyes, is the ease with which it can be set on fire, even when green and growing,—a matter of no slight consequence in regions where rain falls five days out of every six. In the Falkland Islands, where there are no trees, the natives often roast their beef over a fire of bones,—the very bones of the animal from which, but the moment before, the meat itself was stripped,—and they use the gum-plant to kindle this fire.—From "The Land of Fire," by Captain Mayne Reid, in St. Nicholas for January.

Notes and Comments.

The Indiana democratic editors had a pleasant and profitable meeting at Indianapolis last week.

There must be a great deal of malaria in Washington. It appears from a report of the Senate contingent fund that the Senate consumed twenty-one hundred grains of quinine pills during the last session, an average of fifty-four grains to each senator.

A more pointed or truthful remark is seldom made by any paper than in the following by the Huntington Democrat: The republican editor that talks about a "Solid South" for the purpose of party success, has very little conception of our institutions, or else is a rebel at heart."

George Hazzard, the crooked Auburn banker, has turned up at Portland, Oregon, as a politician and expects to be a delegate to the national convention. It would surprise nobody for Hazzard to turn up anywhere and in any capacity except the penitentiary. The fellow used to live and married an excellent woman in this city.—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

The Michigan City Dispatch has this to say of a disgustingly prevalent habit:

We understand that the habit of chewing gum is quite prevalent among a certain class of young people, particularly the pupils in schools. The habit is not a criminal one by any means, but it is certainly a nasty one, and it would not, we think, be much indulged in, if the people who chew gum, knew what vile stuff it is made of. When it comes, wrapped in tissue paper it looks clean and innocent enough, but its origin is of filth, the most filthy. It is made from the refuse of petroleum, and the fats extracted from dead dogs, dead cats, dead rats, and other dead animals. Now, you pretty school girl, with dimpled cheek and rosy lips, pull out your stick of gum; slyly put a piece into your mouth, and chew away on the dainty morsel. Chaw!

Wheat, 98c.; corn, 62c.; dressed pork, $6.15; butter, 18c.; eggs, 30c.

Good seasoned wood, stove length, is in demand in this market at $1.50 per cord.

John Bollinger has sold his village property to Samuel Shook, consideration $175. Mr. Bollinger will remove to Wawaka.

It is reported that the young orange groves and pineapples along the gulf coast of Florida have been seriously damaged by the frost.

Another theater destroyed by fire. The magnificent Opera House at Meadville, Pa., valued at half a million dollars, was burned on Tuesday morning.

Polus N. Calkin had his leg broken above the knee, on Tuesday, by falling out of a sleigh while returning home from Auburn.

A number of our citizens took advantage of the present fine sleighing by visiting Uncle George McMillen's residence, three miles out of town, on Tuesday evening, and they had a pleasant time.

Oully, the sad-eyed clerk at the railroad station, is devoting his leisure moments to literary work, and like Silas Wegg occasionally drops into poetry. He is just now engaged on an essay entitled, "What I Know About the Original Grecian Band."

Another horror by the ravages of fire, almost equal to the Milwaukee holocaust of last winter, occurred at Bellville, Illinois, Sunday night, by the burning of the Convent of the Immaculate Conception. The fire started in the rear of the third story which was used as a dormitory, and spread with rapidity through the building. There were sixty young girls pupils in the institution and ten sisters. The building was unprovided with fire escapes or ladders and those in the upper rooms were compelled to jump to the pavement below, a distance of forty feet. The total of known deaths is twenty-seven, twenty-two of which are pupils and five sisters.

A terrible railway accident occurred near Toronto, Canada, on the Great Western Division of the Grand Trunk, on the morning of the 2nd. A suburban train, drawn by a dummy engine, having aboard about sixty passengers, chiefly employed at the Boland Iron Works, at Humber, residing in the city, going to their work, collided with a freight train on rounding a sharp curve just before reaching the bolt works. The freight engine knocked the dummy clean thro' the passenger car, crushing the unfortunate passengers in every direction and pinning them to the floor. The boiler of the dummy exploded and steam and boiling water carried death and terrible injuries to the mangled and bleeding men, and then fire broke out and completed the slokening work of destruction. Fourteen were killed instantly; seven have died in the hospital, and two others, of three seriously injured, have lately died. The engineer of the dummy after revering the engine, with his fireman, jumped for life. The engineer of the freight train when he saw a collision was inevitable, sprang from the engine, but Thomas, the fireman, was instantly killed. The scenes at the wreck were heartrending beyond description.

TUESDAY JAN. 15, 1884.

Payne Nominated for Senator.

After a fierce fight, in which the Pendleton boomers were the aggressors, Henry B. Payne, of Cleveland, was nominated for Senator on the first ballot at the caucus Tuesday evening. The nomination is conceded to be a wise one, as it removes all danger of the democracy being committed to the fallacies of free trade, unites the party and it will march solidly to victory. At home the news was received by the firing of a salute, and congratulatory messages from prominent democrats all over the country. Pendleton takes his defeat philosophically, though he is bitterly disappointed, as he made a hard fight to succeed himself in the United States Senate. Following is the result of the ballot from the Chicago Times' Columbus special:

Columbus, O., Jan. 8.—[Special].—The democratic caucus to night resulted in a walk-over for Payne as against the field on the first ballot. All of the eighty-two democrats were present in the joint caucus at 8 o'clock P. M. After spending two hours in fighting over rules, they got down to work. Many resolutions were adopted the most important ones being those for all matters to be presented and put to vote without debate, and for a secret ballot. There was great excitement about the capital. The fight was kept up till the vote was taken, resulting: Henry B. Payne, 48; Durbin Ward, 17; G. H. Pendleton, 15; G. W. Geddes, 1; H. L. Booth, 1; necessary to a choice, 43. Mr. Payne thus had a majority of 14 over all, and Pendleton, who was running for a second term, was beaten 69 to 15, as the Ward and other votes would have gone to Payne on a second ballot, but there were no changes made.

[From the Garrett Edition.]

Our neighbor, the Herald, sent out its annual New Year's greeting.

A restaurant has been opened in the new Singler building by J. H. Hall.

Mine host Ocker, of the DeKalb, is on the mend after a spell of sickness.

Naturally the people are improving the snow, and delighting parties are all the go.

John Stouer is a bad one. He is in limbo at Auburn for swindling Grangers with a mild patent paint mixture.

Our thanks are due General Passenger Agents C. M. Lord, of the B. & O. railway, and Geo. B. Campbell, of the Ft. W., C. & L. railway, for annual editorial courtesies.

Commissioner Thomas was a guest of his friend H. M. Bicknell on Christmas day, a favorable sign that he is improving in health.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Quinn, of Chicago, are visiting Mr. C. G. Nuter and family, and the other evening Mrs. Nuter entertained a number of invited guests at a dinner party.

The Mamm and Odd Fellows held public installations last week, and the exercises were concluded with supper, a number of invited guests participating in the festivities.

There is still no lack of interest in the revival meetings. The revivalists, Miss Jennie Smith and Miss Adelle Sherman, have returned to the East.

The recent terrible tragedy at Jackson, Mich., has been reopened by the suicide of Mrs. David Hulcomb, the eldest sister of Jacob B. Crouch. She has been nearly insane since the slaughter of her father and sister, and finally destroyed herself with poison. The annual ball of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers came off at Hunsel's hall on New Year's evening. About sixty couple took supper at the DeKalb, and the affair was a grand success.

Speaking of a letter of an Eastern prohibitionist, the Kansas City (Mo.) Journal, a republican paper, says: "We don't know how it is in Maine and Vermont, but if he wants to see hundreds of barn visits open and liquor selling in full blast let him visit a few towns in Kansas and Iowa."

There was a serious shooting affray at Goheen last week, between the night watchman of Bradford's chair factory and a lot of toughs of the town. One of the hoodlums was seriously and perhaps fatally wounded.

A Lowell (Mass.) dispatch says that Arthur Stafford, who claimed to be the son of an English Earl and who has been hunting in Maine, was found in the woods of that State near Lake Umbagog the other day in the firm embrace of a bear, both frozen stiff. A knife was sticking in the shoulders of the animal. Stafford's affianced heard the story and lost her reason.

Liquor Banned: A sensation was caused at Albion the latter part of last week by the arrest of Whit White and Alex. Windmeyer, charged with complicity in the train wrecking at Cromwell. It seems that the detectives have been carefully working up the case and last Monday swore out the necessary papers for the arrest. At the preliminary trial Monday the parties were released upon a technical point but were immediately rearrested. It is certainly a fact that Ryan had help in his horrible deed and it will not be the fault of the B. & O. R. R. if they are not found and convicted.

Downward, turn downward
The lamp shining bright;
Turn it down lower,
Just for to-night,

Downward, turn downward,
The wick with a will,
Or some one will know
You're kissing me, Bill!

Villard the balloon railway magnate of the Northern Pacific is badly "busted." He has resigned the presidency of the road and made an assignment of his property, after "blowing in" the fortunes of a dozen stockholders. It is alleged that Villard neatly feathered his own nest by depositing with his wife half a million of government four per cent. bonds.

The Park Theater at Cleveland, Ohio, burned on Saturday morning last. Loss on building from $175,000 to $200,000, while stock companies and the attaches lose largely in wardrobe and scenery. Insurance on building $100,000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an explosion of gas from a leaking pipe, though it is strongly suspected that the fire was the work of an incendiary, and the matter is being investigated.

Friday and Saturday, 4th and 5th, will go on record as the coldest for years. The mercury here went down to 18 and 24°. At Cincinnati on Saturday it went still lower. The News Journal says:

Over the whole continent north of the cotton states the day broke intense cold, the mercury being down in many places to almost freezing point—40°. At the Cincinnati Observatory, on Mt. Lookout, an excellent instrument showed 29° below zero, and all over the city thermometers marked in the vicinity of 20 below.

A Chicago dispatch dated the 4th says, the weather is the most severe of the season, the thermometer recording 20° below zero. All trains are late, and much suffering has resulted. A train of live stock has been snowed in on the Wabash road, eight miles southeast of the city, on the prairie, since Tuesday. A rescuing party worked all day, and succeeded in bringing away the train men, leaving the 800 suffering animals to perish. Of twenty cars of live stock all were cattle save two or three cars of hogs. Some cattle were found frozen; others partly frozen were immediately killed, but the exact number thus killed was not ascertained. The remainder of the cattle were fed and cared for by the railroad company, who are making every effort to bring them through.

Congress has not fairly got to work since the holidays. Both Houses met Monday. Beyond a perfect avalanche of new bills nothing of importance was done in the House. The Senate confirmed some nominations of Judges, Postmasters and foreign consuls.

Better Haul in His Sign.

The "divine" who is in the habit of preaching from the pulpit death and damnation to saloon-keepers and the liquor traffic generally, when out of town, would appear more consistent if he would haul in his sign. Saloonists at least pay a license for the privilege of selling whisky. It strikes us that there is a good deal of brazen hypocrisy about this business. If a druggist wants to run a saloon let him take out the necessary license.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: In many respects Mr. Payne's Columbus speech was a model. It says a great deal, but says it tersely and pointedly, so as not to fill up an entire paper, to the weariness of the reader. The opening portions of the speech show how happy were the democrats in their selection of a senatorial candidate, in this instance.

The substance of Mr. Payne's remarks has to do with civil service reform and the tariff. We are glad to say that our position on these subjects are in harmony with his. Referring to the long hold of the republican party upon the government and all its accessories—twenty-three years—he says: "During this period money by the thousand millions has been collected and disbursed, and the books kept by these partisan agents, furnishing an opportunity and a temptation for speculation, fraud and concealment to which I should dread to expose even the iron-clad integrity of Democrats. Inevitably, corruption and great abuses have crept in and have been covered up; favoritism, protection, nepotism, imbecility and senility have obtained secure lodgment; demoralization has followed, and the public believe that a fetid mass exists, permeated with rottenness and gangrene." Now, it does not require that a candid observer should be an enemy of the Republican party to recognize the truth of this: it is self-evident. The remedy proposed by the Speaker is the election of a Democratic President, followed by a thorough house cleaning from cellar to garret. It may be said that this is the remedy that a Democrat naturally would suggest; and yet is there any other? Few intelligent citizens deny that a change is needed in the administration of public affairs; and is any change practicable except from the Republican to the Democratic party?

As Mr. Payne says, "unless unwisdom and madness from the gods are permitted to block the way" we shall elect a Democratic President the present year. In that way public opinion would seek a logical expression; and it certainly seems inevitable. Mr. Payne's tariff views are the same as those expressed by him at the Jackson banquet last year. He occupies a conservative middle ground, though leaning to a policy that will "encourage" our national industries. Taking the state of Ohio as an illustration he shows how manufactures have gradually supplanted agriculture as the leading interest of the state. Twenty thousand manufacturing and mechanical industries backed by two hundred millions of capital, and one hundred and sixty thousand employes, are the elements of this great "asset" of the state, which the "Ohio Platform" was designed to protect. Mr. Payne declares it as his deliberate conviction that by adhering to this platform the Democrats will carry the state both at the October and November elections. We believe he is right; yet there are irresponsible tariff tinkers who would imperil all for the advancement of—they scarcely know what. In conclusion the speaker expressed himself in favor of accepting the word "encourage" as the keynote of the national policy upon all matters of material concern—our agricultural interests, coast defenses, river and harbor improvements, the restoration of the mercantile marine, our commercial relations with Mexico and Central and South America, &c. Few public men can express so much in so few words. Mr. Payne has this art to perfection, and it augurs well for his usefulness in the Senate.

—New York World: Now comes Senator Payne's address to the Ohio General Assembly and all who read it in our columns today will acknowledge the wisdom of the choice the state has made. In a few plain, incisive words the Senator-elect brushes away the fallacy that revenue reform means free trade and places the Democracy on its true principles of honest administration—honest taxation and honest protection for home industries.

Let the Democrats in Congress lay up in their hearts these words of wisdom: "We ask no high rates or special protection that favors monopolies but we ask and demand stability and exemption from agitation."

Let them remember that these words come from the Democratic leader just elected by the people in Ohio; that they represent the sentiments of the true Democratic leaders in New York and that in the presidential election the great question will be how to carry New York and Ohio and not how to carry Kentucky and Texas, which are in any event steadily, faithfully, reliably Democratic.

Notes and Comments.

Mr. Sinclair, of East Saginaw, Mich. visited Com. Urie one day last week.

The delinquent tax list of DeKalb county is growing beautifully less every year, and for 1883 is reduced to a small compass.

The Lake Shore last year earned $19,184,884; expended $18,716,240, including $3,957,320 in dividends, and has a surplus for the year of $468,644.89.

The Fort Wayne saloon-keepers and liquor dealers have started a reformatory movement by closing their doors on Sunday and will abandon the sale of liquor on that day. They are determined that others shall follow suit, and under the auspices of the liquor dealer's association will proceed to prosecute all who transact business on Sunday.

What has become of the Butler Review and the Albion Democrat, a brace of enterprising journals, whose editors deserted the late republican party and joined the ranks of the democracy, thereby dropping into a soft snaf? We haven't seen these papers for a dog's age. Are they dead?

Ex-Governor Foster received two votes for United States Senator and Blank received the rest of the republican votes. Mr. Foster's case is therefore not as bad as it might be. He is still considered by his party as being two votes better than nobody.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A protracted meeting, under the leadership of Rev. J. S. Tedrow, of Waterloo, pastor of the U. B. Church, was commenced last week. The meetings were continued for several evenings and a large number were in attendance, but for some reason there was not the same religious awakening as on former occasions, although Rev. Tedrow is highly commended for his jealous efforts in the christian cause.

Last week two men found a wagon load of snakes in a coal mine near Warsaw, Ohio. Both of the men solemnly promised not to touch another drop.—New Orleans Picayune.

Wonder if the present County Auditor really believes that all of the democracy of the county is concentrated in his system? Little Tommy T. will awake some fine morning to discover that he is trying to spread himself over more territory than he can "kiver" without busting his suspender buttons.

A Chinaman came into the ladie's cabin on the ferry-boat, and took a seat beside an Irish market woman. He seemed to want to make himself agreeable, and, rubbing his hands, remarked: "Belly cold." The woman looked at him with an air of contempt, and replied: "If you'd put your shirt inside your pants your belly wouldn't be cowlid, you heathen blagard!"

The Assembly at Island Park, Rome City, next year, will be a big affair. The following features are promised:

The Assembly will open July 15 and close July 29.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated in grand style.

The Music college will open July 1 and continue to July 29.

There will be a school of languages.

Prof. C. C. Case will be chorus director. Mrs. C. C. Case and Mrs. C. C. Williams will be the organists.

Mrs. M. H. Ross, of Chicago, and Miss Ida Cunningham will have charge of the Kindergarten.

National day will be a new departure.

The Grand Army of the Republic will be out in force and there will be a grand concert of war songs and a camp fire.

There will be a series of the finest spectacular entertainments ever given at Island Park.

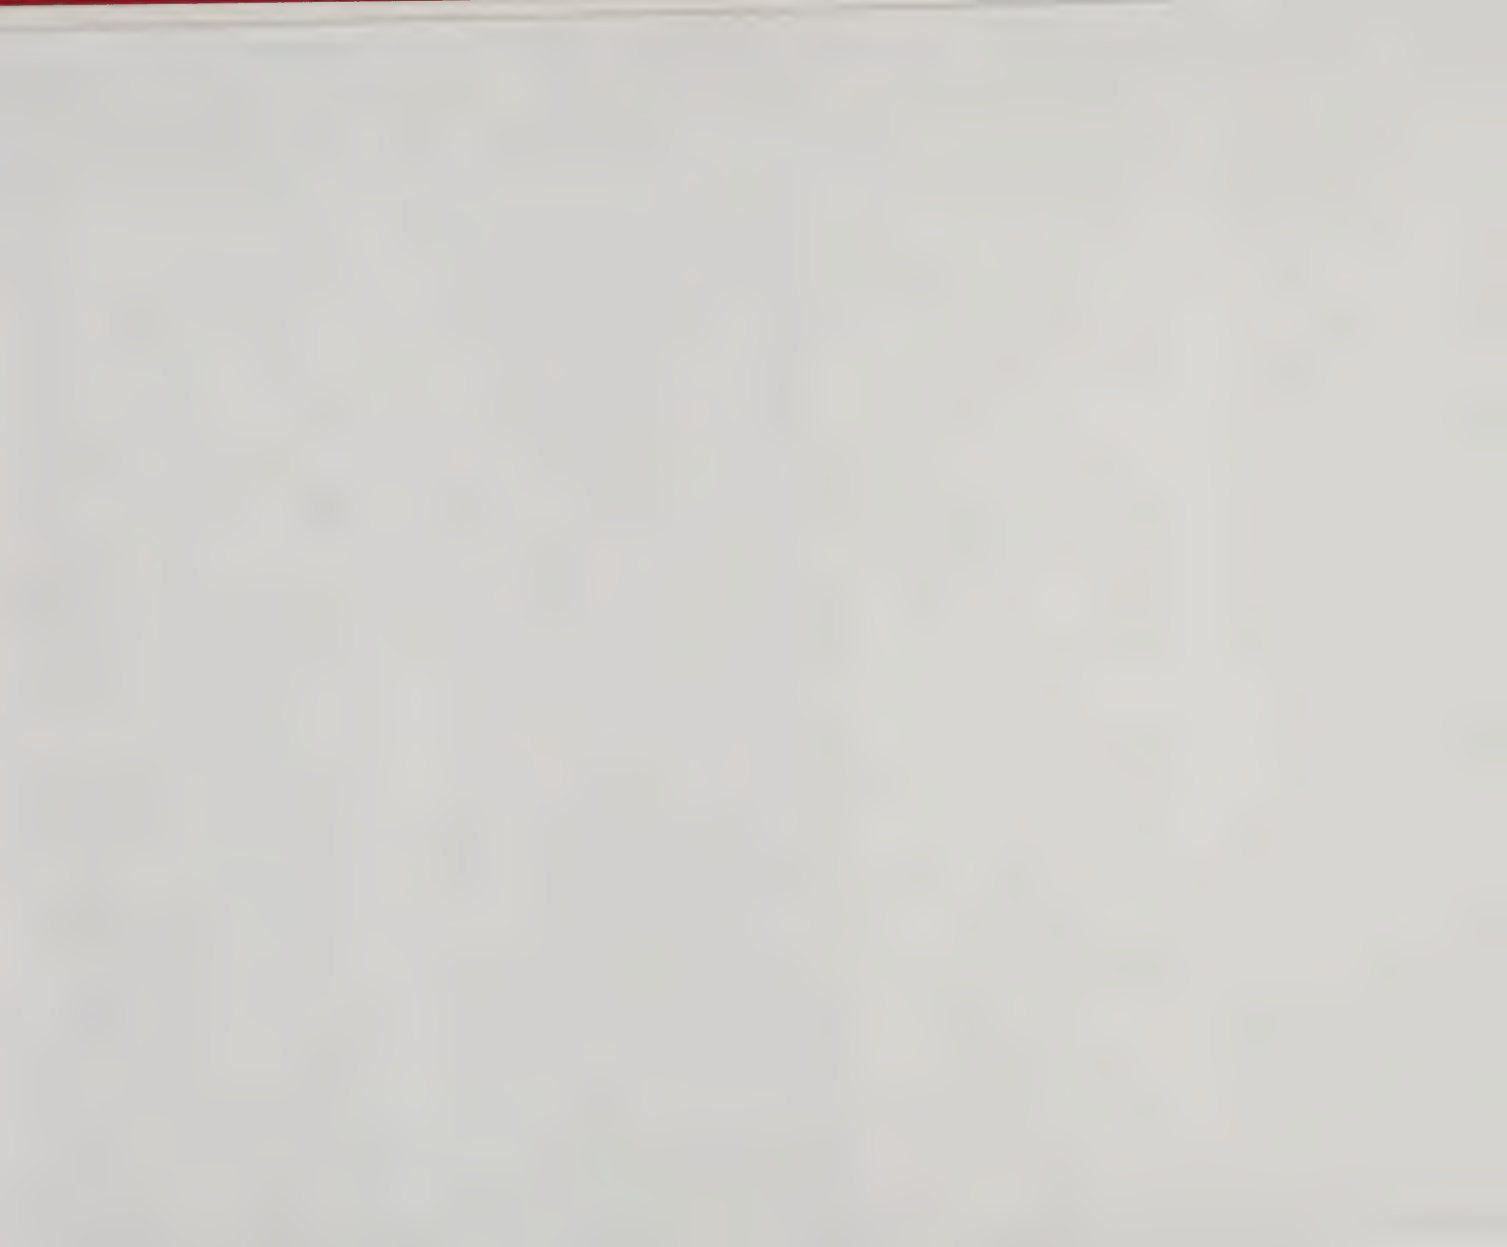

A magnificent art exposition is in contemplation.

The Sunday school normal class will be a special feature.

There will be a great educational assembly.

There will be a summer school of science.

That Wallace Bruce will give a series of entertaining lectures on "English Literature."

Do the Meek Inherit the Earth?

The eagle plucks the raven,
And the raven plucks the jay
To whose voracious craving
The cricket falls a prey.

The big fish dines at leisure (Upon the smaller fry,
And the minor cats with pleasure
The poor, unconscious fly.

The miser skins his neighbor,
And the neighbor still in the poor.
And the poor man doomed to labor
Spurns the beggar from his door.

And thus the world is preying,
The strong upon the weak,
Despite the precious saying,
"The earth is for the meek."

"Prisoner," said his Honor as James Jordan walked forth, "this warrant charges you with disturbing the peace."

"That's a great surprise to me, sir," was the answer.

"Can't you remember of having any difficulty last evening?"

"Not a one, sir."

"Vhell, I like to explain aboudt dot!" said a voice from over the ropes, and a man with a black eye and a badly battered nose advanced to the desk.

"Are you the complaining witness?"

"I vvas, Bhudge."

"Well, go ahead."

"Vhell, I vvas in dis country aboudt seven yare, and I never see such tings before. Last night I vvas in mein saloon when dis man vvas in mit a frozen cabbage in his hand."

"Yes, but it was a joke, you know," added the prisoner.

"I thought he'd take it all in fun, your Honor, and I'm sorry that anything unpleasant occurred. I'll make it all right with you, Carl."

"You must make it all right with me, first," replied the court. "Have you got $6 about you?"

"Sorry, but I haven't."

"Then you are going up for thirty days."

"I am! Why, that borders on the outrageous!"

"You'll border on six months if you don't go slow! You can take a seat in the corridor until the omnibus goes."

"Vhell, dot helps my nose petter as arnica, and I feel goot all ofer," remarked the witness, and he rubbed his hands all the way into the street.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer]

The trial of young Nutt for killing the murderer of his father and defamer of his sister, began at Pittsburgh the 14th. Naturally an intense interest is excited, and crowds attended. The case is fresh in the minds of our readers. Dukes professed to have been criminally intimate with Captain Nutt's young daughter, and wrote him a number of infamous letters on the subject. These led to an interview and a collision between the men which resulted in the fatal shooting of Nutt, who was armed only with a cane, and who, at the time of the shooting, was standing some distance from Dukes. The trial and amazing "acquittal" of the latter followed. It might have been supposed that Dukes would rid the community of his presence as the very least he could do; but not so. He settled down brazenly in his old haunts, and even insulted the son of his victim on several occasions. Finally human nature could endure no longer, and the libertine was killed. It is not well to prejudge a case; but we presume the belief that the trial can only end in the defendant's acquittal is universal. The Hon. D. W. Voorhees is one of the counsel for Nutt, and he will have a fine field for his eloquence. Emotional insanity is the plea. Certainly a long array of precedents hold out hope to the prisoner.

THE LAW

Governing Township Elections.

The Auditor of the State in response to the frequent inquiries which are being received in relation to the correct interpretation of the law providing for the officers to be elected at the forthcoming township election, has prepared a circular letter giving the opinions of Attorney General Baldwin and Hurd in regard to the matter, as follows:

First—According to the provisions of section 100 (acts 1881, p. 642) of the general tax law, township assessors were to be elected at the general election in 1882, and every four years thereafter. This act was approved March 29, 1881. Standing alone, this act would render it necessary to have elected assessors at the general November election of the present year. Such is the meaning of the term "general election" as therein employed. The recent constitutional amendment provided that the legislature may fix any other time at which township elections shall be held. In accordance with the provisions of this amendment, the legislature passed Section 67 of the general election law (acts 1881, p. 695), providing that on the first Monday of April, 1882, and every second year thereafter, there should be an election for the purpose of electing justices of the peace, township trustees, assessors, constables and such other officers for the township as may be provided by law. This act was approved April 21, 1881. Section 67 being the last act in time of passage, repeals so much of section 100 as is consistent with its provisions. Therefore, assessors must be elected at the April election, 1882. Section 67 does not say how long they must serve, but section 106 provides they shall serve four years. This provision of the latter section is not repealed by section 67. At the best, it could only be claimed to be repealed by implication. Such a repeal is not favored. It seems it follows that assessors will hold their offices four years from the date of their election and until their successors are elected and qualified. The person elected assessor will be elected to his office and enter upon the duties of his office at the expiration of ten days from the day of such election.

Second—The offices of justice of the peace are constitutional officers of four years, and where such offices will become vacant before the April election, 1881, there must be persons elected to fill such vacancies, who will hold their offices four years, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

Third—Township trustees must be elected at the coming April election for every township in the state, because the term of office of every one of such trustees will expire before the next general township election, 1884. The trustees are, therefore, to be elected in next April.

Fourth—A person is not eligible to such office more than four years in any period of six years. (Sp. acts 1877, p. 79). Those who are now serving out their first term can be re-elected; those who are serving out their second term cannot be re-elected.

"Now, wouldn't you call me good-looking?" asked an uptown swell of his companion at a ball. "I certainly should—all except one feature," answered she. "Which is that?" he asked. She eyed him over quizzically for a moment and then frankly replied, "Your cheek!"—Commercial Advertiser.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

ST. NICHOLAS

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, something, widely wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. Nicholas has reached a higher position, and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The connection to the wide resources in art and letters communicated by St. NICHOLAS was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge,
Capt. Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen,
Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton,
Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller,
Elizabeth Stewart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney,

PROGRAMME FOR 1883-'84.

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third number under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, THE CENTURY brings a decided gain in interest. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A New Novel by George W. Cable, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"Life in the Thirteen Colonies," by EDWARD EGGLESTON, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country. Three Stories by Henry James, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

The New Astronomy, astronomical articles, by Prof. S. P. LANGLEY, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A Novella by H. H. Boyesen, author of "Gunnar," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

The New Era in American Architecture, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A Novella by Robert Grant, author of "Confessions of a Fervidous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

The Broad-winners, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

Christianity and Wealth, with other essays, by cut, etc. The Christian League of Connecticut, in the present phase of Christian morals.

Coasting About the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated.

Stories from the Illiad, Hawthorne, GEORGE ELIOT, and CAULFIELD, with authentic drawings. On the Track of Ulysses, the record of a yacht-cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"Garibaldi in England,"—an extract from his private journal kept during a trip to Europe in 1867.

"The Glorified Quakers," by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "New Arabian Nights."

Barometers and others, a beautifully illustrated French novellet, ALPHONSE DAUDET, articles on art and architecture, by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER and short stories by the leading writers, essays on time, subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription price, $1.00 a year; single numbers sold every-where at 25 cents. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, check, or draft.

Special Offers.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under THE CENTURY, we make the following special offers:

New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four numbers, unbound, for $8.00. Regular price for the three years, $12.00.

Or, if preferred, a subscription and the twenty-four numbers BOUND in extra ELEGANT VOLUMES will be furnished for $10. Regular price, $18.

The scientists are still disputing about the cause or causes of the red sunsets and a large number of theories have been put forth, none of which seem to perfectly account for the phenomena. "We have ceased to believe," says the New York Tribune, "that red sunset prognosticate war, or pestilence, or the death of great men, or the use or downfall of dynasties, but we know no more than our ancestors did about the real cause of these occurrences. Our scientists suggest all manner of explanations, but none of them are more than conjectures, and some of them lack the merit even of plausibility, and so we flounder amid theories of meteoric dust, cosmic dust, volcanic dust, cometary bodies, vapor, and so forth, but we do not know the origin of the red sunsets we admire, and perhaps the greatest advance in this direction of which we can boast, lies in the fact that we are no longer afraid of unusual phenomena, and have learned that strange thing may happen without portending either good or evil to the human race."

Speaking of the inauguration of Governor elect Hoody, at Columbus, O., on the 15th, the Plain Dealer says: "The inauguration of Governor elect Hoody was befitting the character of the man and of the party he represents—quiet and unostentatious. The new Governor's address, which is given elsewhere, is a comprehensive and thoughtful effort, and will be read with much interest. The following passage, especially, will attract attention. "No reform is in my judgment, more desirable than to find some common ground upon which conservative men of all parties may stand in opposition alike to prohibition and to free trade in liquor which shall furnish adequate legal restraint, not of temperate but of intemperate drinking, and not unduly interfere with the right of individual liberty and the duty of self-control. Perhaps no measure can be devised that will fully accomplish this result. That which comes nearest is, I am persuaded, the system of license with graduated taxation"—which may be brought about by a constitutional amendment. He would harmonize the present Scott law with this idea.

Notes and Comments.

One hundred and thirty-five lynchings in the United States last year. The "Judge" must have crowded the docket.

Congress will not tamper with the tariff this winter, deeming that agitation of the subject would only divide the democracy, and at the same time not materially benefit the country.

Jack Carens elevated his hat over the choice of Henry B. Payne as the new Senator from Ohio, and says this move will keep the Buckeye state in the democratic line in October and November without a doubt.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Some newspapers in which lunacy seems to have become chronic are "mentioning" Senator Pendleton for the Presidency. We must protest against this invasion of the tomb.

Hon. Henry B. Payne was chosen U. S. Senator last Wednesday noon, by a unanimous democratic vote of 22 by the Ohio Legislature. The result was received with applause from the democratic side of the House.

As an item of local interest, elsewhere we publish an exhibit of the business transacted at Corunna station during the past fiscal year, ending Jan. 20, 1884, for which we are indebted to Mr. J. M. Carens, the railroad company's agent at this place.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel of Thursday last, reports the partial destruction by fire of the village of Monroeville, fourteen miles northeast of that city. The fire broke out in a meat market and burned up the business part of the town before the flames were subdued.

Some people carry enough cheek to turn aside a cannon ball. We insist that any man who deals out whisky and yet persists in preaching the gospel and temperance is a colossal humbug and should be fired. Let him put up the shutters or padlock his mouth. The church that hopes to succeed in reclaiming the wayward and building up the christian religion cannot afford to foster such hypocrisy.

A SAD SEQUEL

To a Father's Travels of Thousands of Miles After an Erring Daughter.

From the Denver News.

Overlooking the stage road leading from Rockwood, a station on the Denver & Rio Grande Railway, to Rico and nearly midway between these points, are several strange formations, the most remarkable of which rises like an immense battlement, with its towers and bastions perfectly defined against the sky thousands of feet above the surrounding country. This well known landmark is known as Castle Rock, and forms a portion of some of the grandest and most romantic scenery to be found in Colorado. At the foot of the rock, which rises as an immense wall, is a level plain perhaps a mile in width and several in length, upon which have been located several ranches. In the east the beautiful Cascade Mountains raise their ambitious heads above the valley, to be eclipsed by the higher Needles beyond, and the Monarch Engineer Mountain. The road winds for quite a distance through this beautiful valley, and located upon it, almost within the shadow of the monster battlement, is Castle Rock Station, a place where the stage formerly stopped for meals and a change of horses.

Late one afternoon in the summer of 1881, as the sun was sinking behind the mighty columns of the noble monument, the stage from the South drove up to the door with its accustomed bustle and flourish, and there alighted a woman, young and beautiful, accompanied by a man scarcely yet in the prime of life, dark and handsome, but with an expression sinister and treacherous to the observer. The pair, after ordering supper, started for a walk down the road toward a heavy growth of timber, and notwithstanding the driver of the stage waited for them a considerable time, he was finally compelled to drive off without them, and although the landlord watched and searched for them until long in the night, they did not return, and in fact were never seen afterward.

About two weeks ago an old white haired gentleman rode to the half hostelry and half store which has taken the place of the old stage station, which however, is carried on by the same proprietor, and, dismounting, seated himself upon the bench outside the door. After a number of inquiries of a general character as to the surrounding country, he said his name was Charles W. Morgan, of Chicago, and told a sorrowful story of a willful daughter, the social pet of a large circle, whose every wish was gratified before expressed, and whose will was law to her dotting parents. Yet the serpent entered the happy family and left the slimy taint of his presence for all time. The daughter by some means became infatuated with an actor whom she had seen at the play, and one morning her room was found deserted and she had fed, leaving no trace save a few pitiful words in a note saying: "Father, I could not help it. I have gone with him. Forgive and forget me."

To describe the consternation of the grief stricken family were beyond the power of words. "I would rather she were dead," moaned the heart broken father. However, to do something, although that something produced no result, was better than to suffer at home the dread uncertainty as to his darling's fate, he made preparations for a journey, and following the clue given by the movements of the company in which the destroyer had played, the father started west, and upon reaching San Francisco found the company there, but learned that the man of whom he was in search had left them the week previous, saying that he was going to Australia. Taking the next steamer, after several weeks he landed at Melbourne, and after a fruitless search there, visited in turn several other prominent cities. He was taken ill at Sydney, where he lay for months in a hospital a raving maniac. After his case had been given up as hopeless, he one day showed signs of recovery, and in a few weeks left the hospital the wreck of his former self, but with the purpose of ascertaining the fate of his erring daughter burning as brightly within him as ever. Again embarking, he began the return voyage. Upon reaching San Francisco he obtained what he thought was another clue, and started at once for Denver.

After the old gentleman had concluded his narrative a strange thing occurred. From the description of the runaways which he had given in his narrative, the proprietor recognized the couple who had left the stage at his door two years previously and had never returned.

The excitement of Mr. Morgan at learning this was intense, and he begged and prayed his informant to act as his guide in the direction the missing ones had taken. Yielding to his solicitations the boat at the station accompanied him down the road to a point about one half mile distant, where a trail diverged through the thick timbers. Mile after mile was traversed until, at a point about seven miles from the station, the road crosses the romantic Cascade Creek, with a wealth of timber fringing its beautiful miniature falls like an emerald frame to its living, ever changing picture. While crossing the stream on a rude bridge, a white object just below the eddies of one of the fairy cascades, from which the stream and, in fact the neighboring mountains derive their name, attracted the attention of both gentlemen at once. Reaching the other side, and stepping cautiously from rock to rock, they discovered, lying partially out of the water and behind a large rock against which it had lodged, the ghastly skeleton of a woman.

Horror stricken, they approached still more closely and found clinging to some portions of clothing, the threads of what had become so rotten by constant exposure to air and water that they fell to pieces at the touch. Attracted by a shining substance near by, an examination proved it to be a fine gold chain, to which was attached a small lady's watch. With trembling hands Mr. Morgan touched the spring of the case, and without difficulty deciphered the inscription upon the inside: "To Lela, from her loving father, Christmas, 1880." The blow was a terrible one, but all doubt as to the fate of his daughter was at an end. Obtaining the assistance of a passing burr train the poor remains of what was once a beautiful mortality were gathered carefully, and taken back to the station, a rude box prepared, and the remains deposited in a rude grave near the edge of the forest in the midst of a bank of columbines, fit emblem of the transcendent beauty of the frail an erring form which once endowed the crumbling dust beneath with life and motion.

LITERARY NOTE.

THE CONTINENT prints a pleasant poem on "Lela George," by Don Eick, illustrated with a striking beautiful drawing by W. Hamilton Gibson, engraved by W. H. Morse. The current number contains an account of "The Canadian Capital" by Macdonald Oxley, which, with its accompanying illustrations, is of interest just now when the winter festivities of our northern cousins are attracting attention to the region where ice and snow are made to put on a holiday aspect. The issue of THE CONTINENT now in press contains some personal reminiscences of "The Resurrection of Italy in 1848," the author of "The Glory and Shame of England," who was U. S. Consul at Genoa at the time of the revolution in that year. C. F. Thwing contributes to the same number a paper on "The Run For City Politics." An early issue of THE CONTINENT will contain an article on Richard Doyle, a recently deceased caricaturist of Punch, by E. Knauth, with many examples of his work.

THE OLDEST MAGAZINE IN AMERICA.—It is nearly fifty-five years since the first issue of the old American magazine appeared; and that it has survived in that period the disastrous influences of panics, and latterly the immense competition magazine literature, is a striking illustration of the theory that "the fittest survives." It would be difficult to find throughout our broad land a village hamlet so small that some therein do not remember Godey's Lady's Book. Gray-haired men and men remember it as an entertainer when their hearts were young, and young people associate with their first introduction to stories of romance. And the rising generation find it as pure and interesting as did its parents, ay, as its grandparents in days long past. It speaks well for it and our people, that, notwithstanding the enormous effort made by the publishers of the numerous "pet dreadfuls," it finds such a large patronage; and believing that some of our readers would like to retrace their acquaintance with the old magazine (that the way is as bright and interesting as any I have), we have made an arrangement with publishers by which we can offer, to any desirous subscribers, and sending their subscriptions thus, to furnish with the magazine a beautiful engraving, for framing, of the cutest little I ever seen.

The price of the magazine, and a full size cut per patron each month, is $2.00 a year. We supply the paper and Godey's Lady's Book year for $2.50.

A VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY IN THE NUTT CASE

Returned by the Jury This Morning—How the Verdict Was Received in Court.

Special to the Plain Dealer.

PITTSBURGH, January 22.—"Not guilty." So the jury in the Nutt case rendered their verdict a few minutes ago. The jury came in at nine o'clock this morning and reported that they had agreed upon a verdict. The court room was crowded as densely as human beings could crowd it. Outside another large crowd stood waiting. Young James Nutt sat at the table with his counsel. His face was pale but he manifested no anxiety. His sister, Miss Lizzie Nutt, the girl so basely slandered by Dukes and whose wrongs and his father's murder young Nutt so well avenged, sat beside him at the table. There was a rush of excitement as the jury filed in and took their places and then the court room was still as death.

"Have you a verdict, gentlemen?" asked the Court.

"We have, your Honor," said the foreman.

"What is your verdict in this case of the state of Pennsylvania against James Nutt, charged with murder in the first degree?"

"Not guilty, your Honor."

There was a scene of wild excitement. Cheer after cheer resounded through the court room, while men and women crowded forward to shake hands with the prisoner and with the jurors. Miss Nutt leaned over and kissed her brother and then fainted from excitement. It was some time before order could be restored.

That the verdict gives universal satisfaction need not be said. It was anticipated and any other verdict would have provoked a dangerous storm of popular indignation.

Report of the Business Done at Corunna Station for the Year 1883.
To the Editor of The Headlight:

CORUNNA, IND., Jan. 21, 1884.

I herewith hand you a statement showing the business done at this station for the year 1883.

There was forwarded from this station, 284 cars of grain with an average of 450 bushels per car, and 86 cars of stock and 66 cars of lumber. Of the amount of grain delivered here during the year, the following business men received out of 8,861 wagon loads the following amounts:

SHIPPER.	POUNDS.
J. W. Helmer, red wheat.....	3,211,645
" " " white ".....	82,940
" " " oats.....	196,700

5,441,875

F. G. Freid, red wheat.....	2,804,895
" " " white ".....	58,620
" " " oats.....	187,240

2,500,255

E. Knauser, red wheat.....	215,480
" " " white ".....	3,070
" " " oats.....	7,080

225,630

Total.....	6,167,260
------------	-----------	--

From the above it will be seen that the total number of pounds of grain of all kinds received, was 6,167,260, and passengers left here during the year to the number of 8,078, with a revenue of $1,620.65, (leaving out the "beats" to Kendallville and return Saturday night), which, with a recapitulation of the business done during the year, shows as follows:

Freight Forwarded.....	8,870,976 lb	$7,858.85
" Received.....	1,120,639 lb	1,682.34
Extra Baggage.....		3.70

Coranna Headlight

BY J. C. LOVELL.

Entered at the Postoffice in Coranna, Indiana, as second-class matter

WEDNESDAY.....JAN. 30, 1884.

We are experiencing another cold wave. The mercury Thursday marked 6° below zero. At Columbus and other points in Ohio on Monday it was the lowest known for ars, marking 22 and 26° below zero.

The steamer city of Columbus, which sailed from Boston for Savannah on the 17th, carrying eighty passengers and a crew of forty-five, struck a rock on the outside of Devil's Bridge, Grey Head, and was wrecked. About one hundred lives were lost.

The Albion Democrat, which we believe is run by a renegade republican or some sort of a political nondescript, exhibits the most indomitable cheek when it undertakes to instruct the democracy of DeKalb how to manage its political affairs in the matter of county organs. The amateur journalist (?) over the line could improve the color of his nose by keeping it out of other people's business.

An indignation meeting was held at Grove City, Illinois, in the school house where Emma Bond was outraged. Resolutions were passed denouncing the Bond verdict. It was resolved that the character of Miss Bond was above reproach. A society was organized for the protection of females. Montgomery and Pettus are at their homes near here. Clementi is supposed to be either in Chicago or Wisconsin.

The Auburn Repuburn is terribly exercised about the future of the democratic party, predicting a "split" in consequence of the little family racket in Ohio over the election of a United States Senator. Our republican brother may just as well bottle his wind for campaign service, as the democracy are united for the fight against the common enemy, and don't you forget it.

[From the Garrett Edition.]

The recent delay of passenger trains was caused by the burning of the trestle at Shuman.

Train Master Britton now has telegraphic communication between the depot and his residence.

The flouring mill at this place has again changed hands. Messrs. Fyke & Gunnell, of Kendallville, being the last purchasers.

Miss Grundy has a few words to say elsewhere respecting the "surprise party" orase in this place, and suggests a remedy. Go it, Miss G., we'll hold your bonnet.

Mr. Searfus, the fireman who was injured Friday last about the head, while jumping from the engine on passenger train No. 1, died of his injuries the next day.

Our enterprising townsman, Mr. W. J. Fiedlerick, will further improve the town in which he has been a considerable factor, by putting up a brick building next spring on his vacant lot.

We have as yet failed to discover that syndicate of "Keyser democrats" who are negotiating for the purchase of the Herald office for an organ, as foreshadowed by the Albion Democrat. We guess the scheme had its origin in the fertile brain of Jim Leah.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HEADLIGHT.

Viewing the Headlight as one of the live papers of our county, full to the brim of good things, it should be found at the fireside of every family in the county, regardless of political or religious tenets.

Now, as our little town is just running over with amusements, such as surprise parties, birthday parties and weddings, and others more serious, such as temperance meetings and revivals, your correspondent, presuming that a word from us would not be amiss, asks to be heard.

The Methodists have just closed a very successful revival doing much good, and adding many to the church. The ladies of the town have organized a "Woman's Christian Union Temperance Society," and meet every Sunday afternoon at the Reading Room. The last, but not the least, is a society of peculiar and striking characteristics, as viewed from the car-marks, a kind of "Mutual-Yon-Scratch-Me-Back-And-Till-Scratch-Your-Back-Ald-Society," or in short, when the birthday of some of the "elect" or the marriage anniversary duly arrives, the friends are duly apprised of that fact, and the machinery is put in motion for a grand "surprise party," the surprise generally consists in finding the "beneficiary" in full evening dress. Another peculiarity, is the activity and disinterestedness manifested by those just happening to have for sale a "valuable and suitable present."

We do not complain nor oppose any social gathering, but the manner and frequency of these so-called surprise parties, compels a lone suffering people to cry "enough."

Why not pay some attention to the poor and needy, want and suffering that is in the town, then we will rise up and call you "blessed."

Yours truly,

MISS GRUNDY.

Gaveen, January 28, 1884.

The republicans are getting ready for another investigation of the Dorsey business in 1880—in your mind!

We are grateful to our friend J. M. Carena, the obliging agent of the L. S. & M. S. railroad, for numerous valued favors.

Charles Delmonico, who died from exposure at the roadside in New Jersey recently, whither he had wandered in a fit of temporary aberration of mind, was the last of three brothers of that name, famous as New York restaurateurs. He left a fortune of $5,000,000.

The brutal murder of little Rose Matthews, in Colorado, was avenged Saturday morning by the prompt lynching of her murderers, who had been found guilty the day before. That one of them was a woman did not impede the direct methods of rugged Western justice.

—Cin. News Journal: New York and Ohio are considering the convict labor system. The world has decreed that the image of God in man shall not be profaned by his enslavement by any other man, although he be black, a savage, and ignorant. The same simple principle, no matter how long it takes, will solve the convict labor question. The state, representing all men acting in their organized capacity, may compel a man to serve for crimes done, but the state must not sell his services to any man, or provide him with any master who is himself but a man.

This year is called "Leap Year," because it has 366 days. It leaps forward a day, as compared with an ordinary year. It so happens that the leap years coincide with the years that are divisible by four, and thus they may be known. Of the years concluding centuries only every fourth is a leap year, beginning with 2,000, which is divided by 40, as is also 2,400, etc. The term bissextile, applied by the Romans to leap year, arose from their reckoning the 6th before the Kalends of March (24th of February) twice, whereas we add a day to the end of the month, making the 29th.

The wheat market holds firm at 95c.

Mrs. Com. Urie went to Tulse Monday, attend the wedding of a lady friend.

Mrs. L. J. Miller, of Auburn, was in town last week visiting her friends.

The U. B. protracted meetings, commenced at this place last week, are still being kept up.

Mrs. McIntyre, wife of Wm. McIntyre, of Selan, died suddenly from an attack of cholera morbus Tuesday morning. The funeral took place Wednesday.

We understand that Rev. J. L. Ramsay is having a series of interesting revival meetings at Hudson. The meetings have been in progress for several weeks and quite a number have been converted.

By the abandonment of train 74, the accommodation that heretofore left this station at about 5 o'clock a. m., it looks as though the railroad company either had "a spite at we uns" or overlooked the necessities of our people. As it is now they have no opportunity of going eastward and return the same day, the only train east being the mail, No. 4, which leaves at 2:22 p. m. This arrangement is hardly a fair deal and we think the company ought to arrange their programme as to provide in a measure for the accommodation of its patrons at this station.

THE FEBRUARY MAGAZINES

Many poets names lend weight and importance to the titles of contents of the February CENTURY, either as subjects, or as contributors to the number.

In the frontispiece is given one of Rembrandt's most effective paintings, engraved with a skill that has seldom been exceeded in the magazine. The painting, "The Head of a Man," is from "The Hiermitage" in St. Petersburg, containing a remarkable but little known art collection, of which Richard Dainton gave a description in the same number.

Singer Saml. also writes his "Impressions of Shakespeare's Lear." In his poem, Mr. Dante are calculated to extend the interest in his sonnets.

The most popular of the two is "The Portraits of Dante," by Miss Sarah Freeman Clarke, which is illustrated, the poet is illustrated, by Miss Christine G. Rossetti; while the illustration of the great poems, Keats' famous engraving of his life—namely probably the full-length portrait of the poet that has ever been published—by Edwin Hood was illustrated

"mystery" of Dickens's undiminished work. The "Hic-n-Huc" department has the benefit of being ennobled by Robert Browning, and other poems by some very popular authors. A full-page portrait of John Ruskin is accompanied by a striking description of his magnificent home, by General Haden George B. McNeillan written at the request of the House of Orleans, "including special reference to his service in the Army of the Potomac (General Lee) during the war against the Confederacy."

We have here the fourth part of his serial story "The Conquest of the New World by the United States," besides we also have the third part of Robert Grant's "A Little Life"; and a short story "A First Love Letter," by J. S. Dale; several illustrated papers not mentioned above, and a variety of editorials on current topics.

The children and friends of Nelson Griffith, living south east of town, arranged a pleasant surprise party for him, which came off on Wednesday evening last, the occasion being in honor of his seventy-fourth birthday. There was a large number present to congratulate "Uncle Nelson" on having passed the allotted milestone of three-score with a well preserved vigorous manhood, and to wish him many returns: The host of the evening was made the recipient of many tokens of regards in the way of valuable presents, and the guests enjoyed a pleasant time.

Parties who are constantly itching to bring libel suits against newspapers should notice a London cable dispatch, published in the morning papers. An English Judge declared that a certain alleged libel was published in the interest of the public, and "if the suit succeeded, the freedom of the press might be seriously affected." A level headed Judge.

A polling of the republican side of the New York Legislature, on the presidency, resulted: Sherman, 1; Blaine, 1; Arthur, 2; Edmunds, 4; no personal choice, 10.

THE BATTLE OF '84.

The political contests, both State and National, of 1884 will be the most important of the country.

Everything points towards Democratic success in the coming Battle for the Presidency, and as an efficient aid to the accomplishment of that Great Purpose, use your best efforts to circulate the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER.

IN POLITICS

the Plain Dealer is and ever will be Democratic. It unfalteringly advocates the principles of that time-honored party which has ever been the friend of the people.

As a family newspaper it is unexcelled, and its Telegraphic, Financial, Commercial, Editorial, Correspondence and Miscellaneous Departments are always complete.

On or about December 1, 1883, the Plain will appear in an entire new dress and the Weekly will be enlarged, affording additional space for reading matter.

It has no superior as a family and political journal, and for 1884 will be furnished subscribers at the following low rates:

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Indianapolis Journal: Ben Butler writes to the Erie (Pa.) Dispatch that he "is out of politics." There is a hen on.

—Philadelphia Times: When General Sherman refuses the presidency Brother John Sherman's mouth waters.

—Atlanta Constitution: The foreign insult to the American hog is regarded by congress as a personal matter, and naturally.

—New York Sun: The strongest republican assembly district in New York City is the one most fully provided with liquor shops.

—Philadelphia Record: A congress that restores to the people 20,000,000 acres of their lands will not have been elected wholly in vain.

—Greenville (Ky.) Echo: Kentucky colicels are made in two ways. You must either get drunk and kill a man or be commissioned by the governor.

—Pittsburg Post: The Northern heart is not in an inflammable condition on Southern questions. It is much more concerned about a reduction of the taxation that is oppressing all interests.

—Philadelphia Press: Keifer is being investigated by a congressional committee. The importance of this lies in the fact that it indicates that there is still enough of Keifer left to hold an inquest on.

—The comment of the Rochester N. Y. Union on the Douglas marriage is that "politics makes strange bedfellows." Fred Douglas the darkey orator married a white woman and all the makes kick.

—Detroit Free Press: You can look for editorials pointing out the fact that young Nutt was clearly a murderer, and should have been found guilty, but public sentiment is with the avenger of a father's death and a —Chicago News: By the time J. Warren Keifer gets through quarreling with the newspapers he will resemble the individual who picked a fuss with a bull pup. He will not be nearly so handsome, but he will know a heap more.

—New York World: Kenneth Raynor, the solicitor of the treasury, has long been known among those acquainted with official life in Washington as a venerable donkey. It required his official decision in regard to the inability of women to earn a living for themselves to convince the country of his incompetency.

—Burlington Hawkeye: Newburn, Tenn., doesn't fine the bar-keeper for keeping open on Sunday, but it fines every man who goes into the bar and takes a drink. There's good legal sense. You don't arrest the farmer for keeping a good horse; you jail the fellow who stole it.

—Cincinnati Enquirer: Ohio's new Senator is in favor of cleansing the Augean stables with a hose and a hickory broom. A tooth-brush has its purposes, he says, but it is out of place when there is work of this kind to be done. Mr. Payne's creed is both patriotic and popular. He preaches to a large congregation and we question if there will be room enough at the mourner's bench for all who want to occupy it.

—Scientific Gazette: It is reported that snow obtained in Scotland, Holland and Germany has been subject to careful microscopical examination, and there has resulted the detection of minute particles of volcanic dust. Scientific men are quoted as saying that in their opinion similar results in various sections of this country would prove almost beyond question the accuracy of the Java theory of the afterglows, which have been noticed in the skies for some months

Notes and Comments.

The Ohio state Journal, the central organ of the Ohio Republican party, prints a long editorial commenting favorably on the election of Hon. Henry B. Payne to the senatorship. It says that on all great public questions "Mr. Payne entertains correct views in the main and will be found ready and able to combat any radical departure from the existing national policy, and will deprecate any merely partisan action for present or local purposes. On questions of general public policy, we feel sure that he will in the main be found to be conservative, patriotic and safe."

The State Journal further says:

When we compare the past record of Mr. Payne with that of the gentleman whom he succeeds, who during many years spent in public service has but echoed the edicts of his party caucuses and conventions, we cannot resist the conclusion that the Democratic party builded better than it knew in the election of Mr. Payne. Aside from all party considerations, and as the election of a Democrat was inevitable, we feel to congratulate the people of the state that a man has been chosen who is a representative of the best element of his party, and in whose hands the public interests will be safe as they can possibly be in the hands of any member of the party to which he belongs.

Congressional funerals are rather expensive affairs, but this would be a matter of no particular pecuniary interest to anybody outside of the immediate friends, were it not the fact that the people pay the bills. The expense of burying the late congressman Haskell, of Kansas, amounted to about $5,500, and among the items in the bill are two for whisky and lunch. It seems that when a president or a congressman dies, the burial of the deceased is made the occasion for a high-toned drunk by those selected to attend the remains.

The comet in the southwestern heavens is now in its brightest phase, for it has reached the nearest point to the earth, being only 60,000,000 miles distant. It is therefore in the most favorable position for observation. The astronomers say that its luster is now four times as great as when it was first visible in 1812. An open glass will bring out its second tail, for the visitor has lately developed a second tail seemingly attached to the first one, like some kind of abnormal excrescence, and can therefore no longer be irreverently compared to an observer again until 1995.

The Cleveland Paper Company, one of the largest paper corporations in the West, which operates several large paper mills, has made an assignment owing to financial embarrassments growing out of the failures of other paper concerns in which it was interested. The assets are reported largely in excess of the liabilities and it is thought the company will be able to resume business in a short time.

Judge Holman is looming up conspicuously as the democratic candidate for Governor of Indiana. Either the nomination of Judge Holman or ex-Governor Gray would insure the success of the democracy next fall.

There is a strong probability that Samuel J. Tilden will be the democratic presidential nominee. If he will consent the nomination undoubtedly will be tendered him, and in that event Ohio and every other doubtful state will wheel into the democratic line.

The Kentucky Legislature has been at a "deadlock" for over two weeks in the effort to elect a United States Senator, and latest advices from the scene of contest do not promise a very speedy settlement of the senatorial muddle.

Little Boss Mahone of Virginia, the republican monumental bloody shirt liar and political trickster of the age, has been invited to resign his seat in the United States Senate for alleged crooked operations.

REKLE OF THE SKATING CARNIVAL.

"The makers meet of flying feet,
 The leap's a slightly one;
 Ah, fruitless task! in vain the mask
 Conceals thee, sprightly one!
 That cunning poke, it still reveals Cheeks dimpled, eyes of brown,
 That dainty figure's ways in grace
 'South Mother Hubbard gown."

"O, Mignonne! sweet Violet!
 Pure Lily, radiant Rose!
 Whose lips can kiss thy fragrance on
 The sweetest flower that blows."

"She rushes like a whirlwind on,
 While heads around her whirl;
 Swift as a willow swallow's wing
 Above the willow's curl;
 Or like a hare, or like a fawn,
 Which cruel hunters start,
 Each polished skate a flashing shaft Which pierces every heart."

—Hopkinsville (Ky.) New Era.

"I wish I were a melody,
 For her to get by heart;
 So I might ever linger there
 And never more depart;
 Or slipper on her dainty foot,
 Or glove upon her hand;
 I'd be the happiest Romeo Alive in all the land."

"Fleet as a vision of the morn,
 Or yacht on New York Bay,
 Or Bluegrass steed of racer breed,
 Or seagull at Cape May,
 On cornet's note her footsteps float,
 Beloved and blessed she goes,
 Alas! how many hearts tonight
 She rubs of their repose!"

"O, Mignonne! O, Violet!
 Pure Lily, radiant Rose!
 Whose lips can kiss new fragrance on
 The sweetest flower that blows!"

(From the Continent.)

HIS SECOND WIFE.

BY CORNELIA PADDOCK.

Author of "The Fate of Madame La Tour."

Over head, the August sun blazed fiercely
 As a sky that seemed never to have known a cloud. Under foot, the gray carpet of the Plains stretched north and east as far as the eye could reach. Away to the southwest, the jagged peaks of the Wasatch were sharply defined against a background of dazzling blue. The long train of canvas-covered wagons that tolled slowly forward upon the dusty trail might camp in the shadow of those peaks at sunset; so it seemed, at least, to the inexperienced eyes that had hailed the first sight of the range as a token that their journey was nearly ended.

"We are surely within ten miles of the mountains now. Is it not so, Captain?"

The person addressed reined his horse beside the questioner, who appeared to be in charge of an ambulance that had fallen in the rear of the train.

"When you have crossed the Plains as often as I have, Brother Sheldon," he said,
 "you won't trust to your eyes to measure distances, especially on a day like this. When it seems to you that you could almost touch the mountains with your hand, you may calculate that they are a good twenty miles away."

"That is discouraging."
 "On your wife's account, you mean? Take my word for it, she will do better here than in a velvet-carpeted chamber at home. I've seen such cases, scores of times."

A call for the Captain from some parties ahead interrupted the conversation, and as he rode away the driver of the ambulance lifted one of the curtains, letting in a little of the blinding sunlight, but admitting with it the fresh breeze that blew from the peaks.

"In mamma asleep?" he asked.

The question was addressed to a little girl who, with an expression of the gravest solicitude upon her round, dimpled face, was watching the other occupants of the wagon—a frail, pallid woman, lying on a bed improvised with blankets and pillows, with a tiny baby nestled close to her breast, and a pretty two-year-old child fast asleep. At the sound of a voice, the woman unclosed her eyes; and beautiful eyes they were—large, black,
 and full of liquid light.

"I have not slept," she said, "and the day has seemed very long. Is it near sunset?"

It was hard to answer her question, asked with such pathetic weariness. The husband and father looked from the sick wife to the children walking behind the wagon, and sighed as he thought of the long miles that stretched between them and the camping-ground they hoped to reach at sunset. The wife's quick ear caught the sigh.

"Do not mind me, George," she said, in a voice meant to be cheerful. "I am very comfortable, and the children can ride by turns." "Yes mamma," interposed the little watcher. "I will get out now and let Susy ride. She has been walking since morning."

But Susy, the motherly, thoughtful eldest sister, protested that she was not tired, and that she liked walking above everything, and the second girl, whose white face showed that she was ready to sink from exhaustion, was lifted into the overloaded ambulance.

"You can ride, too Charlie," the father said, addressing a sturdy youngster who had broken from his sister's retaining grasp, and was making a path for himself in the sagebrush.

"Don't want for. Guess I'm big enough to walk. Men allus walk; 'sides, I see a deer awhile ago, and when he comes 'round next time, I'm goin' to shoot him."

"He means a rabbit," said Susy.

"No, I don't, nuther. I see a lot of deers, and rabbits too, yist'day. Girls don't know nothin' 'bout shootin' deers."

The mother on her sick bed listened and smiled.

"What a boy!" she said, with the proud mother-light in her eyes. Then she spread the tiny baby's pink fingers upon her open palms, and touched her lips to its silken hair. She felt no weariness now. She had the children and their father. What did she want besides?

The next day and the next were but repetitions of many that preceded them, since the march across the Plains began; but on the third day they entered the mountain passes, and at the end of a week the train emerged from Emigration Canyon, and halted upon a plateau overlooking Great Salt Lake Valley.

"And this is Zion! God help us all!"

George Sheldon turned his head to look at the speaker, and his wife, now so far recovered as to be able to sit up in the wagon, glanced in the same direction. A young girl, bareheaded, her face browned by exposure to the sun and wind, and her dress soiled and travel-stained, stood near them, her eyes fixed on the prospect beyond. To most overland travelers the sight of this valley was as welcome as the first glimpse of Canaan to the Israelites, but to-day a scorching south wind wilted every green thing, and filled the atmosphere with a blinding cloud of dust. Doubtless others of the company echoed the girl's words in their hearts, but they did not utter their thoughts aloud. Mrs. Sheldon beckoned the stranger to a place beside her.

"You are disappointed," she said, "and homesick too, perhaps; but you will get over that."

"I am disappointed," the girl answered bitterly, "but not homesick. I have no home. My stepmother always hated me, and she turned my father against me."

"And you ran away."

"Yes, but I would have run somewhere else, if I had known all that I know now. Why, they told me this place was like the Garden of Eden. It looks that way, don't it? And I haven't a penny nor a friend."

"Suppose you stay with me, then, until you find a better place."

The girl's face brightened until her new-found friend thought her beautiful in spite of her sunburnt tints.

"Do you really mean it?" she cried. "If you will let me stay with you, I shall be so thankful, and you will never be sorry for giving me a home."

Mrs. Sheldon assured her of the sincerity of her offer, and asked her a few more questions, but beyond eliciting the information that her name was Nora Burton, and that she had joined the company of English emigrants at Liverpool, she learned little of her history. That night the whole family slept under a roof, for the first time in months, and in the morning their new home certainly looked much more inviting.

"We may find the Garden of Eden here after all," Mrs. Sheldon said to her handmaiden, "especially if we carry a little bit of it in our hearts. We came to this valley for the Gospel's sake, you know."

"I didn't," the girl answered promptly. "I would have gone anywhere to get away from home, and I came to this country only because the missionaries paid my way; but I can never get back to England, and I mean to make the best of it."

Mrs. Sheldon sighed. She was a devout believer in the New Gospel, and the girl's careless words pained her. "I am sorry, Nora, that you had no higher motive in coming," she said gravely.

'And what motive should I have, pray?'

'The salvation of your soul.'

Nora laughed lightly. 'That is something I can attend to by and by,' she said. 'They told me a hundred times, when we were crossing the Plains, that I could be saved by being sealed to one of the brethren. I don't know just what they meant, but I shall have plenty of time to find out if I spend my life here, as I suppose I must.'

'I see it is of no use to talk to you, Nora. You will never be serious.'

Yet while she treated the girl's words as a jest, she found herself wondering many times what they meant.

'What do you think of Nora?' she asked her husband a few days later.

'I think her rather pert and forward,' was the reply, 'and I am almost sorry you were so ready to offer her a home.'

'Oh, don't say that! Suppose one of our own girls should some time be friendless in a strange land. I am sure I did right, and I only asked your opinion of her because I have been thinking of something she said. She told me she had been taught that she could be saved by being sealed to one of the brethren. Do you imagine that she was in earnest?'

'Without a doubt. You did not hear anything of the sort on the Plains, but I did.'

'Nora says she don't know exactly what sealing means, and I—'

'You don't know either, of course, but I can enlighten you. It means marriage for eternity.'

'And what becomes of the unmarried?'

'None are to be left in that state. If there are more women than men in the community, one man is to take several wives.'

'That explains something the children were telling me about the poor old woman in the cabin above us, who works in the field like a day-laborer. They said she lived alone because her husband and his other wife had gone South. I wish I had known these things before.'

'And if you had, what then? If we accept the New Gospel, we must accept it as a whole.'

'Yes; but—' and the wife's face grew very white—'there may be some requirements that I am not strong enough to comply with. If you should take another wife it would kill me.'

'Lucy, you silly child, what has put such an absurd idea into your head? I have all that I can do to care for one wife. Pray don't suggest that I should take half a dozen!'

The conversation was interrupted at this point by the noisy entrance of three of the children, followed by Nora. The girl had improved wonderfully in the short time that she had been with them. She was really pretty, and today Mrs. Sheldon noticed, with a curious feeling of disapprobation, that she had curled her hair, and brightened her attire by a knot of gay ribbon. She chided herself for this feeling the next moment, and by way of rebuking it still further, bought Nora a more becoming dress the first time she was able to go out.

'Why should I blame the child for wishing to look pretty?' she said to herself. 'She is young, and it is right that she should feel as she does.'

Yet in spite of this reasoning, Nora's evident fondness for admiration troubled her. She wished the girl would be more serious. She wished, especially, that she would not jest so much about marriage.

'When you are well enough to go to the Tabernacle yourself,' Nora said one day, after being reproved for this tendency, 'you will not blame me. Marriage is the only thing talked of there.'

Nora was right, as Mrs. Sheldon found. At the Tabernacle, at the ward meetings, and at every gathering of the people, celestial marriage was urged as a duty that could not safely be neglected.

'It is the duty of a woman to give other wives to her husband, even as Sarah gave Hagar to Abraham; but if she refuse then it shall be lawful for the husband to take them without her consent, and she shall be destroyed for her disobedience.'

This was the text from which innumerable sermons were preached, not only in public gatherings, but at the firesides of the people. No household was exempt from the visits of the teachers, whose business it was to inquire how the celestial law was obeyed in each family.

'Lucy,' Mr. Sheldon said after one of these visits, 'what do you think of this new doctrine now?'

'I can only say, as I did at first,' she replied, 'that if you should take another

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE CENTURY PROGRAMME FOR 1883-'84.

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third number under the new name, is in anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every number, THE CENTURY shows a decided gain in the new volume before us, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A New Novel by George V. Cobb, author of "Old Creole Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sever," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the era of the Civil War.

"Life in the Christian Colonies," by EDWARD L. OGDEN, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country. These stories by Henry James, of varying lengths, to appear through the year.

The New Astronomy, unobscured articles, by Prof. B. P. LANGELOTT, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A Novella by E. R. RYAN, author of "Guano," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

The New Life in American Architecture, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A Novella by Robert Grant, author of "Confessions of a Grocer's Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man," a story New York.

The Broad-views, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January.

"Universalism and Wealth," with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticut," etc., on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

Smoking About the Fall of M. Lawrence, a series of interesting articles, profusely illustrated.

Scenes from the Novels, Hawthorne, GEORGE ELIOT, and others, with authentic drawings.

On the Track of Ulysses, the record of a yacht-cruise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"Gullied in England," extracts from his private journal kept during a journey in Europe in 1867.

"The Silversmiths," by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "New Arabian Nights."

There will be papers on outdoor England by JOHN BURNETT and others, a beautifully illustrated series on Dante, a number of papers by the excellent French novelist ALPHONSE DAVIDER, articles on art and archaeology by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER and others, illustrated papers sport and adventure, short stories by the leading writers, essays on literary subjects, etc., etc.

Subscription prices, $4.00 a year; single numbers sold every-where at 25 cents each. All dealers receive subscriptions, or remittances may be made direct to the publishers by postal or express order, registered letter, check, or draft.

Special Offers.

To enable new subscribers to begin with the first volume under THE CENTURY, we make the following special offers:

New subscribers beginning with November, 1883, may obtain the magazine for one year from date, and the twenty-four numbers, unbound, for $3.00. Regular price for the three years, $12.00.

Or, if preferred, a subscription and the twenty-four numbers bound in FOUR REGULAR VOLUMES will be furnished for $10. Regular price, $18.

St. NICHOLAS

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York TRIBUNE once said: "In the annals of literary literature that threatens the children, some strong, vitally wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. NICHOLAS has reached a higher platform, and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commended by St. NICHOLAS was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Lucius M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge,

Capt. Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen

Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton,

Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller

Elizabeth Stewart Phelps, Mrs. A.D.T. Whitney.

Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter,

Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Fred'k Schwatka,

Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, E. S. Brooks,

George W. Cable, Chas. G. Leland,

Susan Fannimore Cooper, John S. Whittier,

"H. N." W. O. Stoddard, C. P. Cranch, and scores of other distinguished writers. The best artists and engravers illustrate the magazine. It has been truly said that the reading of St. NICHOLAS is for the boys and girls who are fortunate enough to have it. In no other book or periodical is instruction so happily blended with recreation and amusement.

"A LIBERAL EDUCATION"

The price is $3.00 a year, or 25 cents a number. Book-sellers, news-dealers, and postmasters receive subscriptions, or remittances may be made direct to the publishers, by money or express order, bank check, draft, or in registered letter.

with a would kill me."

"That is not the question. What I want to know is whether you think the law of celestial marriage is a Divine command, binding upon all?"

"I cannot say I believe it is a Divine command, I only fear it may be."

Her husband looked at her a moment in silence, then he said slowly:

"I am sure it is a command of God, but—I am not ready to obey it."

Louy Sheldon's face blanched, and her breath came and went in short, quick gasps. If her husband had deliberately planned to bring her to the point of urging him to take another wife he could not have chosen a better way. The thought that she might be fighting against God was terrible to one of her acute religious sensibilities. The words she had been compelled to listen to so often rang in her ears: "It is the duty of a woman to give other wives to her husband." It seemed almost as though they were spoken from above in an audible voice. It was a moment of supreme misery. Could she, dared she, disobey God. Then her woman's nature asserted itself, and with a sudden revelation of feeling she cried out:

"It is not of God. He never would command anything so monstrous—so cruel!"

"I wish I could think so," her husband answered gravely; and without another word he left the room.

Five minutes later Nora came in, humming a lively air. "Are you going to the meeting to-night?" she asked.

"I think not; but why do you wish to know?"

"Because, if you mean to stay at home I would like to go. Can you spare me?"

"Of course I can; there is nothing to do in the evening."

Mrs. Sheldon spoke sharply. The girl's careless gayer hurt her. In her present mood it was like:

"The man let in suddenly upon sick eyes."

"She is as merry as if there was no such thing in the world as duty—and no such thing as sorrow." This was the elder woman's thought as Nora danced out of the room, first stopping before the mirror to arrange her dress and smooth her ringlets.

That night when her husband and Nora were at the meeting, and her children in bed, she meant to face again the question that had been forced upon her. She would know her duty. She would be sure whether God had really commanded such a sacrifice. But when evening came, and she knelt down to pray, she could only say over and over:

"He is my husband—mine. I cannot give him up. God help me!"

How long she knelt, moaning and wringing her hands, she did not know, but when she rose at last she was weak as if from long illness. Sinking into a chair she closed her eyes, and tried to collect her scattered senses, and think calmly. Her baby woke and cried. She took the little one in her arms and held it close to her tortured heart. Was her love for the baby's father a sin? No, it could not be, and while she loved him as she did God would not ask her to yield her place to another woman. Her mind went back over the years of their married life—years of perfect love and trust. There had never been any cloud in their sky until now; and now, try as she would, she could not be blind to the change in her husband.

"It is because he feels that his love for me hinders him from obeying God," she said to herself. "Poor George! I know something of the battle that is going on in his heart. It may be that he has suffered for months as I have suffered tonight."

The striking of a clock in the next room startled her. She counted the strokes. It was midnight. Her husband should have been home two hours ago. Something must have happened to him—or to Nora! She laid her baby in its cradle and opened the door. It was a cloudy summer night, moonless and intensely dark. Beyond the little circle of light from the lamp she held in her hand not even the outlines of the most familiar objects were visible; but from some spot near at hand—she judged from the outside of the hedge that separated the garden from the street—she detected the faint murmur of voices. The house stood quiet by itself in the outskirts of the town. She was not timid, but it was not pleasant to know that there were strangers about the premises at such an hour. She put the lamp back on the table and closed the door, remaining outside. She could not be mistaken. What she heard was the sound of voices in low-toned conversation. For a long time she continued at her post listening with strained attention, but unable to distinguish a word. The suspense was becoming unbearable. Oh, if her husband would only return! At last the conversation ceased, and a minute afterward the gate opened, and she heard her husband's well-known step on the walk. She spoke his name, and Nora answered:

"Here we are at last. Have you been frightened about us?"

"I have been anxious," she said, as she threw open the door. "What has kept you so long, George?"

"The Bishop had some business with me," he answered, "and we stopped at his house. I am sorry you thought it necessary to sit up for us."

Something in his tone checked farther inquiry. Nora left the room, and the husband and wife retired in silence.

The members of the M. E. Church at last have "taken the bull by the horns" as it were, by preferring charges against Rev. B. G. Cissel for violations of the Church Discipline in selling intoxicating liquors. What kind words, protestations and the prayers of the church people failed to accomplish in the way of reformation, will now be settled by a tribunal called especially for that purpose when, if the accused shall have been found guilty of the charges alleged in the specifications, to-wit: selling intoxicating drink as a beverage contrary to the rules set forth in the discipline of the M. E. Church and for conduct unbecoming a christian and gospel expounder, his license will be revoked. If the charges above preferred be not sustained, of course the accused shall be vindicated and restored to all the rights and privileges heretofore empowered by virtue of his license.

It is being industriously circulated by the would-be apologists of the Doctor, that this matter, being an affair strictly of the church, the public have no right to intermeddle, and that it is a subject which the press cannot consistently discuss. The position is certainly erroneous and excusable, if it has the merit of excuse, on the simple grounds of sublime ignorance.

When a moral question is presented the people are more or less interested, then it is the province of the press, the educator of the people, to use its voice in sustaining the right and denouncing the wrong.

Naturally there is a certain class who always catch on by taking the negative side of an issue, having little regard for public opinion or fear of the wrath of God, and who perhaps have axes to grind of their own.

Any man who deals in liquors even in a legitimate form as the statute provides, naturally hardens his heart, and in nine cases out of ten will tell you that he is engaged in the business solely for the money that is in it, and yet he despises the business and feels that it degrades his manhood. What then must be the conscience of the man who is a professed christian, a minister of the sacred gospel, and who is called upon to preside at temperance meetings, a teacher of good morals, when at the same time he is a trafficker in the very evil that he condemns at God's altar? It were folly to discuss the ungodliness of such a course. It is a burden that the church has borne to the verge of paralysis, and a long suffering, patient public have had this farce crammed down its unwilling throat once too often.

We are confident that the church in this matter is not actuated by any motive of malice, or that there is the least disposition to oppress or wrong the Doctor, but on the contrary a spirit of charity predominates. It is a square, open contest for principle, and on this score the church is right and deserves God speed.

There seems to be a bunkering on the part of certain local pugilists, who are evidently the beneficiaries of the "Reverend" gentleman mentioned elsewhere, to pulverize the editor. We counsel forbearance and volunteer the hint that editors are sometimes loaded, and if the p. should get so reckless as to precipitate such a crisis, we cannot guarantee that there will be enough left of them to hold a coroner's inquest.

Anticipating the inevitable outcome of the whisky investigation pending in the matter of the M. E. Church vs. Dr. B. G. Cissel, that gentleman, moved by the motive power contained in the charges and specifications, suddenly fired himself out and naturally enough landed in the sanctuary of the U. B. Church. Thus ends the proceedings, so far as the Methodist Church is concerned, as the matter is now out of their jurisdiction. We are sorry to say that the "Doctor" is still under a cloud for contraband dealings in wet goods.

Concerning the Duty of Postmasters.

CORNWALL, IND., JANUARY 31, 1884.

To the Editor of The Headlight.

Does the Postal law make it the duty of Post Masters to open and examine Circulars sent through the U. S. Mail to see if there is anything written thereon with pen or pencil?

A few days since we placed in a certain post office some circulars all in proper order as such, and post paid. A few moments after, and before we left the office, the Official in making up the mail took the three circulars out of the envelope and carefully inspected each to see if there was any pen or pencil marks thereon. The official failed to find anything but printed matter.

Now did the official go beyond duty?

J. L. RAMSEY.

We are not prepared to answer the above question intelligently, being unacquainted with the rulings of the postoffice department respecting the duties of postmasters, but from the best information in our possession we are inclined to the opinion that a postmaster, deputy postmaster, clerk or any person engaged in handling the mails has no authority to open or tamper with any package placed in the office for transmission or delivery, unless he has evidence that the patron is violating the postal law, and even then we question the right of such official to interfere. We suggest to friend Ramsey that he call Postmaster General Gresham, who will solve the query, as the present P. M. G. is known to be the greatest postal regulator of the age, one who allows nothing to escape his lynx-eye in the department over which he presides with the airs of a toad at a convention of his kind. Even the poor clerks in Gresham's department are forbidden to buy lottery tickets and chewing gum under pain of dismissal! And we doubt whether he would pass the innocent but curious freaks of a country P. M. without administering at least a mild reproof. By all means call old Gresh. the republican tar-heel aspirant for the presidency.

A terrible catastrophe occurred at Alliance, O., on Friday last, by an explosion of vapor gas from gasoline. The explosion took place in the central part of the city in a new brick building owned and occupied by E. M. Orr as a tin store below, the rooms above being occupied by families. The block was leveled to the ground and two brick blocks, one on each side, were also destroyed. Mr. Orr and his son were killed and almost cremated. Mrs. Hoagland, a daughter, Mrs. Frank Evans and two babes met a similar fate. The accident was caused by a child of Mr. Orr's turning the faucet in a tank letting the gasoline run on the floor. Mr. Orr was in the act of mopping it up when the scolding gas floated to a gas jet and was ignited. The damage to property is estimated at from $60,000 to $80,000.

The daughters of editor Parker of the Kendallville News, Miss May and Miss Maudie, favored our citizens with an entertainment at Hunsell's hall the other evening, consisting of vocal music by the former and elocution by the latter, in which both young ladies acquitted themselves very creditably for their first appearance on the stage.

Resolution of Thanks.

At a meeting of the W. C. T. U., Jan. 23, 1884, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That, as a union, we tender our most sincere thanks to Charles A. Stewart for his efficient aid in designing the beautiful banner, which graces our prohibition pole.

Also, Resolved, That we do most heartily thank Mr. D. B. Phillips for the privilege of locating the Prohibition pole in front of his business house.

Also, Resolved, That we tender our thanks to the venerable Father Wright, of Green Springs, Ohio, who with his aged hands helped to plant the first prohibition pole in DeKalb county.

Also, Resolved, That we as members of the W. C. T. U., do most heartily thank Mr. J. R. Skillin for his efficient management in all exercises during the day.

Also, That we do thank our friends from Auburn and Avilla for their presence and wise council.

Mrs. C. KING, Committee.

Notes and Comments.

The land jobbers that have held railroad grants of lands for from twelve to twenty years and upward without building the roads have heard something to drop. On Thursday two bills of reclamation passed the house. One recovers over 7,000,000 acres in Mississippi and Alabama; the other restores the grant to the Texas & Pacific, which Huntington prevented Scott from building, and which he opposed by the argument that no grant was needed to build a road on that line, but which he was now claiming for his own road that he built to head off Scott. This is beginning to look like business. The Oregon Central grant of 1,500,000 acres will go next, and two grants in California, amounting to about 5,000,000 acres, and then the grants to the Northern Pacific in Washington Territory and Oregon, which have been held for about eighteen years without building a mile of road. This is making a shaking among these monopolists.

The death of Wendell Phillips is announced. He earned his first reputation as an orator by denouncing slavery. The first of Mr. Phillips' great "abolition speeches" was made toward the close of 1837, at a meeting held at Faneuil Hall, for the purpose of giving expression to the sentiment of the people in regard to the anti-slavery riot in Missouri, which resulted in the death of Rev. Elijah P. Lovejoy. Mr. Phillips did not confine his exertions against slavery. The temperance reformer every found him a consistent and steady advocate. He was of commanding presence, and was a most graceful talker.

The estimated reduction of the public debt during January is $11,800,000.

Ex-Governor Foster thinks that Mr. Payne will be the Democratic candidate for President, and that the Republicans will have to put up their very strongest man if they expect to carry Ohio in October.

Josh Billings says: You will observe this, the devil never offers to go into partnership with a big man, but you will often see him offer to join the lazy, and furnish all the capital besides.

Our republican friends are not speculating a great deal; but they are giving enough attention to home to cause wonder that none ever seems to think of that remarkably lucky man, Hayes.

Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, informed the Senate committee yesterday that in his opinion the government should not take control of the telegraph. Of course everybody understands why Dr. Green thinks so.

The republican party is a party of magnificent prodigality. Economy of administration would be a meanness in its eyes. It taxes heavily; it gives munificently; it steals liberally.

Fitz John Porter bill has passed the House, and if it passes the Senate it is thought that President Arthur will sign the bill. The President could not do a more magnanimous act.

The New York World of a recent issue says: "The great leaders of the democratic party today—Tilden, Carlisle, Payne, Hoadly, Lamar, Eaton—stand where Jefferson, Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Silas Wright, Dallas stood in their times—the advocates of constitutional taxation for the support of the government—the imposition of duties on imports so arranged as to afford incidental protection to all industries and labor of the United States."

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer says: "The democratic presidential puzzle is the easiest we have had for years," remarked a New York democrat this afternoon. "Nominate H. B. Payne and the puzzle is solved. Payne can carry Ohio in October, and Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Indiana in November, thus securing a clear majority of the Electoral College and fifty votes to spare. No chance for a count-out then."

THE BATTLE OF '84.

The political contests, both State and National, of 1884 will be the most important of the country.

Everything points towards Democratic success in the coming Battle for the Presidency, and as an efficient aid to the accomplishment of that Great Purpose, use your best efforts to circulate the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER.

IN POLITICS

the Plain Dealer is and ever will be Democratic. It unflinchingly advocates the principles of that time-honored party which has ever been the friend of the people.

As a family newspaper it is unexcelled, and its Telegraphic, Financial, Commercial, Editorial, Correspondence and Miscellaneous Departments are always complete.

On or about December 1, 1883, the Plain will appear in an entire new dress and the Weekly will be enlarged, affording additional space for reading matter.

It has no superior as a family and political journal, and for 1884 will be furnished subscribers at the following low rates:

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Chicago Times: If there is any truth in the doctrine of evolution, the future residents of the Ohio Valley will have web feet.

—Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot: Smith, the republican candidate for mayor of Philadelphia, carries a beer keg on one shoulder and a hymn book on the other.

—Chic. Herald: Cleveland's promising young bruiser, who wants to fight Sullivan, should be encouraged. The country is anxious to see an Ohio man mauled.

—Chicago Inter Ocean: The New York Sun having about exhausted its list of presidential statesmen is looking at General Butler through a smoked glass.

—Chicago Times: It is painfully evident from Mr. Morrison's tariff bill that Mr. Morrison wants to be president a good deal more than he wants to reform the tariff.

—Glasgow (Ky.) Times: Somebody asks the difference between democrats and republicans. Well, about the biggest difference is, one's in and the other wants to get in.

—Chillicothe (O.) Advertiser: The time is near at hand when the country has need to cry for protection from the eager grasp and towering influence of these "infant" monopolies which control elections.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: The colored voters of Ohio are not likely to forget that the first civil rights bill enacted in any state has been enacted by the democratic legislator of Ohio in the face of the bitter opposition of the republicans.

—Detroit Free Press: The average citizen wants the chimneys in his house plastered inside and out to make them perfectly fireproof, and yet he empties ashes into a barrel in the woodshed and expects Providence to douse in the water in case of fire.

—Chicago Herald: There is a tide in the affairs of cities, as of men, that, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune. Cincinnati, on the top wave of its present bright prospects, should sail in to secure the democratic convention.

—St. Louis Republican: A local republican journal of the protectionist school grows facetious over the feature of Mr. Morrison's tariff bill which reduces the price of dyestuffs. If Mr. Morrison had proposed a measure to cheapen the price of whitewash he would have received the instant support of the average republican politician.

—Philadelphia Record: We have had twenty years of piled up protection. Let us now, as far as we can safely do so, relieve the industries which can stand alone from the dragging weight of the industries that can only stand when supported by compensating taxation. We can unload ourselves to the extent of $100,000,000. Why should we not do it?

—Logansport (Ind.) Pharos: Ralph R. Springer, whose magnificent gifts have made his name revered by the good and true of all lands, has just given another $20,000 to the Cincinnati Art School. Springer is a millionaire, but is cognizant of the fact that he can not take his wealth with him to the grave, and is, therefore, willing to use it in establishing monuments that will exist from generation to generation.

[From the Continent]
HIS SECOND WIFE.

BY CORNELIA PADDOCK.

Author of "The Fate of Madame La Tour."

(Concluded.)

A month passed without any allusion being made to the subject of the afternoon's conversation. Sheldon was away much of the time, and when at home he appeared moody and preoccupied. His wife felt that she was standing on the crumbling edge of a precipice, without the power to retreat, but there was no one to whom she could look for help. It was now the first of September, just a year from the day they entered the valley.

"A year of sorrows," she said aloud, as she looked from the window of her room toward the spot from which they first caught sight of their new home.

"Do you think so?" It was the voice of her husband, who had entered unperceived. "You were more eager to come than I, and yet you are not happy here."

"No, I am not."
"I, too, might any this has been a year of sorrow, but it is because I have vacillated between duty and inclination. Since I have determined to obey God at any cost, I have found peace."

What was there in his words to make her heart stand still with a vague terror? She looked at him appealingly, but he was silent, waiting for her to speak.

"What do you mean?" she faltered at length.

"I mean that I have consented to take another wife, and next week Nora and I are to go through the Endowment House."

A mist came before the wife's eyes. She tottered, and caught at the nearest object to save herself from falling. Was it her husband speaking, or was it the same dreadful voice from above that she had so often fancied she heard repeating:

"If she refuses, it shall be lawful for him to take them without her consent, and she shall be destroyed for her disobedience."

What could she do? She was helpless in the grasp of an unyielding power. One last appeal, however, she must make, and with white lips she pleaded:

"Not Nora! Oh, not her! Let it be some one else—some one I do not know!"

"It is too late to make such a condition," her husband answered. "It must be Nora, and no one else!"

His face showed that there was no appeal from this decision, and for the next half-hour the wife sat in apathetic silence, while he talked of Nora and of the changes he wished made in the household arrangements on her account as calmly as though they were discussing the most ordinary business transaction; but when he rose to go, she found voice to say:

"George, will you answer one question? Was this not all settled a month ago, and did you not ask Nora to be your wife that night when I sat up waiting for you until after midnight?"

"If you must know—yes," he answered brusquely, and left the room without another word.

How she lived through the week that followed she never knew. She moved about mechanically, like a person walking in sleep, conscious only of a wish to avoid the sight of Nora; but when the day came which had been appointed for the consummation of her sacrifice, and she stood at the altar with her husband and his bride, her benumbed faculties awoke to life.

An eternity of agony was concentrated in the single moment in which she faced the High Priest, and heard him ask:

"Do you give this woman to your husband, to be his wedded wife?"

Twice she essayed to reply, but no sound came from her lips. The question was repeated, and, in a voice scarcely audible, she answered:

"Yes and no!"
"What do you mean?" the High Priest demanded sternly.

"I mean," looking above and around, as though invoking help from an unseen power, "if God requires it, yes—I will not stand between him and his God—but if I consult my

H. E. GETTEL, Altona, Ind.

NOVEMBER 20, 1893.

'Because he is the only man I ever loved,' was the candid answer.

'Then you did not feel that God commanded you to take such a step?'

'I didn't think of it at all in that way. I don't pretend to be religious, like the rest of you.'

After this it seemed idle for the wife to expect anything from an appeal to her rival's better feelings; yet as weeks and months passed, bringing added discord and wretchedness to the household, she made such appeals more than once.

One day, after a stormy scene, she said: 'Nora, when I first offered you a home you told me I would never be sorry for doing so; yet now, when I have done and suffered so much for your sake, you never repay me by a kind word or act. Why is this?'

'Nora's eyes blazed.

'I hate you,' she said, 'because you are his wife! Can't you understand? How can two women love the same man and be at peace with each other?'

How indeed! Lucy Sheldon was conscious that her own heart was full of bitterness toward the girl that had won her husband's love. Day after day she prayed for patience and resignation, but her prayers brought neither comfort nor help. She could not banish the feeling that if God had laid such a burden upon her life was not a kind Father but a cruel tyrant. If her husband had shown any sympathy for her, her lot would not have seemed quite so hard; but he was completely infatuated with Nora, and seemed to share her feelings toward his wife.

One day the two, rather against Nora's wishes, were obliged to go out together to make some necessary purchases, and on their way home they were overtaken by a shower. Sheldon was waiting at the door for them when they came. Without even glancing at his wife, he took Nora in his arms, carried her to the fire removed the wet shoes and stockings, and chafed her feet.

'My darling! How could you be so imprudent!' he was saying, when his wife's appearance turned his thoughts into another channel.

'How is it,' he said, frowning darkly, 'that you did not have sense enough to look for shelter somewhere? You know how delicate Nora is and if she dies in consequence of this it will be your fault; but you will be glad of it no doubt.'

His wife stood before him without uttering a word the water dripping from her clothing. She was wet through, for she had given her shawl to Nora. Her silence seemed to anger her husband still more, and he raised his hand threateningly, but Nora caught his arm, exclaiming, 'Come, don't let us have a scene,' and hurried him off to her room.

'Mamma,' said Charley, 'when I'm a big man I'll shoot Nora and put father in jail. You see if I don't!'

'Hush, Charley!' said Susy; then putting her arm around her mother, she entreated: 'Do come to your room dear mamma. I have everything dry and warm for you to put on.' There was no answer. The mother stood as if turned to stone.

'Don't look that way, mamma,' the other children cried in terrified tones and Baby Maud, frightened by the tumult, began to sob. The sound roused the mother.

'Come to mamma, love,' she said.

'Let us take off your wet dress first,' the older girls pleaded. 'Maud is all right. We have taken good care of her; indeed we have.'

When the children had succeeded in removing their mother's dripping garments and placing her in a warm bed, she begged them to leave her alone. She had need to be alone while she looked her destiny in the face. Now, indeed her last illusion had vanished. She had hoped against hope that her husband's love for her was dormant, not dead, and that it would some time awake to life. But she had more to learn and more to endure. The day came when the man who had promised to cherish and protect her until death should part them struck her a shameful blow.

'I am thankful for that; it sets me free,' she had said to herself and yet something she could not define, the ghost of her dead love, still held her in bonds. Then, too, the shreds of her former belief clung to her, and at times she felt afraid that she was fighting against God. With this thought fresh in her mind, she would submit to Nora's caprices and her husband's brutality for days together with uncomplaining patience, but her submission only brought fresh exactions.

'Lucy,' her husband said one morning in an unusually amiable tone, 'Nora has set her heart upon having a new bonnet before Thursday. She declares that she will not go to the Tabernacle or take part in the concert without one, and they are all depending on her. I have spent the last dollar I had by me and I cannot draw any more until the end of the month; but I know you have money, and I wish you would lend Nora what she wants.'

'I have a little money,' the wife said hesitatingly. 'but the children need shoes.'

'The children! It is always the children!' he answered impatiently. 'But never mind; if you choose to be disobedient, I dare say I can borrow it somewhere else.'

'Don't say any more. I will let her have the money.'

'Well, come along then,' he answered ungraciously. 'Nora is waiting.'

But when Nora was spoken to, it transpired that she did not feel well enough to walk up-town, and that she wished Mrs. Sheldon to go and bring down one or more bonnets for her inspection.

'I do not see how I can go,' she said; but her answer raised such a storm that, as usual, she yielded, and set out on her errand. It was a long, hot walk in the scorching August sun. She remembered after she started that it was Maud's birthday. She had been too miserable to think of it before. Her mind went back to those August days on the Plains three years ago. How happy she was then, and how little she dreamed of the life that lay before her in these valleys! But she must not dwell on the past; she could not and keep her senses. So, striving to think only of her errand, or rather not to think at all, she hurried on. When she reached her destination, she found nothing within the reach of her slender purse, but after going from place to place until her strength was nearly exhausted, she at last selected something that she thought might please her exacting rival. The price amounted to the whole of the sum she had brought; even the few pennies she had hoped to save to buy a triding present for Maud must go. It was nearly noon when she reached home with her purchase.

"You have been gone long enough in all conscience, was Nora's greeting. "Give me the bonnet."

She tore off the wrappings, turned the bonnet over in her hands and burst into angry tears.

"Just look what she has brought me, George," she cried. "You know she did it on purpose to insult me!"

"It was the best I could get for the money," Mrs. Sheldon tried to say, but a torrent of reproaches from her husband drowned her voice. When he stopped, Nora launched into a tide of abuse, and goaded beyond endurance she made a stinging retort.

"Do you dare to speak like that to Nora?" her husband cried and with the words he dealt a blow that felled her to the floor.

She lay for a moment stunned. Then as her senses came back to her she rose slowly, gathered up the offending parcel, and without looking at either of them said: "I will go again and do the best I can," and left the house.

Once outside she walked with feverish haste, never stopping a moment until she had returned her purchase and taken back her money.

The shop of the only druggist on the street was a few doors below. She went in and asked for a bottle of laudanum. The clerk looked at her, noted her expression, and hesitated.

"What did you want it for?" he asked. She made an answer that satisfied him, laid her money on the counter, took the drug, and went out. She did not hasten now. There was time enough for what she had to do. Once or twice she passed people she knew and spoke to them as she might have done on any other day. She had left the most frequented streets behind her. The road that lay between her and her home was a solitary one. She looked on every side. She was alone. Her eyes rose to the purple tops of the mountains, and then to the sky above. Was God there, looking down upon her? If He saw her, He surely knew that she could bear no more.

"Good-by," she said aloud, while her gaze lingered on earth and sky. Then she lifted the deadly vial to her lips and drained it to the bottom.

"I am out of their reach now." This was the only thought of which she was conscious as she walked onward. As she came in sight of her own house her children met her.

"Mamma," said Baby Maud with a quivering lip, "I so hungry."

"Mamma," Charley added, "we haven't had anything to eat since morning."

"It is true," said Susy. "Nora locked everything up and told us to wait for our mother. She and father are at supper now, but they sent us out."

"Mamma, I'm baby," sobbed the little one clinging to her dress, "and Nora's naughty."

"Oh! Upon whom will the children call to-morrow?" she thought.

A deadly stupor was stealing over her, but she fought against it long enough to comfort the child; then, walking with uncertain steps, she entered the house and sank down in a chair by the open window. Nora, who sat facing the door, was the first to perceive her.

"George!" she exclaimed, "look at your wife!"

He turned, caught sight of her livid face, and going to her took her by the arm and shook her to arouse her.

"What is the matter? What have you been doing?" he said roughly.

"I know what she has been doing," cried Nora. She has been taking something to put herself out of the way, and it will be laid to me; and actuated partly by this fear, and partly by common humanity, she hurried to her side and took her cold hands.

"What have you done?" she said; and excitement and terror brought tears to her eyes as she spoke.

There was no response; but Nora, with quick intuition, slipped her hand into the pocket in which she had thrust the empty vial.

"Look!" she cried, drawing it out and holding it up: "this tells the story. She will be dead in an hour if we don't do something to save her."

"Dead in an hour! And what will become of the children afterwards?" Some such thought floated dimly through her mind, while Nora, with frantic haste, applied all the remedies at hand. She did not resist the girl's efforts to bring her back to life, even though she was conscious that her husband stood apart, as though indifferent to the result.

At last death was beaten back, and she lay in her bed, conscious, but weaker than an infant; yet even then her husband manifested no interest in her fate. Nora, however, was kind; and Susy watched beside her with unwearying devotion. Before the end of the week she was moving about the house again, trying, for her children's sake, to retain her feeble hold on life. There was a change in the atmosphere of the household, partly because Nora seemed less disposed to make trouble, and partly because Sheldon absented himself from home most of the time.

"If he would only stay away always," he and Nora, we might take a little comfort," Susan said.

In her heart the mother felt the same, and when, without any effort of her part, the family was divided, and she gathered her children under a roof that sheltered her and them alone, she experienced such a sense of relief and thankfulness as she had not done for years.

"Bury your love for your husband! It is the best thing you can do." So a friend had said to her long ago; and now, when love lay in the same grave with hope and happiness, she found peace—the peace of the dead. The time came at last when she could meet and pass the father of her children, not only without any sign of recognition, but without a single pang. Her daughters grew to womanhood, beautiful as their mother had been. Her son became her stay and support, and last of all Baby Maud blossomed into lovely maidenhood, and was wooed by one who had put his hand to the work of undoing the heavy burdens of the victims of priestly tyranny. "I give her not only to you but to your work," the mother said. "God help you both to remember them that are in bonds as bound with them!"

Will not the reader say "Amen?" Will not every wife and mother pray that "this evil plant, whose roots have wound themselves about altar and hearthstone, and whose branches, like those of the tree Al Accoub in Moslem fable, bear every accursed fruit, may be torn up and destroyed forever?"

There is a small remnant of a tribe of Indians inhabiting the shore region of Martha's Vinyard, in the vicinity of Gay Head, where the City of Columbus struck on the reef and was wrecked. But for that disaster they would probably never been heard of, for they are too few in number and poor in possessions to be taken into the account of the world's affairs. But they appear to have heroic blood in their veins. When it was found that the ill-fated ship was fast on the reef and being broken to pieces by the waves that beat against and rolled over her, nearly every able bodied Indian in the adjoining settlement took to their fishing boats to save the passengers. At great peril to their lives, six of them manned a whale boat, reached the wreck and rescued twenty two persons alive. It was a bleak and barren spot where the wreck took place and the Indian dwellings bear evidence of their poverty, being small, with unplastered walls and provided with few comforts. But the owners unselfishly gave them up to the half frozen rescued passengers, and the Indian women divested themselves of part of their own scanty wardrobe to furnish covering for the naked bodies of the drowned females. Such heroic and humane conduct, so unlike the behavior of the wrecking populations who usually inhabit exposed coasts, deserves some public recognition.

Cincinnati Commercial Gazette:

"Politicians spout about Fitz John Porter as if he never fought a battle, when he was the right hand of the government in Pennsylvania in the critical days at the beginning of the war; when he won the battle of Hanover court house; when he fought a wonderful battle at Gaine's Mills; when he saved the army at Malvern Hill; when he was the wall of fire standing against the confederate hosts on the day after his alleged misconduct, which was foreseen by a staff officer with the mystic gift of clairvoyance! The question whether Fitz John Porter has not been wronged for twenty years should not be a partisan one, but the democrats and confederates make the free action of republicans difficult, because democratic passion for partisanship is in all questions and provokes antagonism. Still we shall hope always to see republicans clear sighted in matters of justice, truth and humanity, in spite of all partisan provocation."

Notes and Comments.

The Ohio legislature last week appropriated $200,000 for relief of the flood sufferers of that State.

Comptroller Knox thinks the McPherson bank bill will pass Congress. It authorizes circulation up to the par value of the bonds deposited as security.

According to the Waterloo Press, whose editor seems to be familiar with saloon language, Dr. Cissel is in the "setting up" business. Well, this is more than was charged in the "indictment."

Atlanta Constitution: We are to have five eclipses this year, not including that of the republican party, which will be visible in all parts of the country.

Frank Willis is airing his country school house manners through the columns of the Waterloo Press, a radical organ that he claims to be part owner of. Willis may be a great man (in his mind) for ought we know, but by the time he gets through whitewashing the "lunny business" of his radical brother in this village, he will be ready to hang himself up by the ears. Go slow, Frank.

Wesley Johnson, arrested for the brutal murder of George Williams and his wife near Wauseon, O., some time ago, had his trial at Napoleon last week, and the jury found a verdict as charged in the indictment, viz: murder in the first degree, the evidence being chiefly circumstantial but forming a perfect chain of circumstances convicting him beyond a doubt of one of the blackest crimes on record. Last Saturday Judge Moore passed the sentence of death, fixing May 29th, 1884, as the date of execution.

Added to the woe and distress of the flood stricken people, comes the news of a terrible calamity causing the death of ten persons by the falling of time worn and flood washed buildings in the remote part of the flooded district of Cincinnati. Three buildings comprising what was known as the Kyle house, located on Pearl street and occupied as a boarding house, succumbed to the pressure of the water, the walls giving away and carrying down to death at least ten persons. This is the only accident thus far attended with loss of life.

Flannels and blankets are taxed 70 per cent on the average; woolen cloth and shawls anywhere from 80 to 115 per cent. all wool dress goods are taxed from 70 to 88 per cent. ready-made clothing pays from 49 to 85 per cent. as tax for the benefit of manufacturers; and yet, curiously enough, after taxing the poor man's blanket and the poor woman's shawl away up in the eighties, silk goods are let in with the comparatively light tax of 50 per cent.

Cincinnati people are possessed of a charity as broad as the unfortunate condition of their poor, made homeless and hungry by the floods which have submerged their humble homes, demands. Liberal contributions were promptly forthcoming from the well-to-do inhabitants of the city and with the sturdy independence of a year ago under like circumstances they do not solicit any aid from abroad. Relief measures have been organized and are in the hands of energetic and efficient men who are doing all that can possibly be done to mitigate the suffering consequent on the situation.

John Sherman's bloody shirt investigation does not pan out well. If the investigation the Danville riot proves anything it proves that the trouble there was the result of excitement worked by the Mahonites, and that the colored followers of that political scoundrel were responsible for all that happened.

The New York Commercial Advertiser is exulting because there is to be a big $424,000 exposition at Hell Gate next fall. The signs are that there will also be a big exposition of the Republican party next fall, and it too, will probably take place near Hell Gate, as the party has long been traveling in that direction.—Courier Journal.

Cln. News Journal: The German-American editors are pretty unanimous in the desire that Uncle Sam take Bismarck across knees and apply a hog-hide slipper where it would do most good.

Congress appropriated the additional sum of $200,000 for the relief of flood sufferers, making a total of half a million dollars so appropriated.

The Century for March.

The frontispiece of the March Century is a "speaking" portrait of Von Moltke. A portrait of Irving, an "Hannibal" also lends interest to the number. The Moltke biographical article is by Helen Zimmerman; that of Irving is by J. Rankin Towne. The paper on "The Next Presidency," by ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh, is timely and of critical interest. Another important essay, by D. McV. Means, is "The Suppression of Temperance." The subject discussed in "Topics of the Time" are "A Chinese Call for American Art," "The Chinese League of Association," "The Independent Voter in the Next Campaign," and "The American Copyright League," while in "Open Letters" the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Johnson continues his suggestive and humorous criticisms of Church music. J. B. Peterson writes of "National Aid to Education," J. C. Schaffer, of "Hypnotism Regarding Temperance Work," Mary B. Willard, of "High License," B. K. Brothier of "The Brand-winners," and the anonymous author of "The Brand-winners" replies to strictures upon his story. In their order, the illustrated papers are "The New Washington," Richard Grant White's "Grand Public Buildings in America," Mr. Benjamin's "Crusade of the Allen Mary," Miss Sarah Jewett's "The Old House," "Notes on the Exile of the Exile," illustrated by Harry Fenn, after sketches by the artist, and John Burroughs' "A Hunt for the Nightingale" in England. The action of the number includes the fourth part of Robert Grant's "An Average man," the fifth of Mr. Cable's "Dr. Rex," and a short story, by Octave Thanet, dealing with much prejudice in a Western city, and entitled "Mrs. Finlay's Elizabethan Chair." The previous Harriet Moore, Hamilton Aldie, Rosa Hawthorne, Helen Gray Carter, Frank Dempster Sherman, and others.

Notes and Comments.

The Democratic National Executive Committee met in Washington last Friday, and after a third balloting, Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati being the contestants, the former city was chosen as the place for holding the next national convention, and the time July 8th, a little over one month later than the time set for the Republican convention, which will be held at the same city. Chicago was chosen simply because of its suitability for convention purposes, and the location has no political significance.

The radical brethren are considerably shaken up over an interview of ex-Senator Roscoe Conkling by Rev. Snyder, a correspondent of one of the leading New York papers and reproduced in the Chicago Inter-Ocean with significant editorial comments. In the course of this interview the greatest political leader of the age predicts the overthrow of the republican party next fall, and in plain words Mr. Conkling assures the correspondent that "the next President will be a Democrat." And now the boys are all howling mad, and censure Snyder for giving publicity to an opinion that was intended as strictly confidential. This is a sad state of affairs but we don't see what the brethren are going to do about it.

The black fiends, Ben Johnson and Allen Ingalls, arrested for the murder of Beverly Taylor and wife and Eliza Jane Cambert, an adopted child, also colored, at Avondale, O., recently, and whose bodies were sold to the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati the same night, have plead guilty and made a full confession of the crime.

The remains of DeLong and other Jeannette victims were conveyed from the navy yard to the Battery at New York Friday, where a funeral procession was formed, including regiments of regular troops and militia, civic societies, and invited guests and marched up Broadway and across the Brooklyn bridge to the navy yard, where the bodies lay in state all day.

Peter Becher, who is working at Avilla, comes home occasionally to see his girl.

Mrs. George Simons, of Fort Wayne, and Mrs. Bronch, of Kendallville, were the guests of George Baker recently.

Night operator Fisher is off on a pleasure trip to the Buckeye State, somewhere in the neighborhood of "behind" Canton.

F. B. Griffies, of Indianapolis, will lecture on temperance at the M. E. Church on Thursday and Friday evenings, 28th and 29th inst. Everybody are invited.

Emery Metz, for the past year head salesman in Loewenstein & Rothschild's store at Waterloo, has removed to this place, and we understand that he contemplates forming a co-partnership with J. W. Helmer.

Brother Houser, the handsome editor of the Auburn Republican, acknowledges the receipt of a gorgeous valentine from some fair admirer of his good looks. Some people are born lucky.

The family of T. F. Elson, of Fairfield, met with a lucky accident the other day while coming to town. Driving along the road one side of the buggy box gave way which let the seat down and threw the whole family out, but luckily no one was hurt.

Among the "personals" in the Waterloo Press, we notice the arrival in that village of Bill Adams. This will account for the Munchausen yarns in the local drift of Corunna in that issue of the Press. When you call a liar into requisition, by all means get a good one.

We notice the familiar face of our old-time friend, conductor J. W. Watson, who now makes the "rounds" in charge of accommodation train No. 73. John deposited a dollar into our treasury with the remark that, "a little HEADLIGHT was a good thing down that way."

Loewenstein & Rothschild's bargain sale of goods, slightly damaged by the late fire in their store at Waterloo, is still in force. Read their "ad" and improve this golden opportunity at once before the goods are all disposed of, as they are "going off like hot cakes."

There will be a public sale of personal property at the residence of J. W. & Henry Beller, two and a half miles north of Fairfield Center, on Tuesday, March 6th, at 10 o'clock a. m., consisting of live stock, farming implements, household furniture, etc. Terms made known on the day of sale.

The birthday of G. Washington, that great and good man who, it is said, never told a fib in his life, was permitted to pass without the usual general observance; however, a dance at Williamson's hall on the evening of the 22d, shows that some of the Cornnites were not altogether unimpartial of the occasion.

Notes and Comments.

—Washington, Feb. 14.—[Special.]—Judge Lowery has just delivered a speech in the house, which attracted great interest. When he commenced to speak, members in the lobby and cloak rooms crowded back to their seats and he was listened to with undivided attention. His time having expired it was, by a unanimous vote, extended as long as he desired and at the close he was greeted with round after round of applause. Afterwards a large number of members on both sides of the house, but more especially the democrats, tendered their personal congratulations, and amongst others Speaker Carlisle. The question pending was a legal one, involving a prima facie right to a seat in a contested election case from Mississippi. This was the second day of the debate, in which a number of members participated. It is conceded on all hands that Judge Lowery's is the best speech which has been made during the discussion.

—The Boston Herald (Independent Republican) well says that a glance at the provisions of the Morrison bill shows that there is no real cause for alarm. The potters seem to be among the most frightened, but the Morrison bill proposes to cut only 20 per cent; to reduce porcelain from 45 to 35 per cent; painted china, from 60 to 48 per cent; china not painted and other earthen ware, from 55 to 44 per cent. That ought to be sufficient protection. In metals, for instance, the duty on steel rails is reduced from $17.92 to $13.44 per ton; that on steel blooms and steel not otherwise provided for, from 45 to 35 per cent. The duty on woolen blankets is reduced from ten cents a pound and 25 per cent. to eight cents a pound and 25 per cent.; basting, the same; paper from 10 per cent. to 12 per cent; pulp from 10 per cent. to 8 per cent. These are fair samples of the whole revision. There is nothing to frighten anybody. Nearly all manufactures in which the competition is sharp will still be protected by duties of from 35 to 50 per cent., and if our infant industries can not stand it with that measure of protection, they had better go into some other business. Besides, they are favored by putting some crude materials on the free list? In short, the tariff will remain 20 per cent. higher than the Norrell tariff of 1860, which was an extreme protection measure.

Dorsey in a recent interview reiterated at his charges of corruption against the Republican managers in the campaign of 1880. He says, "You may put it down as a fact, that no statement of mine in respect to those matters will ever be denied."

THE MARCH MAGAZINES.

Forthcoming numbers of THE CONTINENT will contain, among other interesting features: "The Tenants of An Old Farm—Leaves from the Note Book of a Naturalist" by Dr. Henry C. McCook; fully illustrated by James C. Beard, Daniel O. Beard and others. "Princess Louise of Prussia," by E. S. Carhart, with many beautiful illustrations. "Dorcas the Daughter of Faustina," by the author of Arius the Libyan, illustrated by W. H. Low. "The Arts of Decoration," by Hester M. Poole. "Three Papers on English Art and Artists," including one on Claude, by Henry Blackburn, the distinguished artist and critic. "National Education," by A. W. Tourgeon, begun in the CONTINENT for November 14 (No. 62). Other illustrated articles, with the regular departments. Four Dollars a year. Address THE CONTINENT, 25 Park Row, New York.

Lonnie M. Alcott's third "Spinning-wheel Story," entitled "Eli's Education," is a leading feature of the March number of DR. NICHOLAS, and paints a true picture of the struggles of a country lad to obtain an education in the early years of the present century.

Mrs. A. T. Whitney contributes a brightly written story, called "Girl-Noblesse," which is not without "boy interest," however, and which, while possessing its full share of incident and adventure, is a clever study of character as well.

"Among the Mustangs" is the title of an entertaining paper on the wild ponies of the plains, by Nosh Brooks, author of "The Boy Emigrant," who gives much information in regard to the origin, life, habits, and fate of the mustang. "Blown Out to Sea," by C. F. Holder, is a collection of anecdotes, recounting some of the curious sailing places made use of by weedy birds which are driven by strong winds out of their course in their long migratory flights, extending many thousands of miles. The pictures are by J. C. Beard, and one of them shows a tired samojede vainly trying to sleep while standing on the back of a huge turtle, a sight actually observed by a boat's party in the Gulf of Mexico.

"Wong Ning's Idea" are some of the reminiscences and quite original opinions expressed in his own words by a very "live" Chinese boy, living in San Francisco.

Lucy Larcom has a bright little March poem, called "The Wind-Flower." Palmer Cox tells and shows how the adventurous "Brownies" went up (and came down) in a balloon; Emily Huntington Miller has some strong and feeling verses on the Life-Saving Service; R. A. Birch has illustrated and expressed six pages of funny jingles, entitled "An Alphabet Menagerie," and there are some excellent verses besides these. Mayne Reid's serial "The Land of Fire," and W. O. Stoddard's "Winter Fun" increase in interest as they grow in length.

A Word to People Moving West.

Deal with responsible parties, as it is almost a daily occurrence that some one is swindled out of their money, or find on their hands tickets over inferior or indirect routes, which they have been induced to purchase, thinking that they have saved a dollar or two, in the rate, when the delays and hotel bills, even if they succeed in getting a ticket that carries them through, costs them more than the difference they would have to pay over a direct route like the Baltimore & Ohio, whose Agents are responsible, and will sell you tickets, always at the lowest rates over first-class routes.

The Bar Docket just issued from the HEADLIGHT press, for the February term of County Court, which convened on Monday, contains about fifty-four State cases, some of them carried over from the December term. In the Civil Docket there are only eight petitioners for freedom from the yoke matrimonial, the whole being spiced with the usual variety of scam, mag. and general cussedness.

Mr. McDonald, of Bryan, Ohio, a very pleasant young gentleman, is filling the place of Frank Fisher as night operator during the latter's absence.

Jackson, Mich., was visited by a destructive conflagration Monday morning. Union block, one of the finest in the city, was burned involving a loss of $250,000, and several lives are reported lost in the ruins.

Another mine horror is recorded. At Connellsville, Pa., where a mine was being worked at a depth of 400 feet, an explosion occurred on Wednesday last, and fifty laborers met with a horrible death by suffocation and damps.

Notes and Comments.

The great flood in the Ohio Valley which has wrought such widespread ruin to the residents there in during the past fortnight, has about disappeared, the waters having nearly receded to their natural level. The losses by this second calamitous visitation within a year cannot be correctly estimated, but they will run up into the millions. The prompt manner in which the people responded to the appeals for aid to suffering humanity in this awful calamity, is characteristic of the generous and noble impulses of our countrymen. The Cincinnati News Journal, in its issue of the 15th, notes the culminating point of the flood as follows:

The greatest flood in the white man's history of the Ohio—probably the greatest since the days of Noah—reached its culmination point here yesterday at high noon, and after scoring 71 feet 4 inches—4 feet 8½ inches above the highest record of previous floods—stood at sea, like a beast at bay, for six hours, and then began a sullen retreat. At 2 o'clock this morning it had receded but 3½ inches, but reports from above and the condition of the weather gives assurance that the climax of our calamity has been reached and passed.

Of the thousands of tragic incidents that mark the story of the great floods of February, one of the most pathetic comes from Cochransville, a little town on the banks of the Ohio; or, rather, a town that was there before the waters carried it off. There were formerly forty houses, two stores and a church, but now only the church and two houses remain, all the others having been pressed out into the relentless stream. Amos Brothers' store, filled with miscellaneous stock, was swept away. Miss Amos was staying with her aunt, Mrs. Carlson, below town, and when she saw the store passing, exclaimed: "My God, there goes our house." The women had no more than passed her lips, when her aunt lay a corpse at her side, from fright.

The republicans of this county are getting ready for their funeral. A mass convention of the brethren is called to meet at Auburn, on the 10th of April next.

Mrs. William Webster, of Fairfield Center, an old settler of that township, died on Sunday last after a short illness, her disease being lung fever.

Not long since a special train from Detroit went over the Wabash to Chicago via B. & O., made the fastest time ever attained on the Chicago Division, averaging about 80 miles an hour.

Henry F. Sembower, prefers his old position at the throttle of his engine to that of any other, and he has abandoned the road as traveling engineer. Frank is a good one wherever you put him.

In these times of peril by flood, the old reliable B. & O. is about as free of impediments to travel as any of the trunk lines. No accidents to speak of have occurred this winter, and trains are making good time.

Fort Wayne Sentinel: "The career of Jack Ryan, the Baltimore and Ohio train wrecker, is familiar to our readers. The fellow was arrested in Ohio and lodged in jail here to prevent the railroad men from lynching him. It will be remembered Jack told a romantic story and said his object in wrecking the train was robbery, that he might get money to secure a divorce from his wife and wed another female, on whom he was mad. Jack is saved the trouble and expense of getting a legal separation from his wife, for last week she applied for and was granted a divorce from him in the Whitley county circuit court. Jack is very sore about the matter and threatens the woman with vengeance, if he ever gets out of jail. He is still looked up at Albion and his sentence will not be passed until after the trial of Winebrener. Ryan is an important witness and his being held there will save the expense of bringing him back from the prison north."

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Denver Tribune: The "bloody shirt" is worn out. It simply takes up time and does not convince any one. It is a rain washed and wind torn old poster of politics which no one can ever patch up into anything effective. The antiquarians should give us a rest.

—Nashville American: If the national democratic convention, which is to meet in Chicago the coming summer, can agree upon a platform, there must be concessions from both extremes on the tariff question and a fair middle ground accepted.

—Springfield Republican: Neal Dow uses a column in the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette to prove that Prohibition prohibits in Maine. And Nasby, who has just gone over the ground, adds his personal testimony to the same. If Nasby couldn't get any whisky in the State it must be scarce.

—St. Louis Republican: They kill negroes in Ohio for the purpose of selling their bodies to the medical colleges for dissection, and in Massachusetts they occasionally tan their skins. This is nearly as bad as they do in Copiah, Miss. It, however, is putting the negroes to a bad use in a political point of view, for very little capital can be made of them when killed north of Mason and Dixon's line.

—Chicago Inter Ocean: To say the least, the receiving of three dead bodies inside of four hours after they were murdered, by the demonstrator of anatomy in a medical college, has a bad look. The high standing of Dr. Cilley will protect him from any complicity in the crime of the two vile assassins, but the carelessness of receiving bodies from such ghouls will only increase the prejudices of the public against the profession. The time has fully arrived when all such affairs should be arranged and regulated by law, and done openly and not in the dark.

The Chicago Herald thus takes the point out of many a paragraph:

People who are twitting the democracy with always playing second fiddle in the time of holding their conventions should remember that, with but one exception—the convention of 1848—the party in power has invariably led off in this matter. This has been the rule since 1836, and, with the one exception noted, it has never been violated. It seems to have been a custom based upon the fact that it is usually the duty of the party in power to take the lead and indicate its principles and policy, so that the minority may know what it has to combat.

The Civil Service law is very pretty in theory, says the Boston Globe, but in practice it seems to work quite differently from what the reformers professed to expect. It is charged that the examinations are mere bluffs, and that the positions go by favor, not by merit. It is the testimony of one of the most capable and experienced officers in the service that more than three-fourths of those who have passed an examination are as far from the expected positions as when they started. Females, except favorites, are systematically discriminated against. The only way to reform the Service is to fill the great offices with honest men. "Turn the rascals out!" of high places, and corruptionists will soon be weeded out of the Departments. Then make merit, not favor, the test, both in appointment and promotion.

NUMBER 17.

A Tale of the Denver Express in the Earlier Days of Colorado.

At a certain point on the banks of the Missouri River, or rather—as it has the habit of abandoning and destroying said banks—at a safe distance therefrom, there is a town from which a railroad takes its departure for its long climb up the natural incline of the great plains to the base of the mountains; hence the importance to this town of the large but somewhat shabby building serving as terminal station. In its smoky interior, late in the evening, and not very long ago, a train was nearly ready to start. It was a train possessing a certain consideration. For the benefit of a public easily gulled and enamored of grandiloquent terms it was advertised as the "Denver Fast Express;" sometimes, with strange unfitness, as the "Lightning Express;" "elegant" and "palatial" cars were declared to be included therein, and its departure was one of the great events of the twenty-four hours in the country round about.

The trainmen used no fine phrases. They called it simply "No. 17," and when it started said it had "pulled out."

On the evening in question there it stood, nearly ready. Just behind the great hissing locomotive, with its parabolic headlight and its coal laden tender, came the baggage, mail, and express cars; then the passenger coaches, in which the social condition of the occupants seemed to be in inverse ratio to their distance from the engine. First came emigrants—"honest miners," cowboys and laborers, Irishmen, Germans, Welshmen, Menonites from Russia, quaint of garb and speech, and Chinamen; and then in the great Pullman "sleepers" the busy black porters were making up the berths for well to do travelers of diverse nationalities and occupations. It was a curious study for a thoughtful observer, this motley crowd of human beings, sinking all differences of race, creed, habits, in the common purpose to move westward—to the mountain fastnesses, the sagebrush deserts, the Golden Gate.

The warning bell had sounded and the fireman leaned far out for the signal. The gong struck sharply, the conductor shouted, "All aboard!" and raised his hand, the tired ticket seller shut his window and the train moved out of the station, gathered way as it cleared the outskirts of the town, rounded a curve, entered on an absolutely straight line, and with one long whistle from the engine scudded down to its work. Through the night hours it sped on, passed lonely ranches and infrequent stations, by, and across shallow streams fringed with cottonwood trees, over greenish yellow buffalo grass, near the old trail where many a poor emigrant, many a bold frontiersman, many a brave soldier, had laid his bones but a short time before.

Familiar as they may be, there is something strangely impressive about all-night journeys by rail; and those forming part of an American transcontinental trip are almost weird. From the windows of a night express in Europe or the older portions of the United States one looks on houses and lights and cultivated fields, on fences and hedges, and, hurled as he may be through the darkness, he has a sense of companionship and semi-security. Far different is it when the long train is running over those two ralls which, seen before night set in, seemed to meet on the horizon. Within all is as if between two great seaboard cities—the neatly dressed people, the uniformed officials, the handsome fittings, the various appliances for comfort. Without are now low, dreary levels, now deep and wild canyons, now an environment of strange and grotesque rock formations—castles, battlements, churches, statues. The antelope fleetly runs and the coyote skulks away from the track, and the gray wolf sullenly howls from away off. It is a bit of civilization, a family or community, its belongings and surroundings complete, were flying through regions barbarous and inhospitable.

From the cab of engine No. 82 the driver of the Denver Express saw, showing faintly in the early morning, the buildings grouped about the little station ten miles ahead where breakfast awaited his passengers. He looked at his watch; he had just twenty minutes in which to run the distance, as he had run it often before. Something, however, traveled faster than he. From the smoky station out of which the train passed the night before, along the slender wire stretched on rough poles at the side of the track, a spark of that mysterious something which we call electricity flashed at the moment he returned the watch to his pocket, and in five minutes time the station master came out on the platform a little more thoughtful than was his wont, and looked eastward for the smoke of the train. With but three of the passengers in that train has this little tale specially to do and they are all in the new and comfortable Pullman City of Cheyenne. One was a tall, well made man of about thirty; blond, blue eyed, bearded, straight, sinewy, alert. Of all in the train he seemed the most thoroughly at home, and the respectful greeting of the conductor as he passed through the car marked him as an officer of the road. Such was he, Henry Sinclair, assistant engineer, quite famed on the line, high in favor with the directors, and a rising man in all ways. It was known on the road that he was expected in Denver, and there were rumors that he was to organize the parties for the survey of an important extension. Beside him sat his pretty young wife.

The third passenger in question had just been in conversation with Sinclair, and the latter was telling his wife of their curious meeting. Entering the toilet room at the rear of the car, he said, he had begun his ablutions by the side of another man, and it was as they were rubbing their faces with water that he heard the cry:

"Why, major, is that you? Just to think of meeting you here!" A man of about twenty-eight years, slight, muscular, wiry, had seized his wet hand and was wringing it. A keen observer might have seen about him some signs of a jeuness orgeuse, but his manner was frank and pleasing. Sinclair looked him in the face, puzzled for a moment.

"Don't you remember Foster?" asked the man.

"Of course I do," replied Sinclair. "For a moment I could not place you. Where have you been, and what have you been doing?"

"Oh," replied Foster, laughing, "I've braced up and turned over a new leaf. I'm a respectable member of society, have a place in the express company, and am going to Denver to take charge."

"I am very glad to hear it, and you must tell me your story when we have had our breakfast."

The pretty young woman was just about to ask why Foster was when the speed of the train slackened, and the brakeman opened the door of the car and cried out in stentorian tones:

"Pawnee Junction, twenty minutes for refreshments."

When the celebrated Rocky Mountain gold excitement broke out, more than twenty years ago, and people painted "Pike's Peak or Bust" on the canvas covers of their wagons and started for the diggings, they established a "trail" or "trace" leading in a south-westerly direction from the old one to California. At a certain point on this trail a frontiersman named Barker built a forlorn ranchhouse and corral and offered what is conveniently called entertainment for man and beast. For years he lived there, dividing his time between fighting the Indians and feeding the passing emigrants and their stock. Then the first railroad to Denver was built, taking another route from the Missouri, and Barker's occupation was gone. He retired with his gains to St. Louis and lived in comfort. Years passed on and the extension over which our train is to pass was planned. The old pioneers were excellent natural engineers and their successors could not find so better route than they had chosen. "Barker's" became, during the construction period, an important point and the frontiersman's name to figure on time tables. Meanwhile the place passed through a process of evolution which would have delighted Darwin. In the party of engineers which first camped there was Sinclair, and it was by his advice that the contractors selected it for division headquarters. Then came drinking "saloons" and gambling houses, alike the inevitable concomitant and the bane of Western settlements; then scattered houses and shops and a shabby so called hotel, in which the letting of miserable rooms, divided from each other by canvas partitions, was wholly subordinated to the business of the bar. Before long Barker's had acquired a worse reputation than even other towns of its type, those abnormal and uncanny aggregations of squalor and vice which dotted the plains in those days; and it was at its worst when Sinclair returned thither and took up his quarters in the engineer's building. The passion for gambling was raging, and to pandar thereto were collected as chieftains a lot of desperadoes as ever "stoched" cards or loaded dice. It came to be noticed that they were on excellent terms with a man called "Jeff" Johnson, who was licensee of the hotel; and to be suspected that said Johnson, in local parlance, "stood in with them." With this man had come to Barker's his daughter Sarah, commonly known as "Sally," a handsome girl with straight, lithe figure, fine features, reddish auburn hair, and dark blue eyes. It is but fair to say that even the "toughs" of a place like Barker's show some respect for the other sex; and Miss Sally's case was no exception, to the rule. The male population admired her; they said she "put on heaps of style;" but none of them had seemed to make any program in her good graces.

On a pleasant afternoon, just after the track had been laid some miles west of Barker's, and construction trains were running with some regularity to and from the end thereof, Sinclair sat on the rude veranda of the engineer's quarters smoking his well colored meerschaum and looking at the sunset. The atmosphere had been so clear during the day that glimpses were had of Long's and Pike's peaks, and, as the young engineer gazed at the gorgeous cloud display, he was thinking of the miper's quaint and pathetic idea that the dead "go over the range."

"Nice looking, ain't it, major?" asked a voice at his elbow, and he turned to see one of the contractor's officials taking a seat near him.

"More than nice looking to my mind, Sam," he replied. "What is the news to day?"

"Notin' much. There's a sight of talk about the dole's of them far an' keno sharps. The boys is getting kinder riled, for they allow the game ain't on the square with a cent. Some of 'em down to the tie camp was a-talkin' about a vigilance committee, an' I wouldn't be surprised if they mean business. was to Laramie before he come here, an' Foster knewed fairly up there. I allow he moved here to see her. Hello! If there they ain't a comin' now."

Down a path leading from the town, past the railroad building, and well on to the prairie, Sinclair saw the girl walking with the "young fellow." He was talking earnestly to her, and her eyes were cast down. She looked pretty, and, in a way, graceful; and there was in her attire a noticeable attempt at modesty and a faint reminiscence of bygone fashions.

After breakfast next morning, when Sinclair was sitting at the table in his office, busy with maps and plans, the door was thrown open and Foster, panting for breath, ran in.

"Major Sinclair," he said, speaking with difficulty,
"I've no claim on you, but I ask you to protect me.
The other gamblers are going to hang me. They are more than ten to one. They will track me here and, unless you harbor me, I'm a dead man."

Sinclair rose from his chair in a second and walked to the window. A party of men were approaching the building. He turned to Foster,

"I do not like your trade," said he, "but I will not see you murdered if I can help it. You are welcome here."

Foster said, "Thank you," stood still a moment and then began to pace the room, rapidly clenching his hands, his whole frame quivering, his eyes flashing fire—"for all the world," Sinclair said, in telling the story afterward, "like a caged tiger."

"By heavens!" he muttered, with concentrated intensity, "to be trapped, trapped like this!"

Sinclair stepped quickly to the door of his bedroom and motioned Foster to enter. Then there came a knock at the outside door, and he opened it, and stood on the threshold erect and firm. Half a dozen "toughs" faced him.

"Major," said their spokesman, "we want that man."

"You can not have him, boys."

"Major, we're a-goin' to take 'im."

"You had better not try," said Sinclair, with a perfect ease and self-possession, and in a pleasant voice.
"I have given him shelter, and you can only get him over my dead body. Of course you can kill me, but you won't do even that without one or two of you going down, and then you know very well, boys, what will happen. You know that if you lay a finger on a railroad man it's all up with you.
There are 500 men in the graders' camp not five miles away, and you don't need to be told that in less than in one hour after they get word there won't be a piece of you big enough to bury!"

The men made no reply. They looked him straight in the eyes for a moment. Had they seen a sign or flinching they might have risked the issue, but there was none. With muttered curses they slunk away. Sinclair shut and bolted the door, then opened the one leading to the bedroom.

"Mr. Foster," he said, "the train will pass here in half an hour. Have you money enough?"

"Plenty, major."

"Very well; keep perfectly quiet, and I will try to get you safely off." He went to an adjoining room and called Sam, the contractor's man. He took in the situation at a glance. "Wall, Foster," said he, "kinder close call for yer, warn't it? Guess yer'd better be gittin' up an' gittin' pretty lively.
The train boys will take yer through, an' yer kin come back when this racket's worked out."

Sinclair glanced at his watch; then he walked to the window and looked out. On a small mesa or elevated plateau commanding the path to the railroad he saw a number of men with rifles.

"Just as I expected," he said. "Sam, ask one of the boys to go down to the track and, when the train arrives, tell the conductor to come here."

In a few moments the whistle was heard, and the conductor entered the building. Receiving his instructions he returned, and immediately an engine and tender, and on the platform appeared the train men, with their rifles, covering the group on the bluff. Sinclair put on his hat.

"Now, Foster," said he, "we have no time to lose. Take Sam's arm and mine and walk between us."

The trio left the building and walked deliberately to the railroad. Not a word was spoken. Besides the men in sight on the train, two, behind the window blinds of one passenger coach and unseen, kept their fingers on the triggers of their repeating carbines. It seemed a long time, counted by anxious seconds, until Foster was safe in the coach.

"All ready, conductor," said Sinclair. "Now, Foster, good by. I am not good at lecturing, but if I were you I would make this the turning point in my life."

Foster was much moved.

"I will do it, major," said he, "and I shall never forget what you have done for me today. I am sure we shall meet again."

With another shriek from the whistle the train started. Sinclair and Sam saw the men quietly returning the firearms to their places as it moved away. Then they walked back to their quarters. The men on the mesa, balked of their purpose, had withdrawn. Sam accompanied Sinclair to his and their satisfaction was not long in coming. I think I'll let out and find some of the boys. I don't go on till I know anything about it, but I'll go on till I know something about it. Three nights after this a powerful party of vigilantes, stern and inexorable, made a raid on all the gambling dens, broke the tables and apparatus, and conducted the men to a distance from the town, where they left them with an emphasis and warning of the consequences of any attempt to return. An exception was made in the case of Barker's case, but only for the sake of his daughter, for it was found that she was a "good girl" and had been married on his house.

Ever long he found it convenient to sell his business and retire to a town some miles to the westward, where the railroad influence was not as strong as at Barker's. At about this time Sinclair made his arrangements to go to New York, with the "famous" prospect of marrying the young lady in Fifth avenue. In due course he arrived at Barker's with his young and charming wife and remained for some days. These changes were attended, of course, with a loss of respectability and a loss of business. A neat station stood where had been the rough contractor's building. At a new "Windsor" (or was it "Brunswick") the performance of the kitchen contrasted sadly (almost how common is such contrast in these regions!) with the promise of the menu. There was a tawdry theater, replete "Academy of Music," and there was not much to choose in the way of elegance between two "meeting houses."

"Upon my word, my dear," said Sinclair to his wife, "I ought to be ashamed to say it, but I prefer Barker's as natural."

One evening, just before the young people left the town, and as Mrs. Sinclair sat alone in bed, the frosty waitress announced "a lady," and was requested to bid her enter. A woman came with timid steps into the room, sat down as invited, and removed her veil. Of course the young bride had never known Sally Johnson, the "Whilom belle of Barker's," but her husband would have noticed at a glance how greatly she had changed from the girl who walked with Foster past the engineer's quarters. It would be hard to find a more striking contrast than was presented by the two women as they sat facing each other; the one in the flush of health and beauty, calm, sweet, self-possessed; the other still retaining some of the shabby refinement of old days, but pale and haggard, with black rings under her eyes, and a pathetic air of humiliation.

"Mrs. Sinclair," she hurriedly began, "you do not know me, or the like of me. I've got no right to speak to you, but I couldn't help it. Oh! please believe me, I'd not real downright bad. I'm Sally Johnson, daughter of a man they drove out of the town. My mother died when I was little, and I never had a shore; and folks think, because I live with my father, and he's a bad man, that I'm a bad girl. I must be in with them and be of their sort. I never had a woman to speak a kind word to me, and I've had so much trouble that I've just drove wild and like to kill myself; and then I was at the station when you came in, and I saw your sweet face and the kind look in your eyes, and it came to my heart that I'd speak to you, if I did it." She leaned eagerly forward, her hands nervously closed on the back of a chair, "I suppose your husband never told you of me; like enough he never knew me; but I'll never forget him as long as I live. When he was here before there was a young man" (here a faint color came in the wan cheeks, "who was fond of me, and I thought the world of him, and my father was down on him, and the men that father was in with wanted to kill him," and Mrs. Sinclair saved his life. He's gone away, and I've waited and waited for him to come back, and perhaps I'll never see him again. But oh! dear lady, I'll never forget what your husband did. He's a good man, and he deserves the love of a dear, good woman like you, and if I could I'd pray for you both, night and day."

She stopped suddenly and sank back in her seat, as if before, and as if frightened by her own emotion. Mrs. Sinclair had listened with sympathy and increasing interest.

"My poor girl," she said, speaking tenderly (she had a lovely, soft voice) and with slightly heightened color, "I am delighted that you came to see me, and that my husband was able to help you. Tell me, can we do more for you? I do not for one moment believe you can be happy with your present surroundings. Can we not assist you to leave them?"

The girl arose, sadly shaking her head. "I thank you for your kind words," she said; "I don't suppose I'll ever see you again, but I'll say God bless you."

She caught Mrs. Sinclair's hand, pressed it to her lips, and was gone.

Sinclair found his wife very thoughtful when he came home, and he listened with much interest to her story.

"Poor girl," said he, "Foster is the man to help her. I wonder where he is. I must inquire about him."

The next day they proceeded on their way to San Francisco, and, matters drifted on at Barker's much as before. Johnson had, after an absence of some months, come back and lived without molestation, amid the shifting population. Now and then, too, the older residents fancied they recognized under slouched combers the face of some of his former "crowd" about the "Ranchman's House," as his gaudy saloon was called.

Democratic Committee Meeting.

The Democratic County Central Committee will meet at the Court House in Auburn on TUESDAY, MARCH 18TH, 1884. All the members of the committee are expected to be present.

M. BOLAND, Chairman.

John Bell has been appointed temporary committee man for west Keyser.

A few disconsolate radicals gathered at Auburn on the 29th ult., and engaged in a pow wow, which they call a mass convention, but for some reason or other the "masses" failed to put in an appearance. The boys present went through the usual performance of reorganizing their central committee, the appointment of delegates to the various conventions pending, and then adjourned for refreshments. The radical meeting of the 29th was indeed a solemn occasion. "Few and short were the prayers they said." It is true that Bob Lockhart, the wild-eyed liar of the party machine, tried to infuse a little life into the old concern in his windy harangue upon being chosen permanent chairman, or what the Republican calls "our standard bearer," but the versatile Bob or no other man living can raise the dead.

The Spring elections take place on the first Tuesday in April, which will occur on the 1st day of the month.

The offices to be filled this year are: One Trustee, 2 Justices of the Peace, 2 Constables and Supervisor of Roads. The Assessor, according to the decision of the Attorney-General, whose opinion we published a few weeks ago, holds over for two years from April 1, '84, elected in '82, and under the provisions of the constitutional amendments that is a four years' office now.

But little is said respecting local candidates; however, in conformity with party usages, all things equal and on the square, the old officers will be re-nominated.

We presume the action of the committee meeting next Tuesday will determine the time of holding the next Richland caucus.

While on this subject we would remind our democratic brethren of the importance of rolling up an increased majority next April in order to start the boom for '84, and we urge upon every body to be present at the next town meeting, which will be duly announced next week.

Sally, keep your eye on the gun!

A Chicago paper says that the President, as a politician, has good, hard barnyard sense.

It will be seen by reference to a notice elsewhere in this paper, that the chairman of the County Central Committee has called a meeting of the committee men for next Tuesday (18th) at the court house, in Auburn. This call of course means business, and is the signal gun of the campaign of '84.

It is hoped that care will be taken in the selection of a committee for duty in the present campaign, of men who have a little business and vim in their make-up. A committee man who will sulk in his tent and come only when called out by selfish motives, is n. g. to the party organization.

Such a man is a wart.

Let him be fired.

Put up live men, and by all means honest men, or else put up the shutters! We need, and must have a thorough organization, and withal efficient and capable leaders to push the column to victory.

Organize at once!

Up and at 'em boys.

The Cincinnati Enquirer sent out 8,000 circulars to democrats in Indiana, inviting them to make known to its Indianapolis bureau their first and second choice for the Presidency. These letters of inquiry were answered as follows:

General Negley, of Pittsburgh, thinks that Robert Lincoln stands the best chance of getting the Republican nomination at Chicago.

Corunna Headlight

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

Entered at the Postoffice in Corunna, Indiana, as second-class matter

SATURDAY.....MARCH 16, 1884.

We have received a copy of the somewhat noted speech of Hon. Robert Lowry, M. C., on the Chalmers-Manning contested election case, which has been highly commended by the democratic press as one of the ablest of the present session. Our limited space prevents a review of Mr. Lowry's speech, which we would be glad to give had we room.

It is the idea of the New York News that the Democratic national convention should "unanimously tender" the nomination to ex-President Samuel J. Tilden, and leave it optional with him to decline or accept.

Some of our democratic friends have suggested the idea of forming a young men's democratic club in this village and vicinity. The suggestion is timely, and although some may think it rather early in the campaign, yet the sooner such a club is formed the better. Let the work of party organization begin at once.

Dorsey's successor, Chairman Sabin, says he will make the campaign this year on the motto so persistently used four years ago, "Let well enough alone." Sabin, whose wares are made by convicts working for fifty cents a day, may have no reason to complain, but the men who are compelled to compete with that kind of labor are muttering ominously.

In booming ex-Governor Isaac P. Gray for the gubernatorial candidacy, Parker, of the Kendallville News, has got himself into hot water by an untimely and illtempered article reflecting upon the merits of Judge Holman, who is likewise a great favorite and a prominent candidate. Parker is very unfortunate in his "boom," they generally end in vexation and wind.

The New York republicans have broken and utterly repudiated their promise to the temperance people of the State, who are greatly incensed thereat, and threaten to take reprisals at the next election.

The Auburn Courier is opposed to the proposition to secure the appointment of Miss Lizzie Nutt, sister of young James Nutt, the slayer of their villain Dukes, for the murder of their father, as postmistress of Uniontown, Pa., on the grounds that it is a moral wrong to award criminals and fallen women with public positions. We are fearful that Mr. Barnes is too virtuous by half. Give Lizzie the postoffice.

Editor Loveland of the Headlight appeared on our streets the other day with his left eye wrapped up in a cotton handkerchief. Oliver Rosenberry has probably accepted the challenge offered through that journal to meet the editor by moonlight out upon the green. - Auburn Republican.

Tally one for Roy. But our one is not as bad as one Houser had on his hands some time ago, when Byron Rainier closed both of his eyes and disabled the Republican editor from active duty for a month.

Professor B. F. Griffee, lecturer under the auspices of the State Deputy Grand Worthy Chief Templars, entertained our citizens with a series of three lectures at the M. E. Church last week. Professor Griffee is a worker on behalf of the Prohibition movement which promises to be an important factor in the approaching political struggle in this State. He is a forcible speaker, and although somewhat radical in his views, seems to be an honest advocate of the cause he represents.

Dr. Cowan, of Auburn, was handsomely remembered by his army comrades and other personal friends, on Saturday last, the occasion being the forty-first anniversary of the Doctor's birthday.

Oh, the mud, the slippery mud,
Making men fall with a sickening thud!
Slipping and sliding and swearing they go,
Exclaiming, "Tis worse than the beautiful snow!"

This is March weather with a vengeance.
The Winter term of our village school closed last week.

A break-up in the weather commenced Tuesday, and the present indications are favorable for sugar making.

Samuel Treesh, living about two miles south-east of Corunna, died on Sunday night last of typhoid pneumonia after a short illness.

The friends of Mrs. Dunfee, who has been very feeble during the winter with a chronic lung complaint; will be glad to learn that she is convalescent and able to be up and around the house again.

Kendallville Times: We "rise to remark" that Jos. Loveland, of the Headlight, publishes a "live" local paper. Jos. is always on deck with good local matter, if he is located in a small town.

The third week of the February term of County Court finds a large amount of business disposed of, with a fair prospect that the docket will be cleared next week. This speaks well for Judge McBride's efficient manner in pushing business.

In an altercation this (Thursday) morning between night operator Doc. Fisher and J. W. Helmer, the latter "went" for the former with a railroad tie; but Doc. bravely held the fort. In the retreat Helmer threatened Doc. with a dose of cold lead, and now there is blood on the moon!

Last week was a busy grain week at this station. A string of teams could be seen day after day until the close of the week Saturday night lining the depot grounds, waiting their turns to unload. Number of pounds of grain received that week: 482,400—9,557 bushels—making 18 car loads of wheat and two of oats.

Chas. H. Knapp is mentioned in connection with the republican nomination for Trustee of Richland. Charley is what the boys term a "good fellow," and would no doubt make an excellent official; but he is too good a man to put up for a shooting match as a party morrice in these piping times of assured democratic victories.

Speaker Randall is reported as having called upon the stage of Grammarcy Park and the result is said to be strengthening Payne.

A Delegate's Ditty.

The busy politician
Bloometh,
And lofty his ambition Loometh.
To be a delegate he Seeketh,
And with an air elate he Speaketh.

Great schemes of circumvention Showeth,
Ere he to the convention Goeth.
His heart beneath his collar
Swelleth,
When friends the shining dollar Shoeth.

CHORUS:

Then hurrah for the broom
That will sweep the gloom,
Which lays on us an embargo!
There's plenty of room
For a thundering boom
In the City of Chicago.

Some weeks ago we offered a mild protest against the present train accommodations on the Air Line. The Kendallville Standard is also constrained to "kick," as will be seen by the following paragraph, which we clip from a late issue of that paper:

The public who are obliged to travel on the L. S. & M. & E. R., on freight trains are very poorly accommodated, and much complaint is the result on the line between Elkhart and Butler, a very limited number of freight trains are allowed to carry passengers, and they run at unreasonable hours. It often requires shrewd management to get to Brimfield and Wawaka, and then house again without losing more time than it would require to walk or get a private conveyance, and to reach Corunna, return the same day, unless you choose to walk one way or the other. Butler might possibly be reached by going via LaOtto.

M. A. Baughman, one of our village druggists, has really "gone and done it," by this we mean that he has taken unto himself a rib. Mr. Baughman was recently married to Miss Clara McDonald, of this place, and the wedded pair are now enjoying the delicious sweets of the honeymoon among the friends of the groom way down "behind Wooster."

LITERARY NOTE.

THE CONTINENT Weekly Magazine was started in Philadelphia in Philadelphia but from the fact that Judge Tourge acquired the property it is destined for New York. The only question was when the move should be made to the city that has now become the literary as well as the commercial metropolis of the country. Simultaneously with the move The Continent publishes an extraordinary array of advantageous offers to subscribers, especially to those who are in the habit of buying other periodicals, who will do well to examine The Continent's "Combination Rates" before settling themselves with periodicals for the coming year. The Continent has made its place in the literary world unoccupied, and it is a wonder that the old "weekly magazine, like the monthlies, but more frequent publication," as the Philadelphia paper puts it, was never thought of before. It makes an attractive array of good things for the eye and begins the season with a remarkable story, "Orpheus C. Kerr," entitled "Once There was a Man," which is a "story" of the good old-fashioned kind, but the inevitable humorist has invaded the work which is a carefully written important novel, a subtle bit of villainy which has numerous warring as the joke develops. The same are offered to those who subscribe from the beginning of this serial, which is handsomely printed and all who are not familiar with this effort are invited to ask for a specimen copy.

Theodore Hoffman, the murderer of the peddler Marks, at White Plains, New York, has been sentenced to be hanged on April 18th.

Jacob Block, on trial at Greensburg, Indiana, murderer of Eli Frank, has been found guilty of murder in the second degree, the penalty being life imprisonment.

David McLain, white, who enticed W. S. Raxton to his gate February 6th, 1879, and shot him dead in the presence of his family, was hanged Friday at Traders' Hill, Georgia. McLain raved like a maniac.

A rumor is current in Ottawa, Canada, that the Governor General has received threatening letters from the Fenian Brotherhood at Chicago. The guard at Rideau Hall is doubled.

Alexander Keys, on trial at Lafayette, Indiana, for killing Samuel Stewart, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree and his punishment fixed at life imprisonment.

At Lake Providence, Louisiana, Noah Jackson, a negro, was hanged for the murder of his fifteen-years-old wife on the 7th of last July. The execution was witnessed by two thousand people. Jealousy was the cause of the crime.

The State Central Committee has issued a call for the Democratic State Convention, to be held at Indianapolis, Wednesday, June 25th, 1884.

Returning to the subject of the M. E. Church vs. Rev. Dr. B. G. Cissel, for selling liquors in violation of church rules—which by the way is about as good reading as we can get in these dull times—the much fired ex-clerical gentleman, in conjunction with his boon sympathising friends, persist in representing to those unacquainted with the case, that the charges preferred against him were not sustained, or rather disproved, which is a rank lie and they know it.

In the first place, before the case came to trial, which was set for hearing March 4th, and Rev. B. A. Camp of Lagrange was appointed by the presiding elder, Mendenhall, to preside at the said trial, Dr. Cissel believing discretion to be the better part of valor took "French leave" of the Methodist Church, and under false pretences offered himself to the U. B. Church and was taken in demijohn and all.

Under the flimsy plea that the affidavits of three citizens, before a justice of the peace exonerating him, would be sufficient evidence that Dr. Cissel is an innocent and much abused citizen, the U. B. Church took him in, and now sitting in the pulpit Sabbath after Sabbath the pastor of that church seeks to shield and whitewash the bug juice doings of the decapitated "divine." This is too thin by a jugful.

The charges of selling liquor contrary to the M. E. Church discipline are still pending, and will be heard at the next session of the annual conference.

To show that we are guided by authority in what we have stated above, and that they are facts beyond controversy, the following entry appears in the official minutes of the quarterly conference held in Noble county February 2, 1884:

"Question 18. Has the character of the local preachers been examined?

"Case of Dr. B. G. Cissel—

"Answer—B. G. Cissel, local elder, called up and pending bill of charges, his character was not passed."

The above report being referred to presiding Elder Mendenhall he ordered a record to be made as follows: "Withdrawn under charges."

Quite a commotion was created upon our streets yesterday among the grain buyers, by a report that the old night operator had received orders to vacate his office April 1st to give place to the son-in-law of J. W. Helmer. It seems that Helmer made a flying trip to Toledo the other day, evidently with the avowed purpose of getting his son-in-law the position, for reasons best known to himself, but what powerful arguments John used to induce this change remains a mystery. Among the three grain buyers here Helmer is by no means the most important, and the others naturally 'kick' at this apparent show of favoritism. Mr. Fisher has been at this place for over three years, and during that time has served his constituency well, and we can assure Superintendent Kline that he will best serve his patrons by retaining the old operator. Perhaps after all this is an April fool joke.

One would conclude from reading the Waterloo Press that benbane Willis has elder on the brain. The uncompoop's belly must be full of cider, or something stronger, by the way he harps on the subject. There is danger that he is bordering on softening of the brain, but this is a prevailing weakness with radical editors.

The Democrats of the Ohio Legislature, in caucus yesterday, adopted the Graded Tax Bill, exempting the wholesale liquor dealers and brewers.

Prentiss Teller, who robbed the Pacific Express Company at St. Louis of $90,000, was captured at Milwaukee on the 18th with the swag on his person. He was disguised as a tramp and about to leave for Detroit.

The trial train of the new fast mail system between Chicago and Omaha made the 800 mile run from Chicago to Ottumwa, Ia., in seven hours, and overtook there the regular train, which left Chicago at 10 in the evening.

The first through train from the United States to the capital of Mexico is expected to reach its destination next Saturday. With a new reciprocity treaty and a new railroad between the two countries the work of Americanizing Mexico and Mexicanizing the United States ought to go on swimmingly.

THE FAST MAIL SERVICE.

Its Importance to Western Points—A Saving of Seven Hours Between New York and Chicago.

From the Toledo Bee, March 11th.

The new fast mail train arrived at the Union depot Sunday evening at 6:07, about ten minutes late, and departed eight minutes behind time. Quite a delegation of Toledo citizens was present to welcome its advent. The delay was due to a blinding snow storm which it encountered west of Erie. The train was composed of three express cars, the fast mail car "Cleveland," "Governor Tod," "Wayne McVeagh and Governor Brough" and a private coach. In the latter car were Postmaster General Graham, W. B. Thompson, Superintendent of the railway mail service, and Frank Hutton, First Assistant Postmaster-General.

Mr. Thompson stated that he had no doubt this new train will prove a success. It is hoped that it will be something like the famous East Mail of seven or eight years ago that rendered such efficient and satisfactory service to the people living along the line of the Lake Shore and New York Central roads. It is not intended that the new train will be from half an hour to three hours late, as the old one was occasionally, but instead, that it will be kept as nearly on schedule time as the fastest engines and best engineers on the road are capable of running it.

The train left New York at 8:50 o'clock Saturday night and arrived at Albany at 1:00 Monday morning. There a postal car from Boston, containing the west-bound mail from the Eastern States, was attached. The run from Albany to Buffalo was made in eight hours and twenty minutes, the latter pace being reached at 9:55 yesterday morning. A stop of fifteen minutes was made at Buffalo, the train leaving there at 9:50 and arriving at Cleveland at 2:04 o'clock city time. Toledo was reached at 4:57.

Lieutenant Governor Ricker, of Halifax, has received intelligence from Ottawa that the dynamiters are expected to renew their attempts to injure government property there. A number of special constables were sworn in and extra precautions are to be taken day and night.

The white elephant business is quite active. Adon Edwards, who never gets left, is on the heels of Barcum to this line. His white elephant left Chicago Thursday.

The question, does prohibition prohibit is about to be tried in Iowa by a practical test, the Legislature having already passed a bill covering that point. The State Senate will undoubtedly pass it, when the Governor will make it a law by his signature.

Commissioner's Court

Will probably adjourn today. It has had a busy and protracted session, what with the disposition of voluminous ditch cases, financial matters, and more particularly the liquor cases, of which the last Republican makes the following mention:

The case which is now pending before the county commissioners in which a large number of citizens are opposing the granting of liquor license, to Peter Loutsenizer and Augustus Stutz is creating no little excitement on all sides and is regarded with much interest by both parties. The liquor league has employed D. D. Moody to champion their cause, while J. E. Ross is contending for the rights of the offshoots to remonstrate in the case. The trial began on Monday at 2 o'clock and continued until 9 at night, when they adjourned until 8 o'clock Tuesday morning and again began the proceedings, fighting every inch of ground with desperation on both sides until noon when they again adjourned until Wednesday afternoon. At present it is hard to foretell the result, but there is evidently a great deal of interest manifested on both sides as is shown by the groups of people on the street corners and in the stores, whose chief conversation seems to drift in the direction of the case now on trial. Up to this time they have been working only on the case of Mr. Loutsenizer and the indications are that it has not stretched more than half its length yet.

Fred. Imus still remains in a feeble condition, there being no material change for the better since our last issue. The case appears to be a very stubborn type of lung fever, which he evidently contracted while at work in the malarial districts of the great Black Swamp. Mr. Imus is blessed with a robust constitution, and with this to build upon it is believed that he will eventually recover.

The "Hemlock" a Dive that has been in full blast on the Parks corner for some time, closed doors Thursday night, and the proprietor decamped by moonlight.

It is reported that George W. Beck, the miller, and his wife have agreed to disagree.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Chicago News: The opinion still holds that if John A. Logan is elected Mrs. Logan will make one of the best presidents we have ever had.

—Portsmouth (O.) Times: Tilden is being boomed for the coming presidential race. His very name is a holy terror to the children of fraud and their co-workers.

—Hayesville (O.) Journal: Cincinnati pigs grow so fat that you can hang one on a lamppost, set fire to its tail, and it will burn all night and give more light than a Brush electric pole.

—Canton [Ohio] Democrat: Why should any democrat be afraid to have a democratic congress attempt to lessen the burdens that oppress the people by scaling down the tariff?

Piedmont [Ga] Press: Don't look down on a laboring man. Who was your father? Who was your grandfather? Who was your uncle? Who was your great-uncle? Who are you, anyway?

—Ironton (O.) Register: If congress passes the law copyrighting Associated press dispatches, let them do the fair thing and make it criminal for the metropolitan press to steal their advanced ideas from the provincial papers.

—Rochester (Ind.) Sentinel: The "old ticket" boom will not down, and those who have other favorite candidates may as well yield to the inevitable. Tilden and Hendricks will be nominated and the question left with them to accept or reject the honor. They have lead the party where no other men could lead it, and it is but justice that they should be re-elected and enjoy the offices out of which they were defrauded eight years ago.

—Boston Globe: The big rascals of the star route constellation never were prosecuted. Will somebody tell why?

—Chattanooga People's Paper: When a Chicago woman wants a divorce she sends a little note to her lawyer. The next morning her husband pays over the alimony and she goes off and gets married again.

—Cincinnati News Journal: It is given out that Ben Butler will head Massachusetts' democratic delegation to the Chicago convention. The chairman and treasurer of the state central committee have been to Chicago, working up Butler boom for president, with Carter Harrison as a tail to the kite. Butler and Harrison! Ye gods and little fishes!

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: Day by day the democracy are approaching the White House, and the accidental inmate of that building may now bring out his fishing tackle and make arrangements with his old cronies for a gay, old fashioned season. One year from now the place that knows him will know him no more. Ta ta, Chester.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: Mr. Dorsey, the Star Route robber, who lead the Republican hosts to victory and to loot, and from whose hand the two dollar greenbacks fell like the gentle rain upon the parched soil to revive the withering Republican hopes in the campaign of 1880, announces that he is disgusted with politics. So far as he is concerned the grand old party may go to the demijohn powwows. This is the saddest misfortune of all to the grand old party. How can it go forth to victory when its greatest leader sulks in his tent? What can the grand old party do without Dorsey and his valise full of greenbacks?

Notes and Comments.

The foot and mouth disease raging among the cattle in Kansas, is pronounced by veterinary surgeons the genuine epizootic.

One hundred coal miners were suffocated by an explosion of gas in a mine at Potosi, Va., on the 14th.

Postmaster Chaffee thinks that Arthur is the coming man—that he can be elected. Of course all the boys who sit at Chet's table think so.

Edward Payson Weston completed his wonderful walking feat of 5,000 miles over the highways of England in the time fixed, one hundred days.

The Butler Review has us down for a fight with the Albion Democrat. We guess Mr. Leech is mistaken,—or a liar—as we are not on that concern's exchange list.

The Lake Shore railway Company is going into the ice business at Ashtabula Harbor. Plans for buildings and dock improvements have been agreed upon.

The Atlanta Constitution says that only two things stand between Mr. Tilden and the democratic nomination for President. One is his own consent. The other is death.

According to the latest mail reports, the price of wheat in London is lower than ever before in this century, the average quotations for the week covered by the mail reports being 36s 11d.

The International Laker resolution row is practically settled. Minister Sargent has accepted Bismark's invitation to a dinner in honor of Emperor William. American back-bone pie will constitute the piece de resistance.

The Dayton Journal is moved to remark: "It is significant that democratic papers universally are rejoicing over the reinstatement of Fitz John Porter."

To which the Cincinnati News Journal very aptly replies:

"That simply signifies that democratic papers universally rejoice over an act of justice. In this instance a good many republican papers join in the rejoicing."

The B. & O. is the popular route to the West. Judging from the large number of people going West over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, it must be the popular route. The people soon discover the line that gives them the most comfortable accommodations, and transport them safely and swiftly to their destination, at the lowest rates and with the fewest changes of cars.

General Conference M. E. Church at Philadelphia.

The following arrangements have been made with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. for the transportation of delegates, and their families, to Philadelphia, Pa., to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to be held in May, 1884.

Delegates, and their families, paying full regular fare from principal points within the territory of the joint executive committee, may be returned to such points upon continuous passage tickets at one-fourth the lowest unlimited rates, upon presentation of certificates properly issued through the Secretary of the organization under the order, and endorsed or stamped by the agent of the Committee in attendance at the meeting. Tickets to be for continuous passage, and good to return until May 31, 1884 inclusive.

County Clerk, J. W. Baxter, is considered the leading temperance worker in the county and he is not idle, for we notice that he has delivered several addresses within the last few weeks. Mr. Baxter does not think that it is a disgrace to be a temperance democrat, hence his actions. There are many temperance democrats as well as Republicans in this county, and they are showing good sense by their desire to get the question out of politics. No officer has ever occupied a position in the county with more regard for honest administration than Mr. Baxter, and when he turns his books over to his successor this fall he will do so with a consciousness that he has served the people, whose servant he is, and honored the party which placed him in office. We have no hesitancy in saying that Mr. Baxter has made the best Clerk the county has ever had and though all feel the utmost confidence in the efficiency and ability of Clerk-elect Husselman, yet they will regret to see Mr. Baxter retire from a place among the officials, which will not be until November, however.

The foregoing well merited compliment we clip from a late number of the Butler Review, and which we heartily endorse. Our past relations with Clerk Baxter have been such as to learn to esteem him highly. Mr. Baxter is a gentleman in all that the term gentleman implies: large of heart, true to a friend and magnanimous toward an opponent. As nothing succeeds like success, his official career has been most eminently successful. The Clerk's office after Mr. Baxter's retirement will not soon again be filled by a more manly man.

NUMBER 17.

A Tale of the Denver Express in the Earlier Days of Colorado.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAST ISSUE.)

On the very evening on which this story opens, and they were "making up" the Denver express in the train house on the Missouri, "Jim" Watkins, agent and telegrapher at Barber's, was sitting in his little office, communicating with the station room by the ticket window. Jim was a cool, silent, efficient man, and not much given to talking about such episodes in his past life as the "wiping out" by Indians of the construction party to which he belonged, and his own rescue by the scouts. He was smoking an old and favorite pipe and talking with one of the "boys," whose head appeared at the ticket window. On a seat in the station sat a woman in a black dress and veil, apparently waiting for a train. The woman suddenly rose and ran to the window.

"Mr. Watkins," cried she, "can I see you for a few moments where no one can interrupt us? It's a matter of life and death." She latched the sill with her thin hands, and her voice trembled. Watkins recognized Sally Johnson in a moment. He unbolted a door, motioned her to enter, closed, and again bolted it, and also closed the ticket window. Then he pointed to a chair, and the girl sat down and leaned eagerly forward.

"If they knew I was here," she said, in a hoarse whisper, "my life wouldn't be safe five minutes. I was waiting to tell you a terrible story, and then I heard who was in the train due here tomorrow night. Mr. Watkins, don't for God's sake ask me how I found out, but I hope to die if I ain't telling you the living truth. They're going to wreck that train—Number Seventeen—at Dead Man's Crossing, fifteen miles east, and rob the passengers and express car. It's the worst gang in the country—Perry's. They're going to throw the train off the track, the passengers will be maimed and killed, and Mr. Sinclair and his wife are on the cars. Oh, my God, Mr. Watkins, send them warning!"

She stood upright, her face deadly pale, her hands clasped. Watkins walked deliberately to the railroad map which hung on the wall and scanned it. Then he resumed his seat, laid his pipe down, fixed his eyes on the girl's face, and began to question her. At the same time his right hand, with which he had held the pipe, found its way to the telegraph key. None but an expert could have distinguished any change in the clicking of the instrument, which had been almost incessant; but Watkins had called the head office on the Missouri. In two minutes the "sounder" rattled out, "All right. What is it?"

Watkins went on with his questions, his eyes still fixed on the poor girl's face, and all the time his fingers, as it were, playing with the key. If he were imperturbable, so was not a man sitting at a receiving instrument nearly 500 miles away. He had "taken" but a few words when he jumped from his chair and cried:

"But that door and call the superintendent, and be quick! Charlie, brace up—lively—and come and write this up." With his wonderful electric pen—the handle several hundred miles long—Watkins, unknown to his interlocutor, was printing in the Morse alphabet this startling message: "Information received. Perry gang going to throw No. 17 off track—near six miles post, this division, about 9 tomorrow (Thursday) night. Kill passengers and rob express and mail. Am alone here. No chance to verify story, but believe it to be on square. Better make arrangements from your end to block game. No sheriff here now. Answer."

The superintendent, responding to the hasty summons, heard the message before the clerk had time to write it out. His lips were closely compressed as he put his own hand on the key and sent these laconic sentences: "O. K. Keep perfectly dark. Will message from this end."

Watkins, at Barber's, rose from his seat, opened the door a little way, saw that the station was empty, and then said to the girl, brusquely but kindly: "Sally, you've done the square thing and saved that train. I'll take care that you don't suffer and that you get well paid. Now come home with me, and my wife will look out for you."

"Oh! no," cried the girl, shrinking back, "I must run away. You're mighty kind, but I daren't go with you." Detecting a shade of doubt in his eyes, she added, "Don't be afraid, I'll die before they'll know I've given them away to you," and she disappeared in the darkness.

At the other end of the wire the superintendent had quietly impressed secrecy on his operator and clerk, ordered his fast mare harnessed, and gone to his private office.

"Head that," said he to his private secretary. "It was about time for some trouble of this kind, and now I'm going to let Uncle Sam (the United States) take care of his mail train. If I don't get to the reservation before the general's turned in I shall have to wake him. Wait for me, please." The gray mare made the six miles to the military reservation in just half an hour. The general was smoking his last cigar, and was alert in an instant; and before the superintendent had finished the forum of "hot Scotch" hospitably tendered, the orders had been given to the commanding officer at Fort ——— some distance east of Barker's, and had been duly acknowledged.

"The general all right. Of course we cannot tell that it is not a sell, but if these Perry hounds mean business they'll get all the fight they want; and if they've got any souls, which I doubt, may the Lord have mercy on them!"

He prepared several dispatches, two of which were as follows:

"MR. HENRY SINCLAIR, ON NO. 17, PAWNEE JUNCTION: This telegram your authority to take charge of train on which you are, and demand obedience of all officials and trainmen on the road. Please do so, and act in accordance with information wired station agent at Pawnee Junction.

To the station agent:

"Reported that Perry gang will try wreck and rob B. & N. near ——— sixth mile post, Denver division, about 9 Thursday night. Troops will await train at Fort ———. Car ordered ready for them. Keep everything secret and act in accordance with orders of Mr. Sinclair."

"It's worth $10,000," sententiously remarked he, "that Sinclair's on that train. He's got both sand and brains. Good night," and he went to bed and slept the sleep of the just.

The sun never shone more brightly and the air was never more clear and bracing than when Sinclair helped his wife off the train at Pawnee Junction. The station master's face fell as he saw the lady, but he saluted the engineer with an easy air as he could assume, and watched for an opportunity to speak to him alone. Sinclair read the dispatches with an unmoved countenance, and after a few moments' reflection simply said, "All right. Be sure to keep the matter perfectly quiet." At breakfast he was distressed so much as that his wife asked him what was the matter.

Taking her aside he at once showed her the telegrams.

"You see my duty," he said, "my only thought is about you, my dear child. Will you stay here?"

She simply replied, looking into his face without a tremor:

"My place is with you." Then the conductor called "All aboard," and the train once more started.

Sinclair asked Foster to join him in the smoking compartment and tell him the promised story, which the latter did. His rescue at Barker's, he frankly and gratefully said, had been the turning point in his life. In brief, he had "sworn off" from gambling and drinking, had found honest employment, and was doing well.

"I've two things to do now, major," he added; "first, I must show my gratitude to you; and next—" he hesitated a little, "I want to find that poor girl that I left behind at Barker's. She was engaged to marry me, and when I came to think of it, and what a life I'd made her lead, I hadn't the heart till now, to look for her; but, seeing I'm on the right track, I'm going to find her and get her to come with me. Her father's an ——— old scoundrel, but that ain't her fault, and I ain't going to marry him!"

"Foster," quietly said Sinclair, "do you know the Perry gang?"

The man's brow darkened.

"Know them?" said he; "I know them much too well. Perry is an ungodly a cut-throat as ever killed an emigrant in cold blood, and he's got in his gang nearly all these fellows that tried to hang me. Why do you ask, major?"

Sinclair handed him the dispatches. "You are the only man on the train to whom I have shown them," said he.

"I am going to put the responsibility on your shoulders. I have no doubt that if we are attacked the soldiers would dispose of the gang, but I must take all possible precautions for the safety of the passengers. We must not alarm them. They can be made to think that the troops are going on a scout and only a certain number of recruits men need be told of what we expect. Can you, late this afternoon, go through the cars and pick them out? I will then put you in charge of the passenger cars and you can pass your men on the platform to act in case of need. My place will be ahead."

"Major, you can depend on me," was Foster's reply. "I'll go through the train and have my eye on those boys of the right sort, and that's got their shooting iron with them."

Through the hours of that day on rolled the train, still over the crisp buffalo grass, across the well worn buffalo trails, past the prairie dog villages. Meanwhile there had been set in motion a measure of that power to which appeal is so reluctantly made in time of peace. At Fort ———, a lonely post on the plains, the orders had that morning been issued for twenty men, under Lieutenant Halsey, to parade at 4 p. m. with overcoats, two days' rations, and ball cartridges; also, for Assistant Surgeon Kessler to report for duty with the party. Orders as to destination were communicated directly to the lieutenant from the post commander, and on the minute the little column moved, taking the road to the station.

"That's the way the lieutenant looked, boys," he said, "when we was laying for them Apaches that raided Jones' ranch and killed the women and little children."

In a short time the officer looked at his watch, formed his men, and directed them to take their places on the seats of the car, and they hardly done so when the whistle of the approaching train was heard. When it came up the conductor, who had his instructions from Sinclair, had the engine detached and backed on the siding for the soldiers' car, which thus came between it and the foremost baggage car when the train was again made up. As arranged, it was announced that the troops were to be taken to a certain distance to join a scouting party, and the curiosity of the passengers was but slightly excited. The soldiers sat quietly in their seats, their repeating rifles held between their knees, and the officer in front. Sinclair joined the latter and had a few words with him as the train moved on. A little later, when the stars were shining brightly overhead, they passed into the express car and sent for the conductor and other train men and for Foster. In a few words Sinclair explained the position of affairs. His statement was received with perfect coolness, and the men only asked what they were to do.

"Conductor, give the train men the rifles from the baggage car, and let them not under Foster," said Sinclair. "Now, boys, I am sure you will do your duty. That is all."

From the next station Sinclair telegraphed "All ready" to the superintendent, who was peeing his office in much suspense. Then he said a few words to his brave and anxious wife, and walked to the rear platform. On it were several armed men, who bade him good evening, and asked "when the fun was going to begin." Walking through the train, he found each platform similarly occupied, and Foster going from one to the other. The latter whispered as he passed him:

"Major, I found Arizona Joe, the scout, in the smokin' car, and he's on the platform.
That let's me out, and although I know as well as you that there ain't no danger about that rear sleeper where the madama is, I ain't a-going to be far off from her." Sinclair shook him by the hand and looked at his watch. It was 8:30. He passed through the baggage and express cars, finding in the latter the agent sitting behind his safe, on which lay two large revolvers. On the platform car he found the soldiers and their commander, sitting silent and apparently unconcerned as before. When Sinclair reached the latter and nodded, he rose and faced the men, and his fine voice was clearly heard above the rattle of the train.

"Company, 'tention!" The soldiers straightened themselves in a second.

"With ball cartridge, load!" It was done with the precision of a machine. Then the lieutenant spoke, in the clear, crisp tones that the troops had heard in more than one fierce battle:

"Men," said he, "in a few minutes the Perry gang, which you will remember, are going to try to run this train off the track, wound and kill the passengers, and rob the cars and United States mail. It is our business to prevent them. Sergeant Wilson" (a gray bearded non commissioned officer stood up and saluted), "I am going on the engine. See that my orders are repeated.
Now, men, aim low and don't waste any shots." He and Sinclair climbed over the tender and spoke to the engine driver.

"How are the airbrakes working?" asked Sinclair.

"First rate."

"Then, if you slow down now, you could stop the train in a third of her length, couldn't you?"

"Easy, if you don't mind being shaken up a bit."

"That is good. How is the country about the sixth mile post?"

"Dead level and smooth."

"Good again. Now, Lieutenant Halsey, this is a splendid headlight, and we can see a long way with my night glass. I will have a"— "—fourth mile post just past," interrupted the engine driver.

"Only one more to pass, then, before we ought to strike them. Now, Lieutenant, I undertake to stop the train within a very short distance of the gang.
They will be on both sides of the track, no doubt, and the ground, as you hear, is quite level. You will best know what to do."

The officer stepped back. "Sergeant," called he,
"do you hear me plainly?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have the men fix bayonets. When the train stops and I wave my sword, let half jump off each side, run up quickly and form line abreast of the engine, not ahead."

"Jack," said Sinclair to the engine driver, "is your hand steady?" The man held it up with a smile. "Good. Now stand by your throttle and your air brake. Lieutenant, better warn the men to hold on tight, and tell the sergeant to pass the word on to the boys on the platform, or they will be knocked off by the sudden stop. Now for a look ahead," and he brought the binocular to his eyes.

The great parabolic headlight illuminated the track a long way in advance, all behind it being of course in darkness. Suddenly Sinclair cried out:

"The fools have a light there, as I am a living man, and there is a little red one near us. What can that be? All ready, Jack? By heavens! they have taken up two rails. Now, hold on, all. Stop her!"

The engine driver shut his throttle valve with a jerk. Then, holding hard by it, he turned a brass handle. There was a fearful jolt—a grating—and the train's way was checked. The lieutenant, standing sideways, had drawn his sword. He waved it, and almost before he could get off the engine the soldiers were up and forming, still in shadow, while the bright light was thrown on a body of men ahead.

"Surrender, or you are dead men!" roared the officer. Curses and several shots were the reply.
Then came the orders, quick and sharp:

"Forward! Close up! Double quick! Halt!
Fire!"

It was speedily over. Left on the car with the men, the old sergeant had said:

"Boys, you hear. It's that cursed Perry gang.
Now don't forget Larry and Charley that they murdered last year!"—and there had come from the soldiers a sort of fierce, subdued growl. The volley was followed by a bayonet charge, and it required all the officer's authority to save the lives even of those who "threw up their hands." Large as the gang was (outnumbering the troops), well armed and desperate as they were, every one was dead, wounded, or a prisoner when the men who guarded the train platform ran forward. The surgeon, with professional coolness, walked up to the robbers, his instrument case under his arm.

"Not much for me to do here, Lieutenant," said he. "That practice for Creedmore is telling on the shooting. Good thing for the gang, too. Bullets are better than rope, and a Colorado jury will give them plenty of that."

Sinclair had sent a man to tell his wife that all was over. Then he ordered a fire to be lighted and the rails speedily relaid. The flames lit a strange scene as the passengers looked around. The lieutenant posted men to keep them back.

"Is there a telegraph station not far ahead, Sinclair?" asked he. "Yes." "All right." He drew a small pad from his pocket and wrote a dispatch to the post commander.

"Be good enough to send that for me," said he, "and leave orders at Barker's for the night express to eastward to stop over for us and to bring a posse to take care of the wounded prisoners. And now, my dear Sinclair, I suggest that you get the passengers into cars and go on as soon as those rails are spiked. When they realize the situation some of them will feel precious ugly, and you know we can't have any lynching."

Sinclair glanced at the rails and gave the word at once to the conductor and brakeman, who began vociferating "All aboard!" Just then Foster appeared, an expression of intense satisfaction showing clearly on his face.

"Major," said he, "I didn't use to take much stock in special Providence or things being ordered, but I'm darned if I don't believe in them from this day. I was bound to say where you put me, but I was uneasy and wild to be in the scrimmage, and if I had been there I wouldn't have taken notice of a little red light that wasn't much behind the rear platform when we stopped. When I saw there was no danger there I ran back, and what do you think I found? There was a woman in a dead faint, and just clutching a lantern that she'd tied up in a red scarf, poor little thing! And, major, it was Sally! It was the little girl that loved me out at Barker's, and has loved me and waited for me ever since. And when she came to and knew me, she was so glad she 'most fainted away again; and she let on as if she was her that gave away the job. And I took her into the sleeper, and the madam—God bless her! she knew Sally before, and was good to her—she took care of her and is cheering her up. And now, major, I'm going to take her straight to Denver and send for a parson and get her married to me, and she'll brace up, sure pop."

The whistle sounded and the train started. From the window of the "sleeper" Sinclair and his wife took their last look at the world come. The lieutenant, standing at the side of the track wrapped in his cloak, caught a glimpse of Mrs. Sinclair's pretty face and returned her bow.

In less than an hour, telegrams having in the meantime been sent in both directions, the train ran alongside the platform at Barker's, and Watkins, imperturbable as usual, met Sinclair and gave him his letters.

"Perry gang wiped out, I hear, Major," said he. "Good thing for the country. That's a lesson the 'toughs' in these parts won't forget a long time. Plocky girl that gave 'em away, wasn't she? Hope she's all right."

"She is all right," said Sinclair with a smile.

"Glad of that. By the way, that father of her'n passed in his checks tonight. He'd got one warning from the vigilantes, and yesterday they found out that he was in with the gang and they was agoin' for him, but when the telegram came he put a pistol to his head and saved them all trouble. Good riddance to everybody, I say. The sheriff's here now and is going east on the next train to get them fellows."

In a few minutes the train was off with its living freight—the just and the unjust, the reformed and the rescued, the happy and the anxious. With many of the passengers the episode of the night was already a thing of the past. Sinclair sat by the side of his wife, to whose cheeks the color had all come back, and Sally Johnson lay in her berth, faint still, but able to give an occasional smile to Foster. In the station on the Missouri the reporters were gathered about the happy superintendent, smoking his cigars and filling their note books with items. In Denver they would gladly have done the same, but Watkins failed to gratify them. He was a man of few words. When the train had gone and a friend remarked:

"Hope they'll get through all right now," he simply said:

"Yes, likely." Then he went to the telegraph instrument. In a few minutes he could have told a story as wild as a Norse saga, but what he said when Denver had responded was only:

"Number 17, fifty-minutes late."

KILLED FOR HIS ROLL.

A Man Murdered in the Big Woods, Near the Allen County Line—His Assassins Get Away With $240.

Fort Wayne Sentinel, 19th.

J. J. Peters, our Missouri wire correspondent, sends the Sentinel the particulars of a bloody murder in the big woods, just east of the Allen county line, in Ohio. Last week a nicely dressed man was in that vicinity contracting for lumber. He went into the big forest there with two men and not a sight of him has been seen since. It is known the gentleman had $240 on his person and as the men who went into the woods with him have been on a protracted spree since, the murder is charged to them. They are wood choppers and are named Jack Smith and Bob Ford. A big party of Ohio and Indiana farmers are searching the woods, while the supposed murderers are not allowed to get out of sight. The case is quite sensational.

A Word to Democrats.

It is a habit with the average voter, through mistaken motives evidently, to regard the spring elections as a matter of minor consequence and generally there is more or less apathy and indifference in the ranks at these elections. But 'tis is an erroneous impression. Especially as this is a presidential year, do we caution our democratic brother of the fact that his vote at the coming April elections is of the most vital importance to future great battles to be fought, and if the democracy shall maintain their average majorities at these elections, the result will show that our ranks are unbroken and the effect will tend to discourage and demoralize the enemy. We therefore admonish the democracy to attend the polls to a man and vote an unscratched ticket. As usual, the opposition are trying to work upon the sympathies of democrats by the cunning plea that "party lines should not be drawn at local elections," and they are honing for democratic votes. Would the republicans be as generous to democrats if the latter were in the minority? We think not.

While there can be no objections to the republican candidate for Trustee, Mr. C. H. Knapp, he being a worthy young man for ought we know to the contrary, it is alleged by his political associates, that democrats should vote for him on the grounds that he is a resident of the village. Is that any reason why democrats should desert Mr. T. F. Franks, who will undoubtedly be re-nominated next Saturday, and who has filled the office of Trustee for three years to the best interests of the people? Who will say that Mr. Franks' administration will not compare favorably with any of his predecessors?

It is the bounden duty of every democrat to vote with his party in this year of our lord, 1884, and let him not forget it. He would simply be giving aid and comfort to the enemy, perhaps unwittingly, by pursuing a contrary course.

Democratic State Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 28, 1884.

The electors of Indiana, regardless of past political affiliations, who are desirous of co-operating with the Democracy in the support of its principles and nominees, and who are in favor of an honest and economical administration of our public affairs, and opposed to the corrupt practices of the Republican party, are invited to participate in the meetings throughout the State for the purpose of selecting representatives to attend a delegate convention to be held at the city of Indianapolis, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1884, at English's opera house, for the purpose of adopting a platform of principles and the nomination of candidates to be supported for the following offices:

Governor,
One Judge Supreme Court
Auditor of State,
Reporter of Supreme Court,
Superintendent of Public Instruction

Lieutenant-Governor,
Secretary of State,
Treasurer of State,
Attorney-General,

The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 200 votes cast for Win. & Myers for Secretary of State in 1880, and one delegate for each fraction of one hundred or over.

The delegates from each Congressional district will meet on the evening previous to the convention, at places to be hereafter designated by this committee, for the purpose of selecting and reporting to the convention—

One committee on Permanent Organization.
One committee on Platforms and Resolutions.
One Vice President for the convention.
One assistant Secretary for the convention.
Two delegates to the National democratic convention.
Two alternate delegates to the National democratic convention.
One contingent Presidential Elector.
One member State Central committee for ensuing two years.
One Committee on Credentials.

The committee on Platforms and Resolutions will meet immediately after adjournment of District meetings, say 9 o'clock p. m., at the consultation room of Supreme Court, Tuesday evening, June 24.

The committee on Permanent Organization will meet at the same hour in the State Auditor's office. It will be their duty to name a President and Principal Secretary of the convention, four delegates at large and four alternate delegates to the National Convention, two Electors for the State at large and two contingent Electors, and also to recommend rules for the government of the convention.

The committee on Credentials will meet at 8 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, June 25, at rooms of the State Central Committee, to determine such contests as may be submitted to them.

Delegate tickets of admission to the convention will be issued to the chairman of each county delegation and to authorized representatives of the press upon the presentation of credentials at the State Central Committee rooms.

By order of the State Democratic Central Committee.

JOSEPH E. McDONALD, Chairman.
JOS. L. KELLY, Secretary.

Democratic Township Convention.

The democrats of Richland township are hereby notified to meet in caucus at the school house, one mile south of Coatsburg, at 8 o'clock p. m., on WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20, 1884, for the purpose of nominating candidates to be voted for at the coming April election, and transact such other business as may come before them.

L. D. BRITTON, Chairman.

SUNDAY MARCH 30, 1884

Let the democrat remember that the radical who is just now industriously honing for his vote, would, if successful, howl himself hoarse over a radical victory. Don't touch the machine, the thing is loaded.

The Butler Review announces with a flourish of trumpets that as politics are ripe it shall proceed to "defend the principles it advocates." Will Mr. Leech tell us what party he proposes to hang onto this year of our grace?

The democratic majority for Trustee in 1882 was 45. That was two years ago, and in that time some changes have taken place by emigration and death, but democrats should see to it that this majority is repeated as near as possible on the 7th.

Let's see, we believe that one of the candidates on the republican ticket signed a call for a convention of trunks, who met at Columbus, O., a few years before the breaking out of the civil war, and declared for a dissolution of the Union.

The Fitz John Porter bill threatens an alarming polling and hauling in the house of Arthur. Friends of the President say that Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Minnesota will look with distrust upon his claim to recognition at Chicago if he does not approve the Fitz John Porter bill, and it is alleged that his approval of it would make Senator Logan and his followers very angry. Thus this incident of the rebellion may end in a fatal feud in the Republican family—which would be a righteous offset to the unchristian pursuit of Porter for partisan purposes.

Democrats of Richland will bear in mind the day and date of the township convention, Saturday, March 29. The candidates to be chosen are: Trustee, Assessor, 2 Justices, 2 Constables, and 3 Pathmasters, for the West, East and South districts. It is almost imperative that there should be a full attendance, as some of the offices to be filled are of no secondary importance, especially that of Trustee, and when there is a general attendance, a better ticket can be selected. We therefore earnestly request democrats to put aside business for that day and attend the convention.

The Corunna band recently purchased two new instruments at a cost of $275.

The Kendallville News holds the names of Tilden and Hendricks.

George Knauer, the sewing machine man of Avilla, was in town last week looking up his interests here.

The spring term of the village school opened on Monday, Will Franks in charge as principal.

We are glad to note that Mr. Fred. Imus is slowly convalescing, and that he will be on his tape again in a short time.

Henry Getts, formerly of Sedan, has located in the village and commenced work for J. Kirkpatrick.

Dr. J. S. Brown, of Kendallville, who was well known to many of our citizens, died at that place on the 18th from a stroke of paralysis.

Twenty-four car loads of corn have been shipped from Kansas to this station since about the first of January, the bulk of the shipment having been consigned to E. Knauer.

St. Patrick's day was generally observed in most of the larger cities, by Irishmen in memory of their patron saint, who was a man of great and good deeds.

A leading republican remarked the other day that "the democrats would be foolish to nominate Tilden." How the radicals do tremble in their boots at the mere mention of Tilden!

Lawyer W. H. Dills, of Auburn, on the 15th had secured his thirtieth birthday, and the auspicious occasion was honored by his friends to the number of 200, who assembled at his residence to congratulate him on the event. Among the numerous and costly presents, which the host gracefully acknowledged in his most happy manner, we notice: a fine gold watch, 2 pairs of gold sleeve buttons, $50 in gold pieces and $50 in silver pieces.

Tilden and the Old Ticket

Called For by the Masses of the Democratic Party.

A Washington special of the 22d to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, furnishes the following interesting bit of gossip respecting presidential probabilities: A few days ago a party of Congressmen were discussing the wonderful sweep of recent suggestions in favor of nominating "the old ticket" and every one of the five present agreed that Tilden and Hendricks could be elected beyond doubt and that it would be folly not to bring them out. Mr. Dockery, of Missouri, one of the most influential of the younger men in the House, remarked:

"You can form no idea of Tilden's strength by observing only the signs visible here. Somehow Tilden has never been popular among the politicians. I was in Washington a few weeks before the St. Louis convention of 1876, and I found in Congress at that time a prevailing sentiment against Tilden. Almost every member I talked to said he could not possibly be nominated. The convention met and the delegates came freshly commissioned from the people to make Tilden their leader in the campaign. Popular confidence in him is stronger now than it was in 1876. About the only talk heard against the old ticket now comes from the politicians who have other plans on foot. Go out among the Democratic masses and you hear none of it. Fortunately Congress is not going to make the nomination.

"The people want Tilden and they will choose delegates who will nominate him."

Congressman Hill, of Ohio, says that the delegation from his state can be counted on for Tilden. Payne, who is now the most potent factor in Ohio politics, is known to be one of Mr. Tilden's warmest friends.

As to Indiana the best information here is that the fruits of the long labor in working that state for McDonald will fall before the old ticket movement. Hendricks has always been stronger than McDonald there. In Illinois, the Palmer influence, which is friendly to Tilden, can more than match Morrison's strength, whether he uses it for himself or for McDonald, as rumor reports he intends to do.

Chas. Stewart and Daniel Reyher addressed a large audience at the Reading Room Sunday, on the subject of temperance. The meeting was one of more than usual interest, and a number signed the pledge.

Among the visitors to our town recently, we notice: Mr. and Mrs. Isabel, of Kendallville, Dr. Dayton, of Lima, Ind., County Superintendent Merica, of Auburn, Mrs. J. C. Bowlin, of Chicago Junction, and her sister, Miss Laura Zotz, of W. Va., and Miss Nellie Potter, of Auburn.

A new B. & O. time card went into effect on the 16th. But few changes have been made in the movement of passenger trains. Going East, No. 3 leaves this station at 4:35 a. m., and going West No. 4 at 2:00 a. m., No. 6 at 2:00 p. m., and No. 8 at 3:00 a. m. Other trains run as before.

A train of thirty-one cars laden with shelled corn donated to the flood sufferers of the Ohio Valley, by the people of Sedgwick County, Kan., arrived at Cincinnati on Saturday last.

Notes and Comments.

Now it is reported that Conkling is for Grant for president, but will work for Blaine if he is nominated. As for Arthur, he doesn't want to talk about him.

The death of Mrs. Annie Key Turner, daughter of Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner," is announced to have occurred at Mare Island, California, Monday.

If the extreme free traders in Congress undertake to force the Democrats to support the Morrison tariff bill in its present form they will make trouble. Perhaps it will be necessary to remind Mr. Henry Watterson that he doesn't run the Democratic party.

Secretary Lincoln is reported as saying that he will resign if called upon to sign an order restoring Fitz John Porter to the army. Who do not believe the report, for Mr. Lincoln, one may suppose, is too sensible a man to make such a fool remark: but if he did make it the sooner he gets out the better.

The Richland Republicans, at their caucus on Saturday last, set up the following pins to be knocked down by the Democrats, on Monday, April 7:

For Trustee—Charles H. Knapp.
For Assessor—Thomas D. Daily.
For Justice of the Peace (West)—Lennard Johnson.
For Justice of the Peace (East)—Horatio Blinn.
For Constable (West)—Charles Wice.
For Constable (East)—John Dull.
For Pathmaster (West)—Ambrose Johnson.
For Pathmaster (East)—Hiram Dull.
For Pathmaster (South)—Egbert Haynes.

Quite a number of our exchanges have made favorable mention of Freeman Kelly, of this county, in connection with the nomination for Lieutenant Governor at the approaching Democratic State Convention. It is about me that the northern part of the State received some recognition in the appointment of candidates. The gallant fight made by Mr. Kelly a few years ago in the race for Congress against Colonel Baker, is still fresh in memory of the people. At home Mr. Kelly is regarded a host within himself, and all will admit that he would make a strong bid for the second place on the ticket.

It will be seen that Granger Thos. D. Daily has concluded to again try his luck in the political circus ring. We supposed that he was buried in the race for county commissioner over twenty years ago. It will be a cold day when Granger Daily gets left.

Rumored that a republican kicker, prominent in the councils of the grand old party of harmony, has knocked the weather-boarding off the radical wig-warn in his wrath over the late nominations. The happy family seem to be in a bad fix.

In response to the call of Chairman Beland, the various committeemen and other leading democrats of this county met in the Sheriff's office at 10 o'clock A. M., Tuesday, to transact the business named in the call. All the townships were represented except Fairfield. After the usual routine of business the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the committeemen of the several townships of DeKalb county to give public notice of the time and place for holding the caucuses for nominating democratic candidates to be voted for at the April elections of 1884, in the several townships of said county, at such time as they may deem for the best interest of the democracy of their respective townships.

Resolved, That a committeeman for each voting precinct be selected at the several township caucuses, to serve the next two years.

Resolved, That at such township caucuses there be selected by such caucus five sets of delegates on the basis of one delegate for each 200 votes given for Myers, for Secretary of State in 1882, and one for every 100 or more of such votes, to-wit: The State Convention, the Congressional convention, to the Judicial Convention, the Senatorial Convention and Joint Representative convention.

It was afterwards decided by vote that the delegates should be appointed as follows: Wilmington should appoint two, Waterloo one, Auburn two, and each of the other townships one delegate for each. But in voting at the several conventions, Waterloo should have 1 vote, Wilmington 1½ votes, Auburn 1 vote, Newville 1 vote, Stafford 1 vote, Franklin 1 vote and Troy 1 vote. All the other townships to have 1 vote each. After some general discussion the meeting adjourned.

"Pretty well, thank you; I've just been to a doctor to have him look at my throat."

"What's the matter?"

"Well, the doctor couldn't give me any encouragement. At least he couldn't find what I wanted him to find."

"What did you expect him to find?"

"I asked him to look down my throat for the sawmill and farm that had gone down there."

"And did he see nothing of it?"

"No, but he advised me if I ever got another to run it by water."

A frightful accident occurred on an east-bound freight train near Bryan, O., on the 19th, resulting in the instant death of brakeman Wm. P. Carens, a young brother of our station master, Mr. J. M. Carens. A Stryker special to the Toledo Bee gives the following particulars:

Wm. P. Carens, a young man 19 years of age, son of Patrick Carens of this place, was instantly killed at the highway bridge, one mile west of Bryan, Wednesday afternoon. He was on his way home from Edgerton, riding on the top of a freight train, standing with his back towards the engine on one of the large refrigerator cars, which are some fifteen inches higher than the ordinary freight car. Either forgetting the bridge, or that he was on the high car, he was struck on the back of the head by the heavy timber of the structure and knocked lifeless, remaining on the car until the train was stopped. He was taken to Bryan on the freight and from there home to his grief-stricken parents, on passenger train No. 4. Carens was formerly employed as brakeman on the road, was well posted as to its dangers, and his sudden terrible ending was wholly unlooked for. He was a sober, industrious young man, respected by all who knew him and his untimely death casts a gloom over the community.

Latest advices from the war in Egypt indicate that the whole country to the south of Herber is in revolt. The rebels have surrounded Khartoum and cut off all communications. General Gordon is in a trap.

THE APRIL MAGAZINE.

The frontispiece of the April Century is a portrait of the late Sidney Lanier at the age of fifteen. There is also an essay on Lanier by Dr. William Myers Ward, with a portrait of the poet in mature age. E. V. Rieu's "Washington papers" are continued. Mrs. Clarke's "Exile of Dante" is concluded. There are descriptions by Edward S. Wilds of the building and partial impairment of "The New York City Hall," the picturesque record of a cruise "Among the R. G. W. Benjamin," an important paper by Fred. Hather, on "Progress in Book Culture," and an interesting travel article, without pictures. Miss London (Anning's) description of "New Zealand in blossoming December." Foremost among the un-illustrated papers is a point of general interest, in George Alfred Tassard's account of "How Winans both crossed the Potomac." John Burroughs's poem to Matthew Arnold's recent lecture on Emerson. Two other striking essays of the number are "Uncle Tom without a Cabin," by Walter B. Hill, and Professor Samuel Wilkard's "The Destiny of the Sevier," the fifth part of Mr. Caldwell's "Dr. Savage Man," and a short story in negro dialect, "Marse Chan" by Thomas Nelson Page, are the season's new number. The poems are contributed by John Vance Cheney, Alfred R. Street, William Preston Johnson, R. T. W. Inke, Jr., Robert Underwood Johnson, and, in "Brica-Brac," Walter Larnell, Stanley Wood, Joel Benton, Frank Dempster Sherman, and others.

St. Nicholas for April, with its varied table of contents, reminds us like the month itself, both of the winter that is past, and of the summer that is to come.

An account of the first ice-palace, that built by the Empress Anna of Russia, with a picture by Blum, is offset by Mary A. Lathbury's pleasant summer sketch, called "Fairy Lodge," which the author has charmingly illustrated.

The important "Historic Boyer" series is continued with the interesting story of boyhood of Henry V. of England, in which the author, E. R. Buckle, takes occasion to differ with the Shakespearean estimate of the Boy (Geoffrey's) character. Louise M. Alcott's third "Spinning-wheel Story," tells of the devotion and heroic heroism of a young Indian boy, who passes from captivity the children of his conqueror. A bright, lovely, wholesome-told sea story is the Rev. Chas. R. Talbot's "How Bright Benoit got his appointment to the Naval Academy," while John R. Coryell relates in "Young Tiao and the Mac-eater" the amazing adventure that really happened to a young Chinese boy.

In the serials, "The Noblesse," Mrs. Adeline D. T. Whitteley's clever study of boy and girl character, and "Winter Fun," W. O. Rodland's entertaining account of boy and girl sport and frolic, are continued. And Mayne Reid's "Land of Fire" is continued in his installment of absorbing interest. There are poems by Ella Thaxter, Elizabeth C. Kinney, Margaret Johnson, and others, and pictures by Birch, Scott, Rose Mather, Henry Chadham, P. Bellows, Jr., and others among whom must be mentioned the prize-winning in the St. Nicholas art-contest, in which over five hundred drawings were entered by young draughtsmen and women. A full and interesting report and the successful illustrations appear in the April St. Nicholas.

The Continent Weekly Magazine, complete with the four numbers in one, for the press and railway, for the month of April, presents an attractive table of contents abounding in literature of absorbing interest. Orpheus C. Kerr's humorous tale entitled, "Once There Was a Man," recently concluded, is alone worth the price of subscription. A new story entitled, "Dorus, The Daughter of Faustina," by the author of Arive the Libyan, was commenced in No. 1, of the new volume.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Hon. Perry Belmont's recent New York speech: "No political party in any country ever lost political support by demanding a reduction of taxes. We Democrats do not ask it unreasonably or for mere partisan purposes. We ask that taxes shall be reduced because the people of this country are even now, in 1884, taxed under laws enacted in 1861; laws enacted for the purpose of carrying on the great Civil War long since ended. The Government now has no war expenditures, and the public debt is being rapidly extinguished. The framers of the Morrill tariff law of 1861, have declared publicly that it was a temporary measure, intended only to raise money for the war expenditures of the Government, and for the payment of the public debt, and that when the necessity would cease for such heavy taxation, the laws would be repealed. It was upon that ground they were enabled to pass their bill through Congress. But they have not fulfilled the pledge which they gave to the country as economists and legislators. On the contrary, they have maintained the so-called system of protection which, in truth, is a system of organized bounties to the few. Even on the plea of protection the industries which have been benefited by their legislation no longer need its privileges.

Now, that Mr. John Sherman is about through with the Danville and Copiah riots, the Washington Post suggests that he transfer his outrage committee to Cincinnati. His own state, just now presents a much wider and more fruitful field of operations, in the line of crime, disorder and out-lawry, than either Mississippi or Virginia ever did.

—Cincinnati Post; Cincinnati's long toleration of the corrupt cabal that defeated justice in Cincinnati, and made the city a den of thieves, is to blame for the recent demonstrations and awful bloodshed. It is the old story of expiation, the innocent suffering for the guilty. If, every time there had been well-grounded suspicions of jury-tampering or of conspiracy to defeat the laws, a prompt, thorough investigation, indictment by grand jury, prosecution, conviction and penitentiary incarceration for a half-dozen years had followed, Cincinnati would have been saved, in the last ten years, more money, more lives, more bitter agony than the riot has cost us. The soldier guns of the State of Ohio have for three nights been saying with mouth of flame that he who conspires against the laws of Ohio and against the safety of its citizens is worthy of death. Now and forever hereafter let the grand juries of Ohio say the same every time a jury is tampered with.

—News Journal: The News Journal is not averse to Blaine. He would be a fine finale. Wishing the grand old party well in its ending, we think that much in its history entitles it to go out in a blaze of glory, with pop, fizz, bang, firecracker rattle and clatter, skyrocket coruscation, Roman candle glare, and scintillation, rather than slump out in darkness and mud, stalled and bemired. By all means Blaine, of Maine, with his farthing dip blaze of glory, to conduct it from the scene of its labors to the silent tomb.

—Richmond (Va.) Dispatch: A correspondent calls it "the Blaine undertow." Well, there is an idea prevalent that it will swamp the republican party.

Notes and Comments.

On Friday, 28th ult., citizens of Cincinnati to the number of 10,000, composed of her most intelligent and influential inhabitants, assembled at Music Hall to express their disgust and indignation over the verdict in the Berner jury, and passed resolutions of condemnation, demanding "such changes in the laws of the state as will secure a more speedy and effective administration of the criminal law," etc. Two men, one white and the other black, according to confession, murdered their employer to obtain his money. The crime was committed in cold blood, and there does not seem to have been any mitigating circumstances. It was urged, however, in the case of Berner, the white man, that he was a young man and did not strike the first blow, hence a verdict of manslaughter which calls for a term in the penitentiary. The citizens believed Berner guilty of a cold blooded murder and that the verdict was a farce. This, coupled with the fact that the Cincinnati jail contains twenty or thirty murderers within its walls, the streets overrun with bank thieves and cut throats, aroused the people and hence the meeting. Speeches denouncing the present jury system and demanding reform. Lynching was freely discussed, and at the close of the meeting the crowd formed into a mob and started for the jail to hang Berner and the other prisoners confined there. Before reaching the jail the mob had swelled to 20,000. Berner in the meantime escaped, but the sheriff with a strong force of police succeeded in guarding the jail. In the first attack several citizens and police were killed.

Saturday night the riot became general, and the mob resorted to pillage and plunder. In the meantime troops were forwarded from Columbus and other points in the State by order of the Governor. An attack was made on the magnificent court house, the torch applied, and the building together with the records and libraries were burned. In this attack the militia opened fire on the mob with Gatlin guns which was returned by the mob with indiscriminate fire-arms and houlders. Over fifty persons were killed and nearly two hundred wounded. The riot continued until Sunday night, and the papers say it was a Sunday never to be forgotten in the annals of the city. Tuesday night comparative quiet was restored, but the city is still guarded by a strong militia force. The Cincinnati riot is a terrible affair and will be regretted by all. It shows that a resort to mob law is a poor way to remedy an evil. Still the scenes at Cincinnati may have a tendency to reform the jury system and act as a warning to shyster lawyers. An exchange, in concluding an article on the cause and effect of the riot, says:

"The school of experience is a dear one, but the lessons it teaches are not easily forgotten. The Cincinnati riot will be regarded as a proper point for a new departure in the trials of her murderers. There will not be so many delays. There will be fewer technicalities. We shall have less of emotional insanity and the like, and the march of justice will have to overcome fewer obstacles set up for the purpose of delays and final escape. We do not demand a bloody code or one in which mercy has no place, but we do demand laws which will not permit the guilty to escape punishment, and this we demand for the peace and security of society."

One day last week, a countryman by the name of Chris. Dellenbaugh came to town and while under the 'fluence of tamarack juice got into a dispute at Adams' hardware store over a small bill of ammunition he had purchased, a portion of which he refused to pay for. After being told that he must either pay for the goods or leave them, he got on his ear and called Adams hard names, whereupon William collared the belligerent cuss and fired him out. Dellenbaugh then started across the bridge swearing vengeance, and after inflating his skin with more juice, purchased a revolver and went gunning for Adams. The latter managed to keep out of Dellenbaugh's way until he was arrested and hauled up before 'Squire Finch where he was fined $6 and the costs for carrying concealed weapons. In court the prisoner was very unruly and boisterous, and he made several heroic attempts to get in his work on Adams, the complaining witness. Whoever sold Dellenbaugh the revolver and the drink deserves the severest condemnation of every law abiding citizen. It cannot be possible that any dealer would put a fire-brand into the hands of such a creature knowing his condition at the time? One thing is certain, he did not get his drink at the saloon, for we are told that Mr. Gettings positively refused to sell him anything before and after the fracas. Now, where did he get it? That there was not enacted a bloody tragedy in our village was no fault of the man Dellenbaugh, as when arrested he was pretty well fixed for a desperate deed, being armed with a loaded revolver and crazy drunk.

GRANDMOTHER.

Because she's growing feeble now,
Because her hair has turn'd to gray,
Because her three score years are told,
And leave their story in each fold
Of wrinkles, growing out their way
In furrows, on her cheek and brow,
You cannot help but call her old.

And old she is, if we can count life
As made of years and years alone;
But life, true life, is ever shown

By hopes and fears,
By joys and tears,
By bad and good withm us rife;
And many thus, of half her years,
Bear mightier scarrings of the strife.

Old? Yes, in body, but in heart
As young and fresh as when at first
It from the great Creator burst,
To form of all our lives a part.

Old? Yes, but where the roof demys,
Between the clouds' blue broken rifts,
The smile of heaven descends, and plays,
And fills her soul with sunshine drifts.

A Woman's Terrible Oath.

Most women say "damn" when they get mad. It is not a virile or a venomous damn. Its being quite intransigent may take the harm out of it, for they never damn anything or anybody. They simply emit the expulsive itself with considerable force and brevity, and with a triumphant satisfaction in their sense of having done something enormously wicked. But they always say it. A young lady with a pale, hot, angelic sort of a face occupied the adjoining drawing room in the Turkish bath. While I was waiting for her as one of the pale, high-bred type of girls, she went out into the message-room to cool for a moment, and, slipping upon the wet marble, fell prone upon the floor. With the readiness of habit she exclaimed, "Mellity-dellity-cussidy-damn!" (San Francisco Argonaut.

Two old ladies sat on adjoining seats in the cars; one declared if the conductor opened the window she would die, and the other protested against it being closed, for she should certainly smother to death. The conductor was in doubt, when a venerable gentleman exclaimed: "Open the window and kill one of them, and then close it and kill the other, and then we shall have peace."

THE TARANTULA'S BITE.

[David Lowry in The Current.]

Among all my acquaintance, none seemed happier than Eugene F—. I named him Fortune's Favorite. He had a beautiful and highly accomplished wife; his children were the prettiest and the best mannered I have ever met. All the women considered Mrs. F— as near perfection as mortals can achieve; all the men voted Eugene F— as clever a man as one could desire to claim fellowship with. He was rich in associations, in the integrity of a name that commanded the respect of four generations. How few aspiring Americans can say as much. He possessed the advantages a liberal education gives; his place was assured as well as it is possible to assure anything in a country where the wheel of fortune obliterates the accumulations and reputations of generations, and lifts men and women out of obscurity in a day. That is to say, the company that employed him was the oldest, most reliable, and the richest organization of its kind in the country. Finally, in addition to a salary of three thousand a year, Eugene had good reason to count upon an inheritance in the near future that would render him independent.

The noteworthy trait fellowship with Eugene F— revealed, was his equable spirit, born as he asserted, of contentment. He was satisfied with his place, his belongings and enjoyments. No man had more to make him happy, he said. No man enjoyed life more philosophically, or fretted himself less over the big or little things beyond his control. It was this equipoise, and, doubtless, his ignorance of the trials and bitter experiences of less favored people, that rendered Eugene F— indifferent when the misfortunes and temptations of the poor were discussed. Generous to a fault, he was unable to comprehend the dire necessities that drive the unfortunate to desperation and death. He was severe—could with difficulty find language strong enough to express his contempt of the average suicide.

A poor man who sought employment and failed to find it, weary with fruitless effort, despairing under the world's rebuffs, plunged recklessly into the unknown. The means emphasized the poverty of the wretched creature. The newspaper made much of it. It was the item of the day, and proved a base for columns. I dropped in on Eugene one day when his hour's work was done. He had a newspaper in his hand. He threw it down impatiently, angrily, as he handed me a cigar, and pushed me into a seat, saying:

"I am disgusted with you newspaper men. Why do you give so much prominence to that horrible suicide. By all accounts, the fel-he did all that was left for him to do. If he had only displayed common sense, when he was about it and adopted easier means! He was most kind himself, why does he disfigure himself, or impose unnecessary and horrible agonies such as this poor wretch inflicted upon himself?"

Aside from the fact that I have no patience with the speculation and theory that outgrow from under every Christian's feet, I was tired. Eugene worked an hour every day. I worked, on an average, twelve at least, and did more in one hour than Eugene did in three. Since it was clear to me that he received at least ten times more for his mental toll than I did, I could afford to permit him to indulge himself in a prolonged dissection of the "survival of the fittest." It pleased him and amused me.

"Now," he said, at the end of a chapter, "tell me why a man who chooses to kill himself, let us say with rat poison, should be regarded as much above a rat. Here in another account, in this morning's paper, of a woman who held her head in a tub of water until she drowned. Tell me a woman who does that is entitled to the benefits of the nineteenth century! Why, if such people were fairly balanced on the fence round Heaven, they would hang with their heads downward of choice. Human tadpoles, all of them!"

Eugene had a horror of death; cosmetories were his special aversion. He was never known to attend a funeral. He could not bring himself to witness the ceremonies in the house or at the grave. He had a prejudice against burial.

"Why can't everybody have vaults, with also, pleasing colors on the walls—have the interior as well as the exterior, ornamented, and made so attractive that people going into them would feel as they do when they enter an attractive chamber with a bed in it?"

"Do you mean the dead?"

"You know well enough I refer to visitors—do the living."

"I am afraid," I could not help saying, gravely, "you have yet to learn, Eugene, that not all the religions, all the learning, and all the philosophy in the world can ever make death other than death."

"But that is no reason why everybody should make death so horrible and grisly. They make it ghastly, and in the same breath tell you it is the way to Heaven. The way to Heaven ought to be beautiful."

"Have you forgotten Pilgrim's Progress?"

"A piece of rank plagiarism. The idea is thousands of years old."

"Why do we introduce discords in music?"

"Nonsense! I'll name you a thousand pieces—famous compositions—without a discord," Eugene answered. "The fact is, the world doesn't believe what it professes."

"Why don't you advocate cremation?" I retorted. "If your theory is correct, burn 'em all up, burn the whole world, and carry twenty generations in a watch charm."

A friend called upon Eugene F., and solicited his counsel and services in a business matter. It was a responsible trust. The friend was going abroad to remain for years, perhaps permanently. He owned, jointly with his sister, a piece of property near the great oil belt. It might be worthless, and it might prove very valuable. What the friend required was honest dealing. For himself he did not care. He had great wealth, but the invalid sister was entitled to all that could be realized from her half of the land.

It was for Eugene F. to discover the value of the land, and to exercise his judgment in disposing of it. He undertook the task with ill-concealed repugnance. He disliked traveling; had a horror of unaired beds and pot-luck. He went to the oil regions in a bad humor. When he returned, a great change was noticed in his manner. A month had worked wonders.

"Just think of it," he said to me, when he dropped in to shake hands in his cheery, hearty way. "I thought those 600 acres were worth about $5 an acre. At the end of a week I was offered $16,000; in another week it jumped up to $100,000, and finally I let it go for $400,000, half cash, balance in three months."

It struck us all as a surprising streak of luck, and everybody put it that way, but Eugene, who was a convert to the "Belt" theory, held it was simply a matter of management and business experience and sagacity. He asserted there was abundance of oil territory undeveloped, and his friends were surprised beyond expression when he announced his resolve to demonstrate the correctness of his conclusions. He undertook the task of developing, and like many another who started out on the "belt" theory, he ended "wild-cattling." In other words he assumed extraordinary risks. His efforts were attended with varying success. He experienced downright bad luck, and rare good fortune, too.

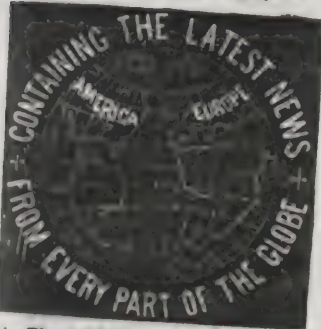

In a year—less time—his old friends scarcely knew Eugene F. He was energetic, confident, positive and decisive; a very fair specimen of a thorough-going American business man. His ventures proved profitable in the main, and then, all at once, accident filled his pockets one night when he slept. He was the possessor of half a million. He was in the middle of the current, a prominent craft in the stream that allured thousands, floated a fraction into a safe harbor and stranded the great majority.

I seldom met Eugene now. We were in different channels. Chance brought us face to face one day in front of The Era office.

“How are you, Ned? Had dinner? Come with me. I want company. No refusal now.”

“Make it tonight, at home, and I'll be on hand.”

“I wish I could; but the truth is, I am so seldom at home now—I don't know when I've spent a night, or rather evening, at home.”

And this was my bookish friend who, a year ago, could not be induced to leave his snug library, or cozy living-room, where his wife and children were his chief companions.

Half an hour's conversation proved to me that my friend—the man I had respected and loved—was as dead as the Pharaohs. In his place I found a man who seemed a bundle of nerves. He had lost the repose of my old friend, and with it his grace. While it was impossible for Eugene F— to become either coarse or brusque, his positive manner and tones, his decision, gave him an angularity that was less to be admired than his former ease and urbanity.

“Now you have made your pile, Eugene, I suppose you will be off to Europe some of these days. Possibly we may lose you altogether.”

He looked at me with undisguised astonishment. “What makes you say that?”

“They say you are worth nearly a million.”

“See here—this is in confidence, Ned—they say a great deal that isn't true. But in this instance they are not far wrong. But why should I quit on a million? Have some more mushrooms. This is the only place I can get a decent steak in town.”

“I've seen the time you would have been content with a quarter of a million.”

“Yes; in the long ago. Do you know I was a fool in those days. Nature never intended a man should be content. He ought to be just as eager to make his tenth—yes, his hundredth million for that matter—as his first. For my part—but mind you don't let your birds know it! I don't care to get them after me—I've no intention of quitting until I've five millions.”

“You have only another step to take, and you will establish your claim to all the privileges enjoyed by aristocrats.” He laughed.

“No, I am too sensible for that,” he replied; “although, for that matter, you know I always held nature had made its divisions. There will be hewers of wood and drawers of water as long as grass grows or water runs.”

“I meant there is danger that one day you will look with contempt on a man with less than ten thousand a year.”

“Don't blame me, my boy,” he replied, in a patronising manner I immediately remembered, “if I've set my peg for five millions.”

“I've seen the time you were as well off, enjoyed the world, literature, art, the society of your friends, and, above all, the companionship of your wife and children, and on less than three thousand a year, for I happen to know you gave liberally and lent freely.”

“I can only repeat—$5,000,000 is my figure. And I've only made the first notch on that stick.”

“How if you fall? You never know when the see-saw will bump you on the ground.”

The next day Eugene F— lost $100,000. A week later he was not worth $10. There came out of a contest, such as was never witnessed before nor since between oil operators, mere wrecks of men mentally and morally, physically and financially, chief among whom was Eugene F—. The tarantula's bite had poisoned his life's blood. He was no longer the brisk, neat, scrupulously dressed, quiet-mannered gentleman. He was unshaven half the time. His eyes were shifting, never steady, and partly discolored. Unrest and the fever of speculation left their traces—stamped—I should say branded him as an unsuccessful man.

I once heard a man (and he belonged to my own guild, more's the pity), say that all labor was degrading. He cited our great manufacturing centers—pointed to homes of the workers whose products are the very pillars of the earth, so far as it is commercial, monied, and many of its social institutions are concerned, and proved to his own satisfaction that the tendency of all labor was to brutalize, to harden, to destroy the sensibilities. He made the too common mistake of confounding effects with causes.

I wonder what this student would say if somebody would cite to him the case of Eugene F—. It might puzzle him to define the precise value of the patent of nobility he derived through two years' intercourse with the men who govern the world's marts, and represent the ramified interests of trade.

Eugene was rushing—he never walked as other men walk now—past me one day, when I caught his arm.

“Hello! How'd y old boy?”

“That's precisely the question I have determined to ask you. Come in here and have a glass of wine.” As I led him into a little snuggerly few frequented, he answered, “Permit me to nominate brandy or whiskey for mine.”

Looking him in the face as of old, I said: “The battle has gone against you.”

“Yes. I haven't a dollar to my name, Ned.”

I was amused. I thought there was something left he could turn into cash, and I could not help expressing my thoughts.

“No, no! Nothing of the sort. I could have—in fact I should have—managed differently, and put aside something—a little bit in real estate, or a few bonds—but I didn't."

"What next?"

"What next?" he repeated dreamily and drowsily. "Oh! I've not made up my mind."

"Eugene," I said briskly, "go back and ask for your old place. I believe it's there for the asking. And in six months you will look back on your past experience in oil as a bad dream."

"You are right, Ned. I always thought you a slow goer, but you are right nine cases out of ten. I'll act on your advice—and I thank you from the bottom of my soul for the interest you manifest in me."

He was as good as his word. But before the month was out, he joined forces with another clerk, and made $150 on a turn in oil. He was bobbing up beside the dashing operators inside of a month.

A month later there was a battle royal lasting three days, in which the bulls and bears were so thoroughly mixed and blended, that it was with extreme difficulty the best informed observed could determine the relative positions of the horned and clawed competitors. Immense sums were made and lost. On the first day it was reported that Eugene F. cleared $40,000. On the third it was rumored he had accumulated $250,000. At noon, in the presence of a throng of men whose frantic actions and feverish faces exhibited every phase of a gambler's experience Eugene announced himself "ahead of the game $300,000," at 2 o'clock he had not enough money to pay for his lodging.

I was coming out of The Era office about 3 o'clock next morning. Somebody telephoned from a livery stable there was a good "item" in Slade's building, a locality well-known to the police and press gang. The last were disgusted with the ameness of the "items" the premises furnished, and concertedly called for strenuous action on the part of the authorities. The morning was wet and chilly, one of those sleety, dismal mornings that drives man and beast into hasty common shelter. I refused to stir at first, then something I have never been able to explain to myself (certainly it was not the fear that our contemporaries would secure an item the readers of The Era would be deprived of), caused me to change my mind. I made my way to the notorious premises indicated, and stumbling into the hallway ran against a policeman.

"He's had an awful time, poor devil. I never saw anybody suffer so much. It was awful—awful."

"Here's what's the matter, I guess," said another policeman as he poked up a small label marked rat poison. The wretch at my feet suddenly drew up his knees, groaned in a horrible manner, and turned fairly upon his back, looked straight upwards with an expression so ghastly that we were awe-stricken as his soul took its flight.

It was the face of my friend Eugene F.—

We find in the Washington Evening Star opinions of several leading Congressmen relative to the tariff which is the principal topic in the House. Among others, Representative Lowry of this district, in reply to the question of a Star reporter as to "public sentiment in Indiana on the tariff?" he said:

"The democrat want some legislation here for the reduction of custom duties. We want to cut down the surplus revenue and reduce taxation. The people of Indiana, in my judgment, are in favor of letting the tax on whisky and tobacco where it is. They think no articles are better able to bear the burden of taxation than tobacco and whisky. But there are a good many necessities of life that can and ought to be cheapened. We must do this by reducing the tariff."

Representative Forney expects harmony at Chicago. "We may be a little down now," said Representative Forney, of Alabama, referring to the democratic party, "but it is only temporary. That will pass away. If our eagle stoops a little now it is only to plume himself for a loftier flight. Here in the House the tariff is discussed according to the influence it may have upon the return of members respectively. But at Chicago everything will be subordinated to the election of a President. That will be the objective point, and parties, like armies, must have an objective point in order to win success. The tariff and every question there will be considered with regard to its effect upon the whole country, and you will see that the democratic party will be entirely harmonious."

The New York Times shows the difference in the price of clothing of similar quality and workmanship in New York and London. A broad cloth dress suit costing $50 in New York costs but $23 in London. A heavy business suit $50 in New York to $13 in London; spring business overcoat $20 in New York to $8 in London; a winter beaver overcoat at $35 in New York to $4.50 in London. Silk hats $5 in New York to $3 in London. The garments costing $218 in New York cost but $97.75 in London, difference in favor of low tariff $120.25. Here is a nut for your high protective men to crack, take the meats out of it and be benefitted thereby.

An exchange says that the demand for the "old ticket" seems to be confined wholly to the Democrats. No clamor has yet arisen among the Republicans for their "old ticket" of 1876, which was composed of two men called Hayes and Wheeler. While Tilden and Hendricks are prominently before the people as probable candidates for the highest office in the gift of the people, the two frauds are to be lost to sight and memory except as they are remembered as corrupt and despicable characters.

Notes and Comments.

From 1334 to 1831, nearly 500 years, women without rank, were not allowed to wear silk dresses in Berlin.

"Bill" Jones, who tried to shoot the assassin Guiteau in the van, is to have his trial the 28th of this month. Those Washington lawyers hang on well.

—Bismarck explains that he didn't want to be a letter carrier for Colonel Tom Ochiltree. Some of these foreign potentates are altogether too finicky.

Superintendent Walling, for nearly thirty-five years Chief of Police in New York, is granted a six months furlough. The loss of his family has unsettled his mind.

A committee of fifteen are aiding Mayor Stephens in bringing harmony and order out of confusion at Cincinnati. The Mayor was ill during the trouble and unable to be out a part of the time.

The Southern papers are poking a little fun at Senator Sherman on law and order in Ohio. They claim that we are the third State in volume of crime, and that the recent troubles at Cincinnati exceed any thing which has occurred in the South since the war; they move an investigation.

Cincinnati News Journal: Now that Minister Sargent has quit biting his thumb at Prince Bismarck it is to be hoped that the prince will again affectionately embrace his old time friend, the American hog. The prince is dying for a string of sausage made of Yankee hog, but his pride gets the better of his stomach sometimes.

—Washington Evening Star: Mr. Carl Schurz has done a very sensible act in declining the $100,000 gift, which some of his friends were getting up for him. Mr. Schurz is not a rich man,—the more to his credit, after his long official career,—but he is a man of fine abilities, is in robust health, and in the intellectual prime of life. He is not in need of charity, even on a grand scale, and it is pleasant to find him independent enough to prefer to earn his own living.

Arbor Day Celebration and National Educational Exhibition.

Mr. Editor: You will confer a favor by permitting me, through the columns of your paper, to announce that the 14th day of April is to be observed throughout the state as an Arbor Day Celebration, to secure the planting of trees (and flowers where desirable) on school grounds. The plan is that a dinner be provided by the ladies, appropriate exercises be arranged, such as literary work, songs and merry-making in general, that all may unite in observing the Easter season as a Feast of Gladness. We hope every school district in the county will take an interest in this matter and thus, while enjoying a social time, perform a work of great value. If every family would come to the school-grounds, and under the guidance of the Director or some other competent person, set out a tree or two on school grounds would be transformed into inviting and healthful groves. This work is being pushed in all other parts of the state, and it is sincerely hoped DeKalb will not be behind. I would suggest that the directors immediately call meetings for the purpose of arranging and perfecting some plan.

I also wish DeKalb to do her part in maintaining the educational reputation of our state at the National Educational Exhibition, to be held at Madison, Wisconsin, July 16th and 18th next.

Teachers will please secure and send to me by the 10th day of May, any suitable work, as composition writing, map-drawing geometrical and freehand drawing, analyzing or diagraming, all to be graded to age of pupils, also an exhibit of the classification of district schools, giving manuscripts with questions of highest pupil in each grade upon examination to next higher grade and any other special work the teacher may think worthy to be sent. All this is a special request of the State Superintendent.

C. M. MEXICO,
Co. Supt., DeKalb Co., Ind.

The year 1884 is the two hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Presbyterian church in this country. It is also the two hundredth anniversary of the introduction of the Baptist denomination into Pennsylvania the first church being founded at Cold Springs, Bristol township, Bucks county.

TUESDAY.....APRIL 15, 1884.

The mad blacked has put a check to grain pedlars.

There was a light fall of snow Tuesday last followed by a cold wave.

The Auburn Republican has a scribbler at this place, of the Jackson species, who is concocting a live long.

Doc Nashum were out a set of A 1 baggy shells on Monday in the service of his country. Doc is a good 'un and deserves a shrome.
Solomon the Gilder peddled radical tickets to the Rioblan polls on Monday, and got this usual:

Rev. J. L. Ramsey and F. G. Fries started for Pers. Ind., Tuesday last, to attend the E. K. Conference, which convened at that place on the 14th inst.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society, held the first quarterly session for the present year at the M. E. Church, on Thursday, 14 inst.

Jack Carver equalled himself nobly on Thursday last Monday. His tall, majestic form could be seen toying up among the suns from early morn 'till the sun went down over the vanquished radicals.

Rev. J. L. Ramsey preached his farewell sermon on the 23d, and it was pronounced a interesting discourse. It is the wish of a majority of our citizens that Mr. Ramsey be retired in this charge for another term.

The fellow who swore off voting about thirty years ago, because of a "challonge" on grounds that he was not of lawful age at the time, was seen hanging around the Ho Monday, exhibiting himself as a uni-versitally.

"Mik," one of the section hands on this road, was badly hurt Thursday morning, a tin falling on his head and left arm the swelling rises from a blister at the point, the injuries are not serious although very painful.

Persons safely promise the individual who tries to trump up a libel suit against this paper that it will be a cold day for him. We will make this country to hot to hold his name before he gets through with the libel suit.

Oregon proposes to face the question squarely by submitting at a State election June 2, the following proposed amendment to the State Constitution:
"The elective franchise is the State shall not hereafter be prohibited to any citizen on account of sex." Although woman suffrage exists in several of the territories, it has not yet gained a foothold in any of the States.

The democrats of Riobland held a lively and interesting caucus meeting on the 29th ult., and as will be seen by the returns of Monday's election, nominated a ticket to win.
Nothing slow about the democracy. The following delegates were chosen to the various pending conventions: State convention, to be held at Indianapolis, June 26, Dr. W. H.
Nashum; Congressional, at Auburn, May 16, Edward Orr; Judicial convention (not called), N. McIntyre; Senatorial convention (not called), J. M. Goetschius; Joint Representative convention (not called), Joseph Kirkpatrick.

The new hotel block that is being erected at Kendallville by Capt. John R. Smith, will when completed be the most attractive building in that city, and for hotel purposes, as intended, one of the finest and most commodious of any in Northern Indiana. A part of the first story and basement is already up, and in this Capt. Smith has opened a home for the reception of guests. The building with all the improvements in modern architecture, will be pushed to completion as fast possible. There are few persons better qualified for a successful landlord than Mr. S., as all who have yet been a guest of the hotel de Smith will bear testimony.

The following notice of Messrs. Wolf & Grunauer's Star Clothing House at Kendalville, whose advertisement appears on another page of this paper, we clip from the Fort Wayne Hoosier:

The latest addition to the mercantile business of Kendallville is the "Star Clothing House" by the firm above named. In the room recently vacated by A. J. Loomis has been placed a large and fine stock of clothing, hats caps and gents' furnishing goods, and Messrs. Wolf & Grunauer promise to lead the trade in these lines. A word about the members of the firm: Mr. Wolf is well and favorably known by his connection with J. Keller & Co., where he personally superintended the clothing and merchant tailoring department, and during the twelve years he has been in the business has amassed a fund of experience which he will now apply by while engaging in business for himself. Mr. Grunauer for years was connected with one of the largest clothing houses in New York City, and for the past four years has been in Kendallville where he is known as a popular salesman. These gentlemen start out with many encouraging signs of ultimate success which they are bound to attain. A feature of the store will be the merchant tailoring department, where is employed a fashionable cutter and the best of tailors. It is not mere guesswork to predict that for years in ready-made clothing no perfect fit in custom-made goods this firm will become famed all over this region—it will be a sure, and certain result.

The Hon. Frank H. Hurd having been approached upon the subject of recent Democratic caucus on "Tariff Reform Bill" is reported as saying:

"The action taken was that usual in caucuses. Of course we have no power to compel a man to vote, but the resolutions set forth the party's policy, leaving each one to judge how far he ought to abide by them. It was a question governing our policy on the tariff. Some thought it unwise to raise the issue, believing that to do so would injure us in the campaign. It was put to a vote, and the party, which decided the question by the election of Carlisle as Speaker again decided, and by an overwhelming majority, in favor of reducing the tariff. That is all there is to it. I do not anticipate that many will ignore this action. In the Ohio delegation, for instance, which gave nine votes, two being silent, for Randall's position, I do not think more than four, and perhaps only three, will hang to him in the face of this vote. So of other delegations. I believe that the bill will now be taken up, debated, and passed. The opposition caucus was, in fact, less than I had supposed. I had counted up 65 whom I regarded as certain to oppose the revenue reform policy. As it is, I think the opposition will now dwindle down to a few votes, mainly from Pennsylvania."

[From the Garrett Edition.]

Keyser Voting Today.

As we go to press the election is passing off serenely. The Republicans are so hopelessly in the minority here that a nice plan was conceived, in order to make any kind of showing, of bringing out a ticket under new colors, so they call it the "citizens ticket," but like all artful dodges of the radical Republicans, it will be snowed under by the usual democratic majority. We warn democrats that this is simply another Republican trick designed to catch their votes.

Last week in the Noble Circuit Court at Albion, Judge McBride sentenced the B. & O. train wrecker, Jack Ryan, to nine years in the penitentiary. Winebrenner, who was tried for complicity in the crime, was acquitted.

The meeting of the American Medical Association takes place at Washington, May 18th, 1884. The following arrangements have been made with the B. & O. R. R. Co., for the transportation of delegates to Washington, D. C., to the above meeting: Delegates paying full regular fare from principal points on Trans-Ohio Division to Washington, will be returned to such points, on certificates, at one-fourth the lowest limited rates.

A correspondent of the Kendallville Standard sends the following particulars of an attempt near Albion to effect another wreck on the Baltimore & Ohio:

On Saturday night some ties were piled on the B. & O. track at the long bridge one mile west of Albion. A loaded emigrant train going west that night fortunately knocked the obstructions from the track, otherwise a frightful wreck would have been piled down thirty feet below the track. The wreckers are not all caught yet, but may be.

By a recent decision of the courts, the B.
& O. wins another victory over its great rival the Western Union, and the latter corporation gets a very black eye. A New York Associated Press dispatch says: "The case of the Western Union Telegraph Company v.
the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Company regarding the National Telegraph or West Shore and Nixie Plate railroad telegraph lines, has been decided in favor of the Baltimore & Ohio. The Judge says that the act of Congress of July, 1866, authorized any telegraph company to maintain and operate wires along any post road of the United States, and all railroads are such post roads.

Democratic State Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 28, 1884.

The electors of Indiana, regardless of past political affiliations, who are desirous of co-operating with the Democracy to the support of its principles and business, and who are in favor of an honest and economical administration of our public affairs, and opposed to the corrupt practices of the Republican party, are invited to participate in the meetings representative to attend a delegate convention to be held at the city of Indianapolis, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 1884, at Engle's opera house, for the purpose of adopting a platform of principles and the nomination of candidates to be supported for the following offices:

Governor,	Lieutenant-Governor,
One Judge Supreme Court	Secretary of State,
Auditor of State,	Treasurer of State,
Reporter of Supreme Court,	Attorney General,
Superintendent of Public Instruction

The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 200 votes cast for Wm. H. Myers for Secretary of State in 1882, and one delegate for each fraction of one hundred or over.

The delegates from each Congressional district will meet on the evening previous to the convention, at places to be hereafter designated by this committee, for the purpose of selecting and reporting to the convention—

- One committeeman on Permanent Organization.
- One committeeman on Platform and Resolutions.
- One Vice President for the convention.
- One Assistant Secretary for the convention.
- Two delegates to the National democratic convention.
- Two alternate delegates to National democratic convention.
- One Presidential Elector.
- One contingent Presidential Elector.
- One member State Central committee for one year.
- One Committeeman on Credentials.

The committee on Platforms and Resolutions will meet immediately after adjournment of District meetings, at 9 o'clock p. m., at the consultation rooms of Supreme Court, Tuesday evening, June 24.

The committee on Permanent Organization will meet at the same hour in the State Auditor's office. It will be their duty to name a President and Principal Secretary of the convention, four delegates at large and four alternate delegates to the National Convention, two Electors for the State at large and two contingent Electors, and also to recommend rules for the government of the convention.

The committee on Credentials will meet at 8 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, June 26, at rooms of the State Central Committee, to determine such contests as may be submitted to them.

Delegate tickets of admission to the convention will be issued to the chairman of each county delegation and to authorized representatives of the press upon the presentation of credentials at the State Central Committee rooms.

By order of the State Democratic Central Committee.

JOSEPH E. McDONALD, Chairman,
JOS. L. REILY, Secretary.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Chicago Press: Southern republicans are solid for Arthur. He owns the offices.

—New York Journal: Next to Mr. Barnum's white elephant, Blaine has the biggest boom. They are both spotted.

—Clebune (Text) Chronicle: A Texas sheriff would have suppressed that Cincinnati mob in two minutes—by giving up the prisoner.

—Philadelphia Press: William H. English, of Indiana, has arrived in Washington, thus showing that walking isn't so bad as reported.

—New York Journal: The remarkable gas well which was recently discovered in Pennsylvania will probably be utilized by stump speakers this summer.

—Richmond (Va.) Dispatch: John Sherman's experience with the Danville investigation has been somewhat like the experience of the mule with John Phoenix's mountain howitzer.

—New York Sun: The Logan boom is in a bad way. The Arthur boom is in a very bad way. The Edmunds boom seems to lack vitality. But the Blaine boom booms.

—Chicago Herald: Robert Buchanan, an English poet, says it is barbarous to put editors in jail. So it is. The highest interests of civilization, however, sometimes demand that poets shall be looked up.

—Cin. News Journal: It is very amusing to hear democrats talk about reading Tilden out of the party. All such democrats should first read themselves into the party and fling mud at Tilden afterward.

—Danville (Ky.) Tribune: Sitting Bull, the great free trader in scalps, is on his way to Washington. We don't know whether he will visit Danville or not, but we will say that those who feel a little shaky had better have their scalps glued on tight.

—Cin. News Journal: Mr. Beecher must be careful about his figures. His calling would naturally suggest scriptural allusions; but he must not speak of democracy as a Samson in the arms of Delilah, or Samson may stone the walls of a glass house down about his ears.

—Exchange: 4c's— Cincinnati, crime, cats, and colored babies. The city of floods, murders, and riots is now giving a cat show and colored baby fair. The News Journal offers a prize for the best sixteen line poem on the subject. If there is one thing more than colored babies that will wake the muse, it is a cat.

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Another correspondent writes to us inquiring about Mr. Blaine's religion. When last heard from Jim was a Calvinistic Universalist, paying pew rent to the Methodist, and communing with the Baptists. He left the Catholic Church after the publication of the Mulligan letters because he was opposed to auricular confession.

—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph: The title of "colonel" is a name of distinction that is given for different virtues in different localities. In Texas a man who shoots another is entitled to the rank. In Kentucky the man who can drink the most whisky and keep his feet receives the appellation. In New York it belongs to the president of a coaching club. In Boston it is only given to people that have swallowed a Webster's Unabridged. In Pittsburg every man is a "colonel" who keeps his boots blacked.

THRILLING SCENE ON A CAR.

Passengers on the Chicago & Alton train that left Kansas City the other evening for St. Louis witnessed a thrilling incident, which had an interest second only to a train robbery, occurring, as it did, at the dead of night, and of about thirty miles an hour. The train left Kansas City in the evening, and among the passengers who boarded it at one of the way stations was a man named Powell, a druggist, of Gilliam, Mo. Conductor J. W. Dunsmore came through the train from the forward part, collecting tickets. When he reached the place where Powell sat he stopped for his fare. Powell said that he wanted to get off at Gilliam.

"This train does not stop at Gilliam," said the conductor. "You will have to ride to Glasgow, as that's our nearest stopping place."

"But I don't want to go to Glasgow," responded Powell, growing very indignant. "I can't help that; I have to obey orders. This train never stops at Gilliam."

A controversy followed, in which Powell got very angry, but finally he paid his fare and the dispute was supposed to be settled. Dunsmore moved on through the train collecting fares. He had gone a few yards only when Powell got up, put one hand in his pocket, and followed. He overtook the conductor near the rear of the second car from the last. Just as Dunsmore had opened the door and was stepping out on the dark platform Powell came up close behind him, threw his left arm around Dunsmore's head, and pulled it back so as to expose his throat. At the same instant he drew from his pocket with his right hand a large pocket knife, the blade of which was opened, and made a desperate attempt to cut Dunsmore's throat.

The train was at a great disadvantage. The train was running at such a high rate of speed as to make a foothold on the platform somewhat precarious, and the roar and the darkness prevented him at first from judging of the character of the assault. His disadvantage was increased by the fact that one of his hands is maimed, and he has only a partial use of it. Still he was game, and, throwing up his good arm, he managed to strike the hand that held the knife just as it was reaching for his throat. The effect was to change the direction of Powell's thrust and the knife sank into Dunsmore's cheek just below the eye. A hard pull at it made it tear its way in a semi-circular course through the flesh, boring the cheek bone for several inches. Dunsmore clutched at the knife, but missed it, and Powell, still grasping him from behind, made another thrust at his face, cutting the other cheek in exactly the same manner. Before he could strike again Dunsmore, who is a muscular man, tore himself free, and, turning round, struck Powell two heavy blows in the face with his good hand, knocking him back several feet into the car through the open door. The passengers by this time became aware of the desperate struggle going on, and separated the men. Powell resumed his seat.

Dunsmore went through the next car and, almost crying in his anger at the assault, begged that somebody lend him a revolver. One of the passengers, on learning the circumstances, gave him a revolver, first, however, exacting a promise that he would use it only for the purpose of arresting Powell, and not for revenge. Cocking the weapon, Dunsmore went forward to the car where Powell sat. As Dunsmore entered the car with cocked revolver, gleaming eyes, mutilated face, and clothes, cheeks and whiskers covered with blood, the picture was most dramatic, and the passengers, who did not know of the promise given by him when he procured the pistol, were appalled at the prospect of a tragedy. Approaching the seat occupied by Powell, Dunsmore covered him with the revolver, and, in a voice which was heard above the roar of the train, exclaimed:

"Now, throw up your hands." Powell saw by the wounded man's eyes that death was the only alternative, and he slowly and sullenly raised his hands above his head and remained motionless. The tableau was a striking one. Dunsmore ordered him to give up that knife. Still holding up one hand he put the other in his pocket and produced the knife, which Dunsmore took possession of. He was then told that he was a prisoner and he remained perfectly submissive until the train reached Glasgow, where he was given in charge of a constable. The conductor's wounds are not of a dangerous character, but he will be disfigured for life.

The fact has come to light that in Jackson County, Georgia, an innocent man was hanged there four years ago. A terrible crime had been committed, and on circumstantial evidence the wrong man was hurried to the gallows. Trials and convictions for crime under a whirl of popular excitement are little less deplorable in their results than the application of lynch law, and both methods are unwise.

Murders and Executions.

In an editorial in the April century, entitled "Mob or Magistrate," the following comparison is made between murder and the application of justice: "Over against the 1,500 murders of the last year, we have the report of barely ninety-three legal executions. Many of these must have been cases in which the crime had been committed during 1882, while many of the criminals of 1883 had not, yet been brought to trial. It is not, however, far from the truth to say that, while 1,300 or 1,400 murders are committed in this country every year, fewer than a hundred of the murderers suffer the extreme penalty of the law. When the willful slayer knows that he has thirteen chances out of fourteen of escaping the full penalty of the law, the deterrent influence of punishment can not be said to be very powerful.

"The small number of murderers hanged by the Sheriffs, and the greater number hanged by the mobs, should be evidence enough that the administration of our criminal Courts in many quarters is fatally defective, and needs reforming. The only classes of persons interested in maintaining the present state of things are the criminals and the criminal lawyers, and it is not for their exclusive benefit that society is organized. The contrast between the swift, firm and sure methods of English and Continental Courts in dealing with the great criminals, and the tardy, feeble and abortive methods of our own, should sting our national pride to some energetic measures of reform. The people must rouse themselves to demand a more vigorous enforcement of the laws, and they must see to it that Judges and Prosecuting Attorneys are chosen who have the ability and the will to bring evil-doers to justice. The Judges on the Bench may well inquire whether the protection of the criminal has not assumed disproportionate importance in our criminal procedure. If, in our fear lest an innocent man may suffer, the law itself, which is the only protection of innocent men, becomes utterly paralyzed, then there is a call for a revision of our methods and our maxims, and the infusion of a new spirit into our laws. Every Judge who will brush aside the hair-splitting devices of the lawyers, and insist that criminal trials shall be conducted with rigor and directness of purpose, will deserve, and will be likely to win the approval of his fellow-citizens."

The Horrors of Intemperance.

[The Bitter Cry.]

"More than one-fourth of daily earnings of the denizens of the slums goes over the bars of the public houses and gin palaces of London. To study the drink phase of this burning question let us take the districts from which I have submitted to your readers in previous articles. On a Saturday night in the great street adjacent there are three corner public houses which takes as much money as the whole of the other shops on both sides of the way put together. Butchers, bakers, greengrocers, clothiers, furniture-dealers, all the caterers for the populace, are open till a late hour; there are hundreds of them trading around about, but the whole lot do not take as much money as the three publicans—that is a fact ghastly houses and you will see them crammed. There are artisans and laborers drinking away the wages that ought to clothe their little ones. Here are the women squandering the money that would purchase food for the lack of which their children are dying. One group rivets the eye of an observer at once. It consists of an old gray-haired dame, a woman of forty, and a girl of about nineteen with a baby in her arms. All these are in a state which is best described as "maudlin"—they have finished one lot of gin, and the youngest woman is ordering another round. It is a great grandmother, grandmother, and a mother and her baby—four generations together—and they are all dirty and dishevelled and drunk, except the baby, and even that poor little mite may have its first taste of alcohol presently. It is no uncommon sight in these places to see a mother wet her baby's lips with gin and water. The process is called "giving the young'un a taste," and the baby's father will look sometimes and enjoy the joke immensely. "But the time to see the result of a Saturday night's heavy drinking in a low neighborhood is after the houses are closed. Then you meet dozens of poor wretches feeling home to their miserable dens; some roll across the roadway and fall, cutting themselves till the blood flows. Every penny in some instances has gone in drink. One dilapidated, ragged wretch I met last Saturday night was gnawing a baked potato. By his side stood a thin clad woman bearing a baby in her arms, and in hideous language she reproached him for his selfishness. She had fetched him out of a public house with his last half-penny in his pocket. With that half-penny he had bought the potato which he refused to share with her. At every corner the police are ordering or coaxing men and women to 'move on.' Between 12 and 1 it is a long procession of drunken men and women, and the most drunken seem to be those whose outward appearance betoken the most abject poverty.

The Kansas Corn Donation.

CINCINNATI, April 11.—The Butler Co., Kas., corn for the Ohio River flood sufferers was formally delivered to the relief committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce. The chamber was decorated with designs used on the cars conveying the corn. Speeches were made by members of the relief committee and of the party accompanying the train. The sale is announced for tomorrow.

TALMADGE TALKS

On "High License, or the Monopoly of Abomination."

Special to the Detroit Free Press.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Dr. Talmadge addressed 4,000 people today on "High License, or the Monopoly of Abomination." "We are at a point," he said, "where it is proposed to restrain liquor selling by compelling the liquor merchants to pay a high license of say $500 or $1,000. The result of high license is to make rum selling and rum drinking respectable by closing the low grogeries and allowing a few gilded saloons to sell all the liquor. It is a proposition to close the rash on the body politic and gather together all the poison and all the pus into a few great carbuncles. [Laughter.] High license is the monopoly of abomination. Legalized rum selling has made the ground of England, Ireland and America hollow with the carcasses of slaughtered drunkards.

"High license is a violation of the first principle of our government—equal rights. It allows one man who can pay $500 or $1,000 to sell sweetened dynamite, and denies the right to the man who can pay only $100 or nothing at all. I plead for equal rights. High license allows a few men to sell extracts of logwood, strychnine and blue vitriol, and denies to others even the right to strike a lucifer match. It isn't fair. Why don't you apply the same principle to other trades? If it is right to sell liquor, all men should have an equal right to deal in it. If it is wrong, then a license fee of $500 or $1,000 is simply a bribe to the government.

"But it is said that we can't get prohibition, and that it is better to take what we can get. Some say that a half a loaf of bread is better than no bread at all. Yes, provided the bread is not poisoned. A half a pound of butter is better than no butter at all, provided it isn't oleomargarine. [Laughter.] A midnight express train speeds across a bridge, one-half of which has been swept away by a storm and flood. The train rolls over into the torrent below and 200 souls are landed into eternity. Is half a bridge better than no bridge?

"But it is said that prohibition law cannot be executed. But there is not a law on the statute book that is perfectly executed. We have laws against murder, blasphemy, theft; yet murder, blasphemy and theft abound. Then let us have a high license for theft. [Laughter.] We must put down these small thieves who make way with door mats, postage stamps and chocolate drops. [Laughter.] Let us make the license higher, say $10,000, so that only a few can pay it. Then we shall put to flight the wharf rats and all hall to million dollar rascals. If rum selling is wrong $5,000,000 ought not to buy immunity." [Applause.]

Democratic Congressional Convention.

The Democracy of the Twelfth Congressional District will meet in Delegate Convention, at the court house in Auburn, Indiana, on TUESDAY, MAY 15TH, 1884.

At 8 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for Congress.

The basis of representation will be the same as provided for the Democratic State Convention, as follows:

Allen County.....	86	Noble County.....	18
DeKalb ".....	18	Steuben ".....	8
Lagrange ".....	8	Whitley ".....	11
Total number of votes.....	144
Necessary to a choice.....	43

By order of the Committee,

C. A. ZOLLINGER, Chairman.

Democratic State Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 22, 1884.

The electors of Indiana, regardless of past political affiliations, who are desirous of co-operating with the democracy in the support of its principles and nominees, and who are in favor of an honest and economical administration of our public affairs, and opposed to the corrupt practices of the Republican party, are invited to participate in the meetings throughout the State for the purpose of selecting representatives to attend a delegate convention to be held at the city of Indianapolis, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1884, at English's opera house, for the purpose of adopting a platform of principles and the nomination of candidates to be supported for the following offices:

Governor,	President of the State,
One Judge Supreme Court,	Secretary of State,
Auditor of State,	Treasurer of State,
Reporter of Supreme Court,	Attorney General,
Superintendent of Public Instruction,

The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 250 votes cast for Wm. B. Myers for Secretary of State in 1880, and one delegate for each fraction of one hundred or over.

The delegates from each Congressional district will meet on the evening previous to the convention, at places to be hereafter designated by this committee, for the purpose of selecting and reporting to the convention—

- One commissioner on Permanent Organization
- One commissioner on Platform and Resolutions.
- One Vice President for the convention.
- One Assistant Secretary for the convention.
- Two delegates to the National democratic convention.
- Two alternate delegates to National democratic convention.
- One Presidential Elector.
- One contingent Presidential Elector.
- One member State Central committee from each law town.
- One "non-militant" or Graduate.

The committee on Platforms and Resolutions will meet immediately after adjournment of District meetings, say 9 o'clock p. m., at the consultation room of Supreme Court, Tuesday evening, June 24.

The committee on Permanent Organization will meet at the same hour in the State Auditor's office. It will be their duty to name a President and Principal Secretary of the convention, four delegates at large and four alternate delegates to the National Convention, two Electors for the State at large and two contingent Electors, and also to recommend rules for the government of the convention.

The committee on Credentials will meet at 8 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, June 25, at room of the State Central Committee, to determine such contents as may be submitted to them.

Delegate tickets of admission to the convention will be issued to the chairman of each county delegation and to authorized representatives of the press upon the presentation of credentials at the State Central Committee rooms.

By order of the State Democratic Central Committee.

JOSEPH E. McDONALD, Chairman,
JOS. L. REILY, Secretary.

FORTY YEARS AGO.

Coffins were very plain and burial caskets were unknown.

Tomstones had larger epitaphs and more verbosely engraved upon them.

Eggs were a shilling a dozen and butter was considered high at eighteen cents per lb.

Much of the silver currency, sps, levis, and dollars was of Mexican and Spanish coinage.

The country retail trade was much better, as people could not so easily run to the city by rail.

Business letters were more voluminous and formal, and were written in a precise, round hand.

There was York currency, eight shillings to the dollar, and New England currency six shillings to the dollar.

The diet was more suboerged with grease, the winter breakfast usually being made of salted ham and hot cakes.

Dinner was simply a hasty lunch at noon, and little importance was attached to the necessity for good digestion or a period of rest after eating.

New Orleans and muscovado molasses, very black and thin, was the common sweetener for buckwheat cakes. Refined molasses was almost unknown.

The bank bills were of State banks, and the further West their locality the shakier they were. Illinois and Indiana bills would barely pass in New York.

Bread was home made. Coffee was freshly ground every morning, and the grinding of the family coffee mill was a familiar sound hours before the children arose.

Negro minstrelsy was just cropping out in the traveling circus. There were generally but two performers, who assumed male and female characters. The popular melody was "Jump, Jim Crow."

People did not live as long as they now do, nor was the average health as good as at present. They ate more meat, more grease, more hot bread, and more heavy dishes, and drank more at meals.

The death of Charles Reade, says the Detroit Free Press, extinguishes the last of the brilliant novelists, whose power and beauty have illuminated the reign of Queen Victoria. Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot and Reade adorn the period which will be called by her name, as Spenser, Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, and the other Elizabethan poets gave luster to the reign of the Queen of that name, and as Pope, Johnson, Goldsmith, Defoe not only saved the reign of the feeble Queen Anne from oblivion, but endowed it with a renown which the sovereign herself could never have won for it.

In the plan and method of his works, Mr. Reade was more nearly allied to Sir Walter Scott than to his eminent contemporaries.

Instead, however, of dealing with the events and characters of the past, and giving to historical research the glamour of poetry and picturesqueness of life, he dived into the crowd about him, searched the annals of the courts, the current record of the newspapers, and studied with industry and acumen the geography and travels of contemporary lands and present explorers. One book alone—"The Cloister of the Hearth"—a most brilliant picture of Continental Europe in the sixteenth century, challenges Scott upon his own ground, and in some respects surpasses even the masterpieces of the great Scotchman. With this and one other exception, "Griffith Gaunt," his work was mainly directed to the very hour which was striking at the time his pen was in his hand. "Never too Late to Mend" handled the question of prison reform; "Hard Cash" and "A Terrible Temptation" exposed the dangers of private insane asylums; "Put Yourself in His Place" was an exposure of trades unionism.

He was a champion of reform even in private life. He was keen on the scent for scandals and wrongs in institutions. A few years since the inmate of an insane asylum died and was buried. Reade was not satisfied with the affair. He immediately devoted his time and his money to a personal investigation. He inquired, interviewed, questioned, inspected; even had the body disinterred. Then he offered £500 reward for proof that this man had been killed by an attendant's jumping upon him and breaking his breast-bone. Dreading a libel suit, no paper would publish this offer even as an advertisement. He thereupon had printed and distributed thousands of circulars all over the United Kingdom. The press outside of London began talking of it. It grew into such proportions that the London papers were obliged to take notice of it, and the attendant is now serving out in an English prison his sentence for the crime of manslaughter.

Mr. Reade was of an enthusiastic, energetic, irrepresible temperament. One can almost feel in his style the vigorous red blood that must have coursed through his veins. It is masculine in temper, pictorial in form, epigrammatic, yet flowing and as full of individuality as Carlyle's or Victor Hugo's. Yet this very individuality which charmed his readers, as a new and fresh influence in literature, will probably limit his popularity in the future. He is not sufficiently broad and sympathetic, not sufficiently many-sided to touch humanity, except as he arrested its attention by his trumpet call to its fleeing abuses, frailties and passions.

But even if he become, in time, only the shade of a name, "the ghost of a great presence," yet his place in the history of literature is well secured by his brilliant, if not solid, achievements.

The B. & O., as well as the public, this new feature in Round Trip Tickets.

This is the era of progress, of constant improvement in all things which go toward bettering the condition of mankind, and making a dollar count for one hundred cents every time. Certainly no corporation has demonstrated a keener appreciation of the demands of the times than the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company. The oldest passenger railroad in the world, it has since its very inception set the pace of improvement which later and similar organizations generally have followed. The B. & O. did very many things during the earlier years of existence upon an entirely original basis, for the simple reason, if for nothing else, that there were none to copy, none to imitate or follow. Thus dependent upon its own resources for its development, the necessity for originating led to confidence, and the habit of going ahead without regard to others. This sort of thing has naturally become the governing principle of the management. When all is ready new features are announced, and once inaugurated, the idea appears to be to immediately start on some other new facility, and get it in shape for putting it in practice. So it is that one improvement keeps close pace upon the preceding one, and the B. & O. maintains its splendid position of a half century or more as the model line of the country. The latest feature as regards the advantages offered the public is the system of round-trip tickets, which have recently been placed on sale in all the offices on the Trans-Ohio Divisions. The system is unquestionably most complete and thorough, and will be greatly appreciated throughout the extended section where it is in force. No matter from what station toward what station one desires to go, round-trip tickets may now be had at a much reduced rate. This will insure a satisfaction which cannot but largely increase the old-time popularity of the B. & O., and make it, as ever, by far the best patronized road of any in the sections through which it passes. These round-trip tickets will be good for thirty days, and as hitherto stated, will now be found on sale at any and every station on the Trans-Ohio Divisions and branches of the B. & O., to any and every station west of the Ohio River. The schedule of trains, already so complete, will doubtless be even more so when the new spring schedule goes into effect; and with the fine equipment, fast time and every convenience, the B. & O. is in no danger of being out of mind when one contemplates a trip. Special round-trip excursion rates can also be secured at any station; in the Trans-Ohio Divisions at still lower rates than single round-trip tickets when parties number ten or more, and every possible convenience secured in the way of cars and the like.

In conversation, a gentleman well-informed on national politics said that, in his opinion, aside from the tariff question, the most important point for the Democrats to consider would be who was to be the probable nominee of the Republican party. Many names have already been suggested, among them being Arthur, Blaine, Sherman, Logan, and possibly Gresham. It might be well, however, for the Democrats to understand that the possibly nominee of the convention at Chicago has been very little discussed by the newspapers of the country. General Grant will be found to be possessed of strength both in the South and West and in New York, and that a great deal of the talk about Logan means so much more strength for Grant.

To illustrate Grant's strength with the Republicans, and especially with those in the Northwest, it can be said that last fall, when the Northern Pacific railroad excursions were taking place, and General Grant, who was one of the prominent guests of the road, made a stop at any of the stations along the road from St. Paul to Helena, Mont., the populace when they became aware that he was on the train turned out to see him, and it was seen that among all the prominent gentlemen in that party, Grant was the only one from whom they desired a speech.

The Detroit Free Press is in receipt of the first number of the Cœur d'Alene Weekly Nugget. It is printed at Eagle City, which, it claims, is the metropolis of the new mining district. It is not a very large paper, but it sells for $12 a year. It gives a list of prices of articles of common household necessity at the mines. The list is made up by an Eagle City grocer, who appends the intimation that these prices may fluctuate, according to the condition of the trails: Flour, is $60 per barrel; sugar, 50 cents per pound, tea, $1 25; coffee, 60 cents; candles, 50 cents; bacon, 40 cents; potatoes, per pound, 25 cents; beans, per pound, 50 cents; tobacco, $1; soap, 25 cents; yeast powders, 75 cents; cheese, 25 cents; salt, 25 cents; syrup, per gallon, $4 50; coal oil, per can, $7 50; cigars, per thousand, $40 and $150; liquors, per gallon, $8; cook stoves, $40 to $150; brooms, $1 25; overalls, $5 50; boots, $7 to $12. The Nugget estimates that there are now 8,000 people at the mines, and others are coming in on all trails.

—The Hon. M. M. Ham, of the Dubuque, Iowa, Herald, attended the annual banquet of the Iroquois Club, at Chicago, and wrote to his father, the venerable Dr. Ham, Mayor of South Bend, Indiana, that the enthusiasm evoked by the reading of Mr. Tilden's letter grew into the wildest excitement whenever the name of the Siege of Gramercy was mentioned. "If Mr. Tilden will only consent to make the race," wrote Mr. Ham, "the people will soon learn that though his arm may be paralyzed his brain is not." There is a world of truth in this single sentence.

—A gentleman living at Aiken, S. C., owned a pair of ponies which the family had driven for years. Recently the roads became so bad that he sent the ponies out to his plantation to pasture, and bought a team of stout horses. When the ponies went to the farm, the old family coach dog which had run with them for years, accompanied them. They had been there a week when the dog trotted back to town to see his master. He hovered around the new horses for a few minutes and then put off briskly for the farm. In an hour he came back followed by the two faithful old ponies, whose places had been usurped by the horses.

The Waterloo Press says "the pay car passed through this place over the main line," meaning we presume the "main line" of the Lake Shore railroad, which happens to be located several miles north. The W. P. should consult a railway guide.

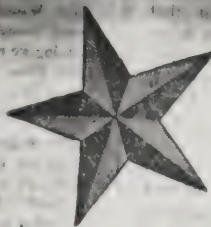

The resignation of Mr. Geo. B. Campbell as General Ticket Agent of the Fort Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville R'y, which he has tendered to Superintendent Worthington, to take effect today, deprives the company of a most faithful and efficient official who, in his eleven years of active service, has done much toward working that line up to its present standard of excellence. Mr. Campbell is one of those genial, courteous and obliging gentlemen who counts his friends by the legion, and the "Muncie Line" will find it no easy task to fill so ably and acceptably the chair he will soon vacate.

We understand that George M. Crane the present incumbent will be a candidate for re-election to the office of Clerk of the Town Board of Waterloo at the municipal election in May, or in other words he will succeed himself. Last year Mr. Crane was chosen Clerk without any material opposition, and considering that he has filled the office to the satisfaction of his constituency he will no doubt be unanimously re-elected. To the extent of our personal knowledge we have found Mr. Crane capable, obliging and very prompt in business matters, and we deem it our duty to speak a good word for him in this connection.

The election of Robert N. Crooks, of Waterloo Precinct, over Ike Hague, republican, to the office of Trustee in Union, is a victory that the democracy may well feel happy over. Hague was a candidate for re-election and supposed to be the best timber they had. He has always been affiliated with the office itch, is a sort of a political barnacle, and never amounted to anything to speak of as an official, but the radicals thought they had a complete walk over with this office seeking rat on the track. The Press howled itself hoarse in jubilant anticipation of the result. But it remained for the wideawake and indomitable Bob to retire Hague to the shoe bench, where he properly belongs.

THE MAY MAGAZINES.

THE CONTINENT Magazine presents another of its portraits of leading candidates for Presidential honors, this month, in the person of General Joseph R. Hawley, U. S. Senator from Connecticut. A well considered sketch of Gen. Hawley's life by A. S. Hotchkiss and an article by Judge Tourgee, estimating highly his chances as "A Probable Candidate," accompanying the portrait, which is admirably engraved by Thomas Johnson. The charm of Mr. Kount's "Dorcas, the Daughter of Faustina," the beginning of which demonstrated to the reading world that a new light had arisen in literature, is maintained in the chapters appearing in the May Edition of THE CONTINENT; and the tender and fascinating Myl advances is interest. Mr. Will Low's illustrations are full of grace and feeling; the artist and the author are most appropriately joined. The faithful fancy of Dr. McCook, the naturalist, whose papers on the "Tenants of an Old Farm" are appearing in THE CONTINENT, linked to the skillful pencil of Dan C. Beard, the artist, gives a new interest to the "ways and means" of insect devices, which in Mr. Beard's caricatures so strongly resemble human action. For a combination of instruction and entertainment, Dr. Cook's "Tenants" are to be well commended. We are rejoiced that the four weekly numbers of THE CONTINENT bound up together into a monthly edition, how much is covered by a month's numbers of this attractive magazine.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK for May opens with a charming frontispiece entitled "Chums." This engraving is a piquant little study in black and white, and serves to illustrate a narrative poem of Dorothy Holroyd. The picture represents a chubby little child, sans civilities, sans everything, sitting on a plank that overreaches the water alongside of a grave and dignified dog. The pose is exceedingly pretty and winning enough to give "Chums" a wide popularity. Miss Reeves' story, "The Nut Brown Maid," proceeds this month with growing interest. "Tam" progresses in a spirited manner, and is winning many well deserved compliments from the press. A new feature this month is a contribution by "Old Violentudes," the well-known humorous writer for the New York Sunday Mercury. "My Experience with an Earthly Boarder" is a laughable sketch. "The Duchess," the well-known author of "Phyllis," "Molly Bawn," etc., contributes this month a story written when she was sixteen years of age. The remainder of the book is filled up with the usual quota of fine engraved and colored plates, music, and varied designs besides a number of creditable poems and stories.

The first two numbers of THE FAMILY CIRCLE, the new Illustrated Weekly, now published in this country have been received. THE FAMILY CIRCLE is an attractive 16-page weekly, handsomely illustrated; full of interesting matter, and containing no advertisements. —Will Hall, of Wolcottville, is in town.
—L. H. Klois has built himself a new chicken park. The fence in front of the Reformed Church has been repaired.
—J. D. Campbell is building an addition to his residence.

—Miss May Stough is visiting her sister at Cleveland, O.
—Benjamin Duncan is making extensive repairs on his residence.

—Dick Shull started out on the road Monday as traveling salesman.
—W. E. Williams, a painter of Chicago, has moved his family to this place.

—Crane, Duncan & Co., have purchased 40,000 feet of popular lumber of Joe Goodwin.

—Mrs. Matthew Crooks died last Sunday morning after a lingering illness, aged 62.
—J. McKelvy is closing out his stock of dry goods preparatory to leaving town.

—J. A. Hasty, our night caretaker, is off on a short vacation and J. M. Duncan is filling his place.
—We wonder if the editors of the Press, in their boyhood days, ever went bobbing for suckers on Sunday?

—Within the past week eggs have commanded a higher price here than in New York or Chicago, on account of competition between shippers here.

—The firm of Brand & Duncan has dissolved partnership, Jacob Brand has retired and Benjamin Duncan has taken his place.

—The railroad company has put up a coal dock near the crossing, for the use of the gravel train, when hauling gravel from the Pleasant Lake pit.

—The Sections on the Fort Wayne Branch will be lengthened to about seven miles each, by which arrangement about five or six sections again will be dropped out between Fort Wayne and Jackson.

The Corunna Headlight.

VOLUME VI. No. 114.

CORUNNA, DEKALB CO., INDIANA, MAY 15, 1884.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Toledo Bee (Ind.): It is claimed that a very important conference of democratic leaders has recently been held in the East respecting the Presidential nomination, and the plans agreed upon by that conference are the nomination of Tilden for President and Payne for Vice President. This would be a strong ticket, and in fact the only one that would infuse anything amounting to enthusiasm. Mr. Tilden has a hold upon the hearts of the people possessed by no other man in the democratic party, and in point of ability is the noblest Roman of them all.

—N. Y. World: When shall we find in the United States a great line of railroad so honestly constructed and managed that the capital on which it has to pay dividends represents only its legitimate and actual cost.

Look at the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, with its $140,000,000 of stocks and bonds, one-half representing fraudulent water!

Look at the Erie, with its $180,000,000, nearly 60 per cent. of which represents the stealings and waterings of years!

Look at the Elevated Railroads, carrying a fictitious capital swelled to three times its legitimate amount by stealings!

Look at the Western Union Telegraph Company, with a capital stock of $80,000,000 representing an honest $80,000,000 at the outside!

What a terrible tax is placed upon the people by these rascalities!

—The New York Graphic tells the Brooklyn Eagle that if it can name a democrat who is more entitled to the black man's regard than John A. Logan it will support him. The Eagle promptly names Mr. Tilden. "He was one of the first and most unflinching champions of anti-slavery, and in 1848 braved the jeers and reproaches of the majority of his party by declaring himself in favor of free soil and free men. At that time Logan was a young man of twenty-two, engaged in absorbing political ideas, which the outbreak of the civil war are said to have had such an influence over him that it was long doubtful whether he would draw his sword for the Union or the Confederacy. If the black man is seeking a tried and faithful friend let him turn to Samuel J. Tilden."

—Chicago speaks. The democratic club of Cook county (Chicago), Illinois, at a recent meeting unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, It is manifest the time is not remote when the desire on the part of the citizens of the United States may be realized—viz., to assert their contempt for the outrage perpetrated by the electoral commission, as shown by the report of said commission laid before the house in joint session April 28, 1878, and

WHEREAS, The Cook County Democratic club, as an organization, be desirous to aid in the vindication of the constitution, the principles that were trampled upon and insulted by the so-called leaders of the republican party in the year 1876-8, and thereby complete the record in a manner that will at least in part undo the ill consequence; and

WHEREAS, Said result can best be attained by placing in nomination for president of the United States at the coming election the beloved statesman and democratic leader, Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, and Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana; be it

RESOLVED, That the Cook County Democratic club hereby declares as an organization in favor of Hon. Samuel J. Tilden for president of the United States and Thomas A. Hendricks for vice-president, and pledges its undivided support to all efforts in aid of such result; and be it further

RESOLVED, That said organization does hereby express its sincere wish that the Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, and the Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks may consent once more to become the candidates of the democracy of the nation, and thereby may afford an opportunity to 4,285,265 disfranchised voters to assert their will, and in a manner unmistakable seal with the great seal of public opinion a verdict that may stand for centuries as a warning to corrupt and unprincipled politicians that retribution by the people is unavoidable, even when their conduct may be indomped by pretended statesmen, claiming consideration for these acts on the ground of high position

Another fixes the origin of the cyclone near Woodburn, ten miles south of Dayton. In its course it struck the villages of Carrollton, Centerville, Alexandersville, Bellbrook, Jamestown—a village of six hundred people, which is reported nearly destroyed and many of its citizens killed—Jaspar, Cedar Creek, and others. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans Home, near Xenia, was partly unroofed, and one or more persons killed. Nothing so destructive to human life, in the form of a wind storm, has ever before been known in Ohio.

Rock of the Sun.

A Kentucky Remedy of the Valley of Hopkinsville.

As Mailed in the Arkansas Traveler.

Six miles east of Hopkinsville, Ky., lies the "Rock of the Sun." It is covered with queer hieroglyphics and rude figures representing men, animals, and events of a prehistoric period. It is checked round and smooth, is 40 feet in diameter and 14 feet 3/4 inches in thickness.

It is evidently a grand monument placed there by the Aztecs to commemorate some great event. How such a huge body was ever placed there will forever remain a mystery, as it is upon a level plain and at least six miles from any rocks of similar origin.

For generations past this "Rock of the Sun" has been a favorite place to go to from this city, and thousands of people have visited it annually. Brief descriptions of it have appeared from time to time in the press of this country.
Some two weeks ago the writer of this article and a number of others interested in scientific research decided to make some excavations in the vicinity of this prehistoric monument.
Work was commenced March 6, and after considerable labor with men, teams and road scrapers our efforts were rewarded with one of the greatest discoveries ever made on the American continent. At a depth of six feet we discovered a prehistoric city, an exact facsimile of many discovered nearly a century ago in New Mexico near Sante Fe. We have already removed the light, loamy soil and sand from a portion of one of the streets, and have entered the houses of the silent prehistoric city. The unfortunate inhabitants were undoubtedly surprised by a flood, as the streets and houses are filled with driftwood, leaves, and sand.

Many of the bodies found are still in a state of perfect preservation, showing the appearance of Egyptian mummies.
Vessels of bronze and numerous gold ornaments are found in many of the houses. Yesterday we unearthed one of their temples, in which was an altar and stone seats; also ornaments of gold, representing the sun, which gives conclusive evidence that they were a race of sun worshippers. The streets are macadamized with river boulders, and the houses are built of stone and adobe, the architecture corresponding in every particular to that of the Mexicans of the present day.

This monument of the sun was undoubtedly placed there by the survivors of this ill fated city, many of whom undoubtedly escaped to the caves in the immediate vicinity. The why or wherefore of the great flood that destroyed this city will, of course, forever remain a matter of conjecture.
The scene of our labors is in an out of the way portion of the country, the road to which from Hopkinsville is merely a trail through the canebrakes and swamps, and the place is totally inaccessible during the winter freshets.
Pon River, Green River, and Little River all contribute their volume of overflow to fill the swamps. We propose to remove all we possibly can to Hopkinsville before the freshets set in,
and also devise some means to prevent the overflow of our excavations.
Professor John P. Barret, of Hartford, Ky., Hon. Hunter Wood, of Hopkinsville New Era; C. M. Meacham, of the Kentuckian; Colonel J. Polk Johnson, of the Courier-Journal, and
B. F. Ridgely, esq. of the Louisville Commercial, are now here, and complete reports of this interesting discovery will appear in their respective journals.

HOW HE GOT A BLACK EYE

A William street saloon-keeper dropped into his store one morning. He had been absent for a week, and when he arrived his face looked like a chopping-block.

"What's the matter?" asked a friend.

"I don't see anything the matter," he answered.

"What you got your head bound up like a bass-drum at a soldier's funeral for?"

"O that's all right."

"Where did you get that black eye?"

"Now, see here," said he. "For fear that you'll go away with the idea that I've been splitting wood, or got up in the night for a drink, or that my mother-in-law is in town, I'll tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me 25 cents! My neighbor's cat eat up all my chickens, and I shot the cat."

And then the interviewer shook his head knowingly and remarked:

"I see! The gun kicked."

"No," responded the saloon-keeper, "it was the neighbor who kicked."—New York World.

—"Your high protectionist manufacturer," said Representative Cox in his brilliant tariff speech, "needs no argument to convince him of protecting by legislative enactment the purchasing power of a dollar. Now, the very same logic that proves this applies with equal force to the tariff fallacy. You can by no possibility add to the purchasing power of a dollar by tariff legislation, because it is redeemed by the products of labor whose value you inflate to the extent of the tariff rate. The higher your protective tariff, the less the laborer gets for his wages. You can not have an immigration mill of free labor with unlimited issue, and at the same time protected wages, because such issue means an unlimited depreciation of labor wages and a high tariff standard in the necessities of life with which they are to be redeemed."

—Eric Dispatch: Hon. W. L. Scott, of this city has just had an interview with Mr. Tilden, and is reported to have said regarding it that while Tilden did not really want the Democratic nomination, he would accept it if tendered with substantial unanimity by the convention, despite all disclaimers of his candidacy, and although he might foresee certain death from the cares and excitement of a canvass. Tilden willing, means Randall—exit.

The Surrender of Chief Joseph.

Lieutenant C. E. S. Wood contributed a paper to the May Century on "Chief Joseph, the Nez Percé," and his battles with General Howard's troops, the surrender being described as follows:

Old "Captain John" brought this reply (and his lips quivered and his eyes filled with tears as he delivered the words of his chief): "Tell General Howard I know his heart. What he told me before—I have it in my heart. I am tired of fighting. Looking-glass is dead. Too-hut-hut-sult is dead. The old men are all dead. It is the young men, now, who say 'yes' or 'no' [that is, vote in council]. He who led on the young men [Joseph's brother, Ollont] is dead. It is cold and we have no blankets. The little children are freezing to death. My people—some of them—have run away to the hills and have no blankets, no food. No one knows where they are—perhaps freezing to death. I want to have time to look for my children and to see how many of them I can find; may be I shall find them among the dead. Hear me, my chiefs; my heart is sick and sad. From where the sun now stands I will fight no more forever."

It was nearly sunset when Joseph came to deliver himself up. He rode from his camp in the little hollow. His hands were clasped over the pommel of his saddle and his rifle lay across his knees; his head was bowed down. Pressing around him, walked five of his warriors; their faces were captured and earnest as they murmured to him; but he looked neither to the right nor to the left, yet seemed to listen intently. So the little group came slowly up the hill to where General Howard, with an aide-de-camp, and General Miles waited to receive the surrender. As he neared them, Joseph sat erect in his saddle, then gracefully and with dignity he swung himself down from his horse, and with an impulsive gesture threw his arm to its full length, and offered his rifle to General Howard. The latter motioned him toward General Miles, who received the token of submission.

Those present shook hands with Joseph, whose worn and anxious face lighted with a sad smile as silently he took each offered hand. Then, turning away, he walked to the tent provided for him.

His scalp lock was tied with otter fur. The rest of his hair hung in a thick plait on each side of his head. He wore buckskin leggings and a gray woollen shawl, through which were the marks of four or five bullets received in the last conflict. His forehead and wrist were also scratched by bullets.

Joseph at this time must have been about thirty-seven or thirty-eight years of age. He is tall, straight and handsome, with a mouth and chin not unlike that of Napoleon I. He was, in council, at first probably not so influential as White Bird and the group of chiefs that sustained him, but from first to last he was preeminently their "war chief." Such was the testimony of his followers after his surrender, and such seems to be the evidence of the campaign itself.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

A Baltimore family was poisoned by eating sauer-kraut.

A rising of slaves has taken place in Varenge, South America.

The story of a most horrible murder and attempted cremation comes from Hawkinsville, Georgia.

The Michigan greenbackers instructed for Butler. Among the alternates was a woman, Miss Hattie Strickland.

A band of Cuban insurgents were thrashed on the 30th. One man was wounded and several insurgents captured.

Allen Ingalls, one of the Averdale "barkers," hung himself in his cell in the county jail at Cincinnati early on the morning of the 30th.

J. M. S. Lane was knocked down in Ashland, Ky., on the 30th and robbed of over $1,800. It was a bold scheme, but worked to the entire satisfaction of the highwaymen, at least.

Fort Keogh, M. T., was visited by the severest snow storm of the season yesterday. The storm raged throughout the length and breadth of the Yellowstone Valley.

Edward Thompson, of Rolland, Ia., after mortally wounding his wife with an ax, threw himself headfirst into a well, and died.

The West Virginia republican circus met on the 30th and instructed its delegates to stand by Blaine so long as his name was before the convention.

The Massachusetts democratic convention met on the 30th and resolved that Ben Butler should be nominated for president by the Chicago convention.

C. W. Payne, president, and George Geppert, cashier of the Medicine Valley Bank, Kan., were killed by robbers in an abortive attempt to rob the bank.

The convention of Ohio woolgrowers which met at Columbus on the 30th to elect delegates to the national mass convention of woolgrowers to be held in Chicago May 19, adopted some ringing resolutions in the interest of that industry.

The colored interstate conference arrived at the conclusion that both the republican and democratic managers have not, up to date, respected the rights and feelings of the colored people in the management of their party machine.

A great sensation was caused in Toronto, Canada, on the 30th, by the discovery of two powerful dynamite cartridges under the crown land office, in the parliament building. Wires and a fuse were attached, and everything was in readiness to blow the building into smithereens.

—Philadelphia Press: It looks as though Mr. Tilden would yet be compelled to get out an injunction restraining the party from nominating him. 94

NOTES AND EDITORIAL COMMENTS.

Here and there may be found a faint hearted Democrat who despairs of democratic success in the great contest of next November. To all such we respectfully commend the following from an influential republican paper by a thoughtful student of events:

Twelve years ago the Republicans elected Gen. Grant for his second term by a majority of more than three quarters of a million in a popular vote of six millions and a half. Four years later Mr. Tilden received a majority of 250,000, in round numbers, in a vote of eight and a half millions. At the last election Garfield received a plurality of barely 9,000 in a total vote of over nine millions. In 1882 elections were held in all the States of the Union; some 8,000,000 votes were cast, and the Democrats had a plurality of over 400,000. Last year elections were held in fourteen States; the vote 4,000,000; the Democratic plurality was 42,000. Of the States which gave their electoral vote to Gen. Garfield, can any one say how the following will go next fall: New York, Ohio, Indiana, Connecticut? Together these States had 78 electoral votes: in 1880 and will have 80 this year.

There is to be a representative to the legislature chosen next fall, and among the worthy names mentioned for the candidacy on the democratic ticket, we have heard the name of J. A. Barnes, editor of the Auburn Courier. Mr. Barnes filled the important office of County Superintendent for a number of years with marked success, and his large acquaintance with public affairs would make him an available candidate. We know not whether Mr. Barnes is cognizant of the proposition to present his name before the county convention, but if nominated he will certainly be elected, and as a Member of the General Assembly he would reflect credit upon his constituency as an able and fearless champion of democratic principles.

The snow on the cot is blowing,
The west is built in the tree,
And the apple limbs are rowing
Their blossoms in the fragrant sea.
The bird to his mate is singing,
The lambkin skips on the hill,
And the rosy clover's springing Beside the gurgling rill.
Sir Strephon his love is sighing,
The cricket begins to chirp,
And the boy in the back yard's trying
The can to the brindled purp.

The Auburn Courier says: Commissioner Widney brings the welcome news that Commissioner Thomas is now able to be out of doors and is evidently improving. We are glad to hear of the almost certain prospect that he will regain his health and be able once more to attend to the duties of his office.

The following from a late number of the Butler Record is a very flattering compliment to our county Treasurer, Mr. L. J. Miller, but none the less deserved. Coming as it does from a republican source it cannot be alleged that the language is inspired by partisan bias, but every word is true, and the people will voice the Record's sentiment:

Our efficient county treasurer, L. J. Miller, has increased, if possible his popularity in this county by visiting the different towns in the county this week, giving the people an opportunity to pay their tax without the trouble of a trip to Auburn. Mr. Miller has made a successful officer, and the county will probably never be blest with a better or more accommodating treasurer than he has proven to be.

The say that experience is a dear school but profitable in the end; and from recent "experience" we are constrained to admit that the old saying will hold good in all kinds of weather. For instance, it cost the writer just $89.50 to get acquainted with a "man," and we think we got off cheap at those figures, but when we called to present a little bill the human hyena acted as though he would like to pitch us out of his den for the presumption! But he didn't pay the bill all the same. Now we feel a good deal like the foreigner who, within twenty minutes after landing at Chisle Garden, was financially "gutted" by the wharf rats, and exclaimed: "Mein Got, Ameriky is a hell of a vree country!"

Meeting of the Township Trustees.

Pursuant to the call of the Board of County Commissioners, the Township Trustees met in the Commissioners office, April 24th, for the purpose of consulting upon matters pertaining to the welfare and general good of their respective townships. The first subject brought up was the management of the poor. In order to have uniformity in the expenses of doctoring the poor, the following motion was made and sustained:

That, in case of sickness of a person or persons who are not able to procure the services of a physician one may be called who may make one visit without the order of the Trustee, and, if he then thinks it necessary that the patient, or patients have further treatment he shall notify the Trustee who shall immediately take charge of the matter, and may contract with the physician to continue his service, but in no instance shall he allow his charges in ordinary cases to exceed $1. for the first mile, including medicine, and 50 cents for every additional mile, and in every case the Trustee must certify to the physician's bill before it shall be allowed by the Commissioners. In matter of temporary aid the following resolution was adopted:

That: the Trustee, in ordering goods for the temporary relief of the poor, shall itemize the articles to be purchased, and that the merchant's bill when filed with the county Auditor must have articles sold itemized to correspond with the Trustee's order, and the order must accompany the bill.

After some informal discussion on ditch cleaning, bridge building and on educational matters, it was ordered that the proceedings of the meeting be published in the county papers. Meeting adjourned sine die.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Gravelly Township Thellie sailed yesterday. The gold excitement has broken out near Kingston, Canada.

Over fifty workmen were buried by a falling wall in London yesterday.

The Maine prohibitory party nominated W. T. Curtis for governor yesterday.

Only forty-two congressmen have, up to date, made speeches on the Morrison tariff bill.

Montpelier, Ind., was entertained by a circus and a riot night before last. One man was fatally injured.

Another dynamiter by the name of Wm. McDonnell has been arrested in Birmingham, England.

Ex-Mayor Caleb Saunders, of Lawrence, Mass., is on trial for tampering with the ballot boxes of that burg. The case looks dark for Caleb.

A marshal, assistant marshal, and two cow-boys paid the penalty of their crimes at Harper, Kan., yesterday, three being lynched and the fourth riddled with bullets.

The Baltimore May Musical Festival opened last night to an immense audience, with two grand pieces. It is the greatest musical event Baltimore has ever witnessed.

Scott and Brownlow Hill, brothers and members of a band composed of over 100 cut-throats, were executed by order of Judge Lynch in St. Albans, V. Va., night before last, for the murder of Albert Woods.

Over 500 employees of the Union Pacific Railway stationed at Denver struck yesterday against a reduction of wages of 10 to 15 per cent., as ordered by the general manager. No violence is anticipated.

Benjamin Wallace, a wealthy New York soap manufacturer, is missing since Tuesday morning. He had a large amount of money and valuable jewelry on his person.

William McHugh, the wife murderer, was hanged at Cincinnati yesterday with neatness and dispatch.

The entire village of Gilman's Depot, N. Y., was destroyed by fire last evening.

A boiler explosion at Watertown, N. Y., yesterday killed five men and fatally injured two others.

The Port Jarvis negro, who eloped with a white girl, was not lynched as reported, but he is looked up in jail, which is the next best thing.

Kellogg is "not guilty," as is usual in cases where republican politicians are prosecuted under a republican administration of affairs. His "not guilty" was based on the exclusion of testimony which was conclusive of guilt, if true. That it was true is proved by the fact that the defense relied on a technicality, and dared not attempt to show it to be false. Editorial Notes & Comments.

The great struggle in the house over the Morrison tariff bill is over. A vote was taken on the bill Tuesday and the motion to strike out the entire clause carried by a vote of 169 to 160. The result is a victory for the anti-tariff agitators.

The Plain Dealer says one effect of the measure's defeat should be to reassure business. Whatever the merits of this great question may be it is undoubtedly that the late movement for a reduction of the tariff has filled commercial and financial circles with distrust and timidity — which ought now to give way to renewed confidence.

Mr. Hendricks pronounces Tilden's letter to the Iroquois Club "perfect in thought and language," a production which "no other man in America could have written."

In an interview with a correspondent of the Boston Herald John Kelly declares that the tariff is not likely to be an issue in the campaign and that "the next President of the United States will be a Democrat, sure."

A movement is on foot to hold a grand reunion of all the soldiers of the old 10th district at Fort Wayne sometime during August. It is intended that the reunion be held on Saturday and Sunday.

The growing wheat crop in Indiana promises well in portions of the west and north-west, and some of the fields in the swamp land are entirely winter killed, and in some other portions, on clayhill land, it is badly damaged. The crop, however, in the greater portions of the state is up to the general average, and in the valleys it is above the average, which two facts, with the one that there was such a large acreage sown, shows that at present the outlook is encouraging for the state to again wear the laurels it wore last year, of being the banner wheat state of the union.

We understand that "Doctor" Noabum is making preparations to build a house this summer. Inasmuch as there is a balance of $16 50 on our books long past due from the "Doctor," and as we don't care about taking any stock in the new edifice, the account is for sale at a considerable discount.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The forest fires, which have been raging at McKean and Cameron counties, Pa., have been very destructive to the lumber interests of that locality.

Over 1,600 employees of the Union Pacific Railway are on a strike at Omaha. They threaten to prevent the departure of trains and thus blockade the road if the company persist in its proposed reduction of wages.

Three daring highwaymen seem to have possession of as many counties in Pennsylvania. A fierce fight took place between thieves and a posse of men under the command of an official yesterday, the road being fired from shelter in the woods. It was rumored at Kittanning that several of the posse were killed.

It is rumored that a general strike of iron workers will be inaugurated June 1, and that it will include all iron workers in the West.

During a severe thunder storm in the northern part of London yesterday a ball of fire fell to the street and burst with a loud report, terrifying the students for miles around.

Four men were lost by the capsizing of a whale attempting to run Rock Island Rapids, Montana.

As Ayers, a brick mason, who built the brick house ever put up in Cleveland, died at Michigan City, Indiana. He also built the first brick house in Ohio, at Warren, Trumbull county. He was ninety-three years old, and a veteran of War of 1812.

The failure of Grant & Ward has caused no excitement in financial circles. The fact that Grant acknowledged a shortage of $500,000, the accounts in the absence of Mr. Ward, whose whereabouts are unknown, give the whole affair a mysterious look. The suspension of the Mercantile Bank was caused, it is said, by Grant & Ward's failure.

The green eyed monster, jealousy, prompted Wright to shoot Miss Cella Enright at the Produce Exchange yesterday. The social stand the parties concerned is lofty enough to call the a tragedy in high life. Mrs. Wright went about business with great deliberation, but being a marksmen, only inflicted a painful wound in the neck of Miss Enright.

England is thoroughly worked up over the mine business, and since it has been suggested the State of Florida was destroyed by the accidental explosion of a dynamite that was en route to land to be used in blowing up public buildings British public don't seem to know which one standing on, so great is the scare.

A dispatch from Farther Point, Quebec, says, "The steamship Titania from Glasgow inward this morning. She has on board twenty of the crew of the steamship State of Florida having been sunk by collision with a hulk mid-ocean. Out of 167 persons of the State of Florida only forty-four were saved, and of the crew only the captain and two men were rescued. One hundred and twenty-three souls went with the steamer and twelve with the bark tug a total lost of 135.

The Town Election—A Clean Democratic Sweep!

The corporation election passed off here Monday, the contest being waged with more than ordinary heat. In fact the battle was hot all along the line, and resulted in the election of the entire democratic ticket by majorities ranging from 10 to 46. It was a signal victory, showing large gains, as the two parties heretofore were pretty evenly divided, and the result of Monday's election is indicative of the current of public opinion. As the Herald remarked, "J. C. Lowland was around setting up the pins for his own sucking-corporation ticket," the job was well done. Following are the democratic majorities:

Treasurer, 1st Ward—John A. McLaughlin	50 maj.
" 2d—Joseph Singler	46 "
Clerk—W. R. Robinson	42 "
Treasurer—Bernard Hummel	37 "
Marshal—George Harvorn	45 "

The Prohibition party will hold a grand rally at Auburn to-day (Saturday), on which occasion there will be a pole raising and other interesting exercises. Prominent temperance orators from abroad will be present, and the Corunna band will furnish music.

See the nebbly styles at Leaky's. The Washington Monument is 410 feet high, and work has been resumed upon it. Geo. W. Leaky has the largest and best assortment of dry goods in town.

The rate war between the Western Union and Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph companies is growing warm.

Stacks of Spring goods, unique patterns in ladies' dress and fancy goods at Leaky's. Bottom prices always.

J. Wm. Wagner, father, of Mansfield, O., is in town paying his son and family a visit. The old gentleman is an octogenarian but is well preserved for one of that age.

George Galloway, foreman of the machinery department, B. & O. Shops, is on duty again after spell of sickness, which he says is the first time he has been absent in twenty-seven years.

While at Auburn recently we dropped in at the mammoth store of our old friend Isaac Ochs, and found the proprietor and his assistants, John and Enoch, up to their elbows in new goods. Our Corunna readers will best serve their interests by paying this well known establishment a visit when they go to town. Isaac is at the top of the market in prices for produce.

George C. Ralston certainly has smashed high prices. If you could be convinced of this fact, give the new grocer a call when you visit Auburn.

Mr. Dykes has withdrawn from the Helmer concern. Mr. D. is an honorable business man who has the best wishes of our citizens.

It don't do to take too much stock in a "man" because of his windy professions of democracy, and whose principal capital is check. The political tramp is—uncertain.

George C. Ralston, of Auburn, has taken a new departure in the grocery business, a departure which is destined to work an entire revolution in the trade. The plan is a reduction of prices on all staple articles in this branch of merchandise and such a policy could only be successfully carried out by buying at the bottom figures. Accordingly Mr. Ralston visited New York early in the spring and bought of the principal jobbing houses very heavily of staple goods which he is enabled to mark down below the figures asked by his competitors. Mr. Ralston has the largest, the best and yet the cheapest stock of groceries in the Auburn market, which makes him unquestionably the leading grocer.

Democratic State Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 23, 1884.

The electors of Indiana, regardless of past political affiliations, who are desirous of co-operating with the Democracy in the support of its principles and nominees, and who are in favor of an honest and economical administration of our public affairs, and opposed to the corrupt practices of the Republican party, are invited to participate in the meetings throughout the State for the purpose of selecting representatives to attend a delegate convention to be held at the city of Indianapolis, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 1884, at English's opera house, for the purpose of adopting a platform of principles and the nomination of candidates to be supported by the following officers:

Governor.	Lieutenant-Governor.
One Judge Supreme Court.	Secretary of State.
Auditor of State.	Treasurer of State.
Reporter of Supreme Court.	Attorney-General.
Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 200 votes cast for Wm. H. Myers for Secretary of State in 1882, and one delegate for each fraction of one hundred or over.

The delegates from each Congressional district will meet on the afternoon of the 25th inst. at places to be hereafter designated by this committee for the purpose of electing and reporting to the convention—

- One ex-officio member of Permanent Organization.
- One ex-officio member at Platform and Nominations.
- One Vice-President for the convention.
- One Assistant Secretary for the convention.
- Two delegates to the National democratic convention.
- Two alternate delegates to National democratic convention.
- One Presidential Elector.
- One contingent Presidential Elector.
- One member State Central Committee for serving two years.
- One Committee on Credentials.

The committee on Platforms and Resolutions will meet immediately after adjournment of District meetings, say 9 o'clock a. m., at the convention room of English's Opera House, Tuesday, June 24.

The committee on Permanent Organization will meet at the same hour in the State Auditor's office. It will be their duty to name a President and Principal Secretary of the convention, four delegates at large and four alternate delegates to the National Convention, two Electors for the State at large and two contingent Electors, and also to recommend rules for the government of the convention.

The committee on Credentials will meet at 8 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, June 25, at rooms of the State Central Committee, to determine such petitions as may be submitted to them.

Delegate tickets of admission to the convention will be issued to the chairman of each county delegation and to authorized representatives of the press upon the presentation of credentials of the State Central Committee rooms.

By order of the State Democratic Central Committee.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Toledo (O.) Democrat: Grant is on more use to the republican party. They have no use for a man with a barrel, the bottom of which has been knocked out.

—Indianapolis Sentinel: If the young men want to know what republicanism does for a man, let them look at Hayes, Garfield, and Grant. They will do for lesson No. 1.

—Galveston (Texas) News: The republican papers are twitting Bayard with being the gentleman's candidate for president. Well, that is more than can be said for any man standing a ghost of a show in the republican party.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: Let it be distinctly understood that the democratic party is neither defeated nor demoralized. It is not split nor factionalized. The democratic party has weathered many a gale, compared with which the disagreement on the Morrison bill is a mere seephyr.

—All citizens will do well to remember this declaration by Mr. Tilden: "No reform of administration is possible so long as the government is directed by a party which is under the dominion of false doctrines and animated by enormous pecuniary interests in the perpetuation of existing abuses."

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: The bill providing for a territorial government for Alaska passed the House on the 13th, having recently passed the Senate. It provides for a Governor, a District Attorney, Marshal, Judge and Clerk, at Big salaries. The President ought to veto this bill. There is no call for this governmental machinery in Alaska. The country is a howling wilderness the whole white population does not exceed three hundred and they are not permanent residents. The whole business is a job to provide a few more useless offices.

—Fort Wayne Sentinel: An exchange says that the pivotal states in the presidential election are New York and Indiana. Of the twenty democratic representatives from New York fourteen voted for the Morrison bill and six against it; of the nine democrats from Indiana the whole number voted for the bill. Yet we are told that revenue reform is not popular in the pivotal states.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: There is no need for any legitimate business interest to feel frightened at the recent ripping up of things in Wall street. The thing to do is to stand out of the way and let the rotten speculative concerns come down.

—Chicago News: If we are to look among the sons of our ex-presidents for presidential timber this year, why not be content with some such person as Fred Grant or Webb Hayes? The latter person would seem to combine all the qualifications demanded at this time. He is a particularly harmless, docile and inoffensive creature, and, as the son of a martyred "President," his candidacy would, we think, evoke an unprecedented enthusiasm among the sentimental, maudlin and ramby-pamby suffragists of the republic. We are for Webb Hayes.

—Exchange: It is now a pretty generally conceded fact that Mr. Gray will have no opposition in his race for the candidacy for the governorship. He is popular in every part of the state, and already a sufficient number of delegates have been instructed for him to nominate him. General Manson, Judge Downey, and Judge Turpie, all have many warm friends throughout the state, but they have made little or no exertion to secure the nomination. The democrats never had a better outlook for electing their governor than they have this fall, and there never was such little contention for the nomination. It appears that the people have almost unanimously consented that Mr. Gray should be their governor.

In the township elections throughout the state, the democrats elected 528 trustees; the republicans, 446 and the

The muson-headed "man" who wore the seat of his pants out astride of rail fences honing Richland democrats into the belief that the only salvation for the democracy depended upon sending him as a delegate to the State convention, is now casting about himself to devise ways and means to defray the expenses of the trip. As the said self-manipulated "delegate" has avowed that "the candidate who gets his vote must pay the expenses or he won't get it," we warn Gray, Bell, Kelley, et al, to anticipate the Richland "delegate," as the shower is likely to be a deluge. We've been there to the tune of $30 50.

Ventilation.

When the air of a room is maintained as nearly as possible at the purity of the external atmosphere, it is well ventilated. In so far as it falls short of this standard it becomes detrimental to health.

The contaminating ingredient of indoor air is carbonic acid gas, which is poured from the lungs at each expiration, each breath intensifying the impurity, so that the atmosphere of a crowded room or railway car soon becomes nauseating, particularly to a person who enters it from the outside. The occupants themselves seldom notice the change that has taken place and generally seem unconscious of the risk to health they are subjecting themselves to.

There are emanations of effete matters from the entire surface of the body, and without which life could not be maintained; these add their impurities to the already vitiated air of a close room, thus forming a compound that acts insidiously on the system, contaminating the blood and lessening the power to resist disease. No human being can be subjected to these influences an hour without injury, whether he is conscious of it at the time or not. It is the source from which fevers come; and no doubt other diseases have been conveyed from one person to others under these conditions. If the germs of disease are still active after traveling for a considerable distance through the outer air, how much more potent must they be when they are inhaled at a short distance, warm and fresh from the seat of disease? It is now a well-determined fact that a person with no predisposition to consumption is quite liable to contract the disease when exposed to it for some time in an illy-ventilated house.

During three years we daily visited some of the hospitals of Paris. Sufferers from small-pox occupied the same wards with other fever patients, and no one ever dreamed of taking the disease; but then the ventilation was simply perfect.

The first essential to health is a constant supply of pure, fresh air. It promotes combustion in the system as a draught of pure air promotes combustion of fuel in a furnace. Carbonic acid gas destroys life; and it will quench a fire sooner than water.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Died of a Short Tree.

Died of a Short Tree.

The old man, you all remember, was one of the most noted possum hunters in the State. One night when it was so dark that a black hat, thrown up into the air, would have looked like Bulwer's luminous shadow, the dogs treed. I begged the old man not to go, but he straightened himself up, gave me a kind of ante-bellum look and wanted to know if I were a fool. He left the house, and after he had been gone about two hours I became uneasy and started out to look for him. I found the old man chopping on a tree about four feet thick.

"It's a coon, and I know he's up here," the old man said. "The tree would have been down by this time, but it is so dark that I have to strike by wood-chopper's instinct." He would not let me assist him, for he had attained that age when a Southern gentleman takes great pride in accomplishing a feat alone. It seemed as though the tree would never fall. The old man's strokes became lighter, for his strength was nearly exhausted. The dogs stood around and whined. They looked to me as though they were lying and had only "treed" to please the old man. Finally the enormous tree creaked and slowly fell—a stump extending only a few inches higher than the old man's head. The tree had been chopped down during high water and the poor old man had chopped down a big stump. By this time daylight was breaking, and when light came sifting down among the branches of neighboring trees the old fellow looked at the stump, turned away, and went home. He had just lost his third wife and had borne up manfully, but the stump disappointment killed him.—Arkansas Traveler.

The Kind of a Dead Owl He Was.

It was in September. The owls had killed some of our most valuable fowls. One night I was aroused by loud squalling and cackling among some fowls that roosted in some cedar trees that stood almost under the window where I slept. I jumped up, seized my gun and ran out. I could hear the owl as he darted at his victim, but would fail to strike it, but I could not see it in the darkness. I threw up my gun and touch both triggers—a splendid snap shot—I hear something strike the ground. Walking up to the tree there lies a turkey, and further on a chicken.

The Soldier's Re-Union

At Waterloo, for the 5th and 6th days of June, is taking shape, and the program has already been partially arranged.

The afternoon of the 5th will be devoted to the reception of Comrades, and at sunset salutes will be fired. The reception of Comrades, and the registry of their names and the receipt of badges, at headquarters (Engine House) will occupy the time until ten o'clock a. m.; from ten o'clock until the dinner hour will be devoted to speaking and other exercises at the stand. After dinner will occur the parade, a feature of which will be "Sherman's Bummers" and "Mosby's Guerrillas," under appropriate commanders. At the conclusion of the parade, the Sham Battle will take place. It is intended to make the Battle a feature of the occasion, and, if possible, excel any previous effort in this locality.

The Butler Artillery Company, armed with the Grand Army of the Republic, the Waterloo Rifles and other organizations will participate. All soldiers who can do so are cordially invited to bring arms with them, and take part in the engagement.

On the evenings of both days there will be given at the Hall an entirely new Drama, entitled "The Dead Witness," followed by a "Laughable Farce." Proceeds for the benefit of Waterloo Post G. A. R. and the Waterloo Rifles.

The author of "Doreas," who wrote "Arius the Libyan," and who is now known to be Mr. Nathan Kouns, a lawyer of Jefferson City, comes to his own defense in THE CONTINENT's monthly edition for June for his free use in his story, which treats of the early Christian Church, of the miraculous raising of the dead at the hands of the Apostles of the primitive Church. He insists that the Christians were granted the power of raising the dead so long as they maintained their simple worship and their community of goods and interests; but that they lost this and other privileges when they accepted the protection of the Emperor Constantine and allied themselves with the political powers of the earth.

THE JUNE MAGAZINES.

THE CONTINENT Magazine begins in the issue just published a unique series of short stories by leading American writers, under the general title of "Too True for Fiction," the title being indicative of the character of the stories, which deal largely with the strange and striking features of real life. Among the authors who will contribute to the series are Edward Everett Hale, Mrs. Stowe, Rose Terry Cooke, A. W. Tourgee, Sarah O. Jewett, Anna K. Greene, "H. H." Edgar Fawcett, K. P. Howe, Charles Barnard, and others, and the number will be increased to thirty or forty as the series progresses. The names of all the authors will be published with each story, and the readers of THE CONTINENT are invited to make guesses as to the authorship. In order to make this not a mere intellectual pastime, THE CONTINENT offers a variety of prizes for various measures of success, ranging in value from a single book to one thousand dollars in cash. The conditions of this competition are published each week in THE CONTINENT, or will be sent on application to the publishers. In the monthly edition for June are printed the first three stories in the series: "The Merry Marquis," "He Was Never Known to Smile," and "A Matter of Fact Fellow." As the names of the authors indicate, the stories will average high in merit, and the novel conditions under which they will be read will afford an added interest. The "guessing community" has already been stimulated to submit many conjectures regarding the authorship of the stories thus far printed, and the indications are that the competition for the prizes will interest a large portion of the reading public. Price, $4 a year; 10 cents a number. Ad-dress, THE CONTINENT, 25 Clinton Place, New York.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK for June opens with a fine steel engraving of Alfred Ward's portrait of Helen Mathers, the celebrated English authoress, whose story, "Decrying the Weird," will commence with the 100th volume (July issue) of the magazine. The present number of the magazine contains a biographical sketch of this talented young authoress that will be read with interest by her many admirers. The story of "Tam," by Ella Rodman Church and Augusta De Bubba, has a happy ending this month, and fulfills the early anticipations of many delighted readers. The "Nut Brown Maid" is also approaching a climax. We are promised next month a sketch of Agatha by a clever artist. Godey's for June contains a great deal of spirited and readable matter. The magazine contains the usual variety of stories, poems, etc., besides the usual handsome illustrations and supplements. J. H. Haulenbeck & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Commencing May 22d and continuing until June 1st, the B. & O. R. R. Co. will sell tickets at low excursion rates to the annual meeting of the Old German Baptist Church (Dunkard's) to be held at Middleburg, Md., round trip from all principal stations on its Trans-Ohio Divisions to Middleburg, Md. and return, at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be good returning until June 22d, inclusive. This is your opportunity to visit friends in Maryland and the Valley of Virginia at the lowest rates ever offered. Remember that the B. & O. is the only line running three through trains daily, sleeping cars attached. For rates, time of trains, etc., call on agents of the B. & O. R. R.

Mistakes Eminent Men Made.

Old men give too much advice for it all to be sound. Washington, it is said, once decided that the Erie canal was not practicable. Sam Houston thought one-half the money Congress voted to Horse to build the first telegraph line ought to be devoted to encourage men-marism. Cave Johnson, Postmaster General, declined to buy the telegraph patents for the Government for $100,- 000 on the ground that it could not earn expenses. Ezra Cornell spent two-thirds of Morse's appropriations laying the first poor starveling telegraph underground instead of stretching it like a clothes-line. Timothy Howe was sure a 50-cent tax on whisky could not collect as much as a $2 tax. Seward thought 75,000 men would put down the rebellion. The old Baltimore merchant to whom Poe's poems were submitted indorsed them: "Here is a man fit for nothing whatever." Franklin rather thought the Stamp act a smart recommendation. Commodore Vanderbilt told his son to buy no railroads outside of New York State. Old age is for counsel, but it ought to come from the "Amen" benches. All the wisdom in Spain and Portugal discouraged Columbus, but a pretty woman said to the sailor:

"As well to die and go,
As die and stay."

Man Is Not Likely to Fly.

The London Engineer, which has lately discussed flying machines in a scientific way, comes to the conclusion that there is no combination of wings, or arrangements of any kind which will enable a man to fly with his own strength. He lacks muscular power to practice the accomplishment in which the birds are so proficient. And even if machines are devised to compensate for that lack of power and endurance they will not be successful unless they shall be so constructed that each pound of the machine will develop as much energy as each pound of a bird. "Not all then," says the engineering critic, can flight for man be achieved.

DR. MARION SIMS declares that Horace Greeley suffered from "acute meningitis, or cerebro-spinal meningitis," in his last illness, and "should no more have been sent to an insane asylum for treatment than a typhoid fever patient to a delirium."

"Down East."

It is hard for New Englanders to recognize that the "East" may mean some other section than New England. Occasionally their exclusiveness receives a severe rap, as did ours, while traveling along one of the small streams of Southern California. Seeing a sun-burnt, ragged young man shooting pickerel,
we stopped to witness the novel sight.

On catching sight of a fish beneath the surface, the youth would take quick aim and fire. The concussion of the ball upon the water so stunned the fish that it floated to the surface, when it was then quickly secured.

After witnessing his performance of this feat several times, we remarked that, as it was new sport to us, we were curious to know where he had learned it.

"Oh," he answered, "I often enjoyed it when I lived East; in fact, by birth,
I am an Eastern man."

We were at once interested, and thinking we had found a Yankee from Maine or Massachusetts, or possibly from the city called the "Hub," we gave him a hearty grip, saying,
"We, too, are Eastern born and bred;
from what part of the East do you come?"

"I was reared," replied he, with a cordial smile, "in Eastern Missouri."

We stared at him a moment, murmured something about the size of the country, and said that we came from Boston, and then bade him good-morning.

[From the Garrett Edition.]
The Kickers.

GARRETT, IND., May 23, 1884.

To the Editor of The Headlight.

Since the election a good deal has been said in the Herald about the kickers, and only one side has been represented. A little squib in the Herald in the issue after the election, gives figures something after this fashion: Fifteen democrats voted for Bicknell and Lackey and thirty-five republicans scratched them.

That certainly is a bad showing when we consider that less than one hundred republican votes were polled.

There were some kickers that day who have escaped the scathing rebuke of the Herald, and as no guilty ones should escape we take this opportunity to speak of them. I refer to those who scratched the last name on the ticket. His opponent was elected by a majority. Now, did the 15 democrats vote for Lackey and Bicknell for love of the parties named, or was it a trade on the marshal? We will acknowledge being "kickers" but not "traders." The republicans of Garrett have the reputation all over the county of being traders, and from the vote on marshal we think they have sustained their reputation.

We are blamed for not electing the republican corporation ticket, and as much stress is laid on that as would have been had that been the only election held this spring. Had the republicans carried it they would only have held their own. What we needed was a gain and such we might have had, had the republicans done their duty in the two elections. Lyman Lockwood's name was on enough democratic tickets, in the east precinct alone, to have elected him; but while the so-called kickers worked for the success of the whole ticket, (not a part of it) enough other republicans either voted the democratic ticket or sat quietly down and saw the opposition carry away the prize; at a time, too, when the republicans had a better show of success than they have had for years.

The Herald says we should have run a ticket of our own and not mutilated the one we did by scratching it so. To this we say, we are republicans, not independents, and we propose to reform the party by staying with it, not by leaving it.

In conclusion, I would say if the republicans expect to do anything this fall the self-styled Regulars had better apply some healing balm to their wounds and not try to provoke the kickers into showing their hand again.

OFF FOR THE CONVENTION.

Every Preparation Being Made to Insure a Comfortable and Quick Trip With A No. 1 Accommodations.

As to be expected, the B. & O. is right on time with bottom figures on the rates to the Chicago convention. One fare for the round trip, with tickets good going from May 29th to June 2d and good returning up to and including June 12th is the way to talk it, and that is the tune the old reliable sets for others to follow or not as they please. It matters little to the public or the road, as hereabouts all go by the B. & O. Every means will be provided to insure ample accommodations for all who come, and as for time the road's reputation in this respect leaves no room for question. As a matter of course, the B. & O. will take this business from this section, as no other line can compare with it in direct and rapid access to the seat of convention proceedings. Its trains run direct to Chicago without change, and when the demand reaches the limit of the regular trains sufficient sections will be added to accommodate the travel the most satisfactory extent. An especial advantage possessed by the B. & O. over all other lines entering Chicago is that its depot may be said to be almost a part of the structure in which the conventions will be held. It immediately adjoins the convention building, and the main entrance is but a very short walk from the platform where the trains stop. The B. & O.'s new depot in Chicago is beyond all question, the handiest in the city, being within a few squares of the hotels and near the business centres. It is an exceedingly neat and commodious building, with attractive waiting rooms and courteous attendants. The low rates,—half fare, or one fare for the round trip,—will be in force for both conventions, the National Republican in June and the National Democratic in July. It would be a good idea for those contemplating going to have a talk with the B. & O. agents and learn all requisite particulars, in the shape of time of departure of trains, etc., etc.

How Her Hair Changed Color.

Many remarkable tales have been told of persons who, by reason of fright or other causes, have found that their hair has turned white in a single night. But there is not, we believe, anywhere on record a case where a person went to bed at night in a calm state of mind, rested soundly until daylight, and awoke in the morning to find that during the night sleep his or her hair had changed from ebony to silver. That is to say, there never was such a case until not long ago, when just this sort of an incident occurred in Boston. The subject was a lady, who retired at her usual hour, taking with her to her room another and an elderly lady, a visitor, who had arrived late in the day and for whom no other accommodation could be arranged. The subject of this incident was noted for the fineness and beauty of her hair, which was said by good judges—people who had been abroad and were acquainted with the appearance of ravens—to rival the raven's wing in blackness and luster. Being blessed with a good conscience, and having eaten nothing indigestible at supper, the lady slept peacefully during the night and awoke refreshed in the morning. But, on looking toward the mirror, she saw that her hair, instead of being black, as when she went to bed, was plentifully streaked with gray. She sprang up at once to assure herself by a nearer survey, and had just become convinced that her first view was correct, when at that moment her elderly companion, who had already dressed and gone down stairs, entered the room, and, with the words, "It was so dark when I got up that I put on the wrong switch," replaced upon the bureau a black and glossy coil. Catching up then the gray tresses that had for a moment so alarmed the younger lady, she deftly arranged them in their appropriate place and again quietly withdrew.—Boston Journal.

A GERMAN physician speaks highly of the use of soft soap as a local application for sores or glandular swellings, abscesses, discharging canals and cavities, felons, etc. It is not a new remedy by any means, but one which seems likely to be neglected where it might be of real service. Quite a pleasant preparation can be made by dissolving the soap in a little cologne water.

Congress will adjourn about July 1.

Rat, Cat and Puppy Pie.

In Canton we visited a restaurant where cats, rats and dogs were served for food. Dog steak, fried rat or cat stew were to be had at any hour. It has been often denied and many affirm that it is only one of the old Peter Parley's stories that the Chinese eat those things. But it is true. We saw a whole puppy stewed in a large kettle. We saw a tableful of men satisfying their hunger with dog meat, and they ate with a hearty relish. We saw cats and pups in cages for sale, and rats hung up waiting for purchasers. The dishes looked savory, and the price of a meal was "dog cheap," but we did not indulge in any "how-wow" soup or feline steak or rodent pot-pie. We were not hungry just then. The Celestials will tell you "rat number one good eat-ee," and show you rats skinned, rats salted, rats dried, rats hung up by the tails and rats strung on strings. If you doubt the genuineness of the article the proprietor will show you the meat with the hair and tail attached for identification.

Cat meat is said to be a fine tonic and rat is good for bald-headed men. Puppies and kittens are generally preferred; old dogs and Tom cats are apt to be rather tough. Black cats are supposed to be more nutritious than white ones, hence the following advertisement seen in a shop window: "Black cats served hot at all hours; also rats, snakes and dogs."—China letter.

Crematories.

The Le Moyne crematory at Washington, Pa., occupies a relation to the United States much like that of the crematory at Gotha, in Central Germany, to Europe. Although Prof. Felix Adler and other advocates of cremation are soliciting subscriptions in shares of $25 each to stock a crematory to be erected in this city, their scheme has not progressed with sufficient rapidity to indicate that facilities for the incineration of human remains will soon be afforded in New York. The crematory at Gotha has been in use a little more than four years, and during that time 100 bodies have been burned in it, six Jews and twenty-eight Roman Catholics being of the number. Austria, England, France, Germany and Russia have all sent their dead to its furnace.—New York Mail and Express.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

The will of the late Cyrus McCormick, the reaper man, disposes of an estate valued at $10,000,000.

The fruit crop, with perhaps the single exception of peaches, promises an abundant yield.

Mr. Wolf, of Bristol, Ind., wholesale cigar merchant, was in town the other day disposing of his goods.

The old fog's have been driven to the wall by the enterprise of G. C. Ralston, the low-priced and leading grocer of Auburn.

While in Waterloo recently, General Blair invited us to take a ride to Auburn behind his celebrated Mexican ponies. The General is somewhat noted for ownership of fine horses and the span of ponies he now drives are real beauties and fast travelers.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, the personal organ of the Hon. Henry B. Payne, says the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden for the Presidency would mean Victory, Vengeance and Vindication.

George C. Ralston certainly has smashed high prices. If you would be convinced of this fact give the new grocery a call when you visit Auburn.

Humphrey Chilcote, as landlord of the Central house at Auburn, seems to be the right man in the right place. We understand that he is reviving the popularity of this old and well-known hotel stand by his excellent management of the same.

A new time-card went into effect on the Lake Shore Sunday, 18th. There is only a slight change in the old time, but the numbers of trains have been changed to correspond with the numbered trains on eastern divisions, as follows: Going East, Mail No. 2, departs at 2:22 p. m.; No. 8 Atlantic Express, 11:07 a. m., and No. 4, Limited Express, 7:48 p. m. (the two latter trains do not stop); No. 82, local freight, 1:20 p. m. Going West, No. 3 Mail, 1:40 p. m.; No. 9 Pacific Express, 2:11 a. m.; No. 1 Limited Express, 5:52 a. m.; (two latter trains do not stop) No. 61, local freight, 6:10 a. m., and No. 83, local freight, 10:00 a. m. In addition to the above the Company have put on the much desired accommodation train, the old "Plug," which runs between Toledo and Kendallville, and departs from this station going east at 5:55 a. m., and returning west at 9:15 p. m.

The announcement of the Waterloo Normal School; a copy of which has been received at this office, fixes the date of commencement July 9th, 1884, and continuing eight weeks. An interesting programme of work is presented. Students and others wishing to attend the session will be provided with board by making application to B. B. Harrison, principal, or K. E. Cole, assistant.

THE JUNE MAGAZINES.

THE JUNE CENTURY.—Though there are four profusely illustrated papers in the June Century and four full-page pictures, this number of the magazine is perhaps even more notable for its literary features than for its pictures. Of special interest is Miss Fanny Stone's "Diary of an American Girl in Cairo during the War of 1882." It is a vivid and remarkable narrative of the life of Gen. C. P. Stone's family during the month that mother and daughter were exposed in Cairo to the greatest uncertainties and dangers, while General Stone was at his post with the Khedive, and aiding in the English operations against Arabi. President Eliot, of Harvard, discusses the question, "What is Liberal Education?" in which he claims that the sciences and English should be given leading places in the school and also in the college course. In a paper on "The Use and Abuse of Parties," Dr. Washington Gladden advises independents to try to act with their party in the choice of candidates, and to bolt bad nominations. In "Topics of the Time," an editorial called "Reaping the Whirlwind" is a sequel to the editorial in the April Century entitled "Mob and Magistrate," which so surprisingly anticipated the Cincinnati riot. Another editorial in the June number relates to another phase of the riot—the militia and the measures Congress ought to take to increase its efficiency.

The lighter features of the number are every one of them up to the standard this magazine has set up for itself.

ST. NICHOLAS for June is a bright out-of-door number, nearly every article taking the reader out into the woods and fields, yet without sacrifice of the variety of subject and interest which is so distinguishing a feature of the magazine.

We have only space to note a few of the leading features of this number, among which we mention J. T. Trowbridge's serial, "The Scarlet Tanager," showing how much easier the hero found it to get into a scrape than to get out of it; "Marvin and his Boy Hunters," Maurice Thompson's serial story, tells of hunting small game on the Indian prairies. "The Issuor of Besancon," is the sixth of Miss Alcott's Spinning Wheel Stories; "Frederick of Hohenstaufen, the Boy Emperor," is another of E. S. Brook's "Historic Boys," the account of whose early life reads more like a fairy tale than the relation of a historian. A live story for boys is written by W. W. Fink, and called "Two Boys of Migdaleville," it shows what energy, push, and perseverance will accomplish under the most unfavorable circumstances. Among the poems and verses are "The Brownies' Voyage," and contributions from Lucy Larcom, Helen Gray Cone, Alice Wellington Rollins, Mrs. B. F. Butts, and others.

The illustrations are numerous and beautiful, especially those for "Queer Game" and "Historic Boys." The departments are full and entertaining.

Rail Road Accident!

A Stock Express Train Ditched and a Number of Cattle Killed and Wounded—Corunna Bridge Demolished—Quick Work of a Wrecking Train—Warning to Bridge Loungers—An Evil Genius Hovering Hereabout.

The eastbound Stock Express No. 46, conductor Sixty, due here at 10:30 p. m., was wrecked at this station on the night of the 16th, (Friday) killing and wounding a number of cattle, demolishing three or four cars and destroying the railroad bridge that crosses the road at the principal thoroughfare of the village. The accident was caused by a defective break-beam.

As the heavy through train was nearing the station at a low rate of speed, the beam gave way and falling in front of the rear trucks partially derailed the car, and just as the three forward cars reached the bridge the forward car was thrown against the switch to the north side of the track, which threw them against one of the supporting pillars of the bridge carrying away the middle span. The three cars containing cattle were ditched and totally wrecked. Eleven head of cattle were killed outright, and a number more or less wounded. Some of the poor animals were pinned in the debris of the wreck for several hours and while being extricated by force their cries of pain were terrible to hear.

The wrecking train appeared upon the scene of the wreck early Saturday morning, and by evening the track was clear and in condition for the movement of trains. By Sunday afternoon nearly every particle of the smash-up had disappeared, which is another evidence of the superior facilities of the Lake Shore for speedily clearing up a wreck. The train contained a select lot of stock consigned to parties in Albany and Boston by Chicago shippers, and it is a wonder that the destruction was not greater than it was. It is fortunate that no one was hurt, the engine of the train having passed under and beyond the bridge before the crash, and the trainmen happened at that moment to be elsewhere.

The bridge, which was almost totally demolished, the middle part being carried away, at this writing is nearly rebuilt, carpenters having commenced the work of repairing on the following Monday morning.

The accident of Friday night should serve as a warning to persons who are in the habit of standing on the bridge to see the trains pass, to abandon the practice, for had any one been on the bridge at that time the result must have been attended with loss of life or maiming, and perhaps both.

Is there an evil genius shadowing this neighborhood? This makes the fifth or sixth railroad accident that has occurred at this station, or in the immediate vicinity, in the course of the past fifteen years, a fact that must naturally cause trainmen to regard Corunna as an unlucky station.

The damage sustained by the railroad corporation is comparatively small considering the "chances," and probably will not exceed $5,000.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Wall street had several large failures last week.

Vanderbilt says he may have to sell New York Central and invest in other stocks.

A young cyclone switched its tail about Zanesville, O., last week.

Crop reports received at Chicago up to May 19 are to the effect that the condition of both wheat and corn is encouraging.

Pete McCoy whipped Duncan McDonald in thirty-one rounds at Butte, M. T., last week. It was a brutal affair from beginning to end.

The gross revenues of the Western Union Telegraph Company for the year ending December 31, amounted to $19,761,476.

The national convention of woolgrowers and sheep breeders, in session in Chicago last week, resolved in favor of high tariff.

A negro who attacked two young girls at Galveston was taken by the infuriated citizens from jail, and his body riddled with bullets.

A fire in Asia Minor destroyed 950 dwellings, 644 warehouses and shops, 11 mosques, 16 schools, 9 khans, and 146 other buildings. Several persons perished.

"Old Bill Eaton, of Connecticut," thinks Tilden and Hendricks will be nominated, and looks upon John Sherman as the strongest man in the republican party.

Richard Gregg, chairman of the greenback state central committee of Indiana, says that Ben Butler will be the nominee of their convention, which meets at Indianapolis, May 29, if he will accept unconditionally.

It is possible that the bill to place General Grant on the retired list may become a law, but the indications from Washington are that it will not pass without a bitter fight. The general principle involved in the bill will be the point of attack.

FRIDAY, MAY 30, 1884.

One week more and the republican national convention will meet at Chicago. Then the wool will fly.

The friends of the rival republican candidates are very successfully demonstrating that the republican party has not among its leaders any man fit to be president.

Arthur's managers only claim 456 delegates up to the present time—four of them from Ohio. A week from today they will move to make it unanimous.

The last Auburn Republican sends out its customary grist of smut, reflecting upon the personal character of the late democratic congressional convention. The human tadpole who pretends to edit that sheet is of so little consequence that the game is hardly worth the powder.

The Toledo Bee, an independent republican paper, says: It looks now as though the politicians will win in their struggle with the people, and that Arthur will be the nominee at Chicago. It is well nigh a foregone conclusion that Tilden will be the nominee of the democracy, and with Tilden and Arthur in the field it requires no prophet to tell that the Sage of Gramercy Park will sweep the platter.

A Garrett correspondent, over the signature of "one of the kickers," takes the Herald to task for strictures upon those republicans who bolted the regular nominees at the late municipal election. The cor. comes back at the Herald and the republican machine with the charge of apathy and stupidity, and insinuates pretty strongly that the "kickers" will make it lively for the boys in the county this fall. The G. O. P. is in a bad way, but this is not our funeral.

Personal.

Thos. Lipsett returned home last week from Kansas, where he has been engaged for some time on the Union Pacific Railway.

Mrs. Voss, mother of Mrs. J. M. Carons, and a sister of J. M., of Stryker, O., are visiting with the family.

Chas. Innes, the venerable landlord of the Union hotel, has been very sick for several weeks with a complication of diseases. We understand that there is a slight improvement in his condition today.

Mr. Reynolds, of Fairfield Center, the aged father of our townsman M. Reynolds, is lying very low at his home, and there is but little hope of recovery.

County Commissioners' court convenes next Monday.

The May time-card of the B. & O. does not indicate any changes to speak of in the departure of trains from Garrett.

Local market quotations today: Wheat, No. 1, $1.01; oats, 86c.; butter, 10c.; eggs, 12c.

Saturday was a busy day in Waterloo and at Lawenstein & Rothschild's store we found a large crowd of people buying goods.

The Fourth Indiana District democratic congressional convention was held yesterday, and Hon. W. S. Holman was nominated on the first ballot. As this district is reliably democratic Mr. Holman's return to congress is assured. This will make his eleventh term.

May term of Circuit court opened on the 19th. Probate business occupied the attention of the court for the first two days. The present docket contains about the same number of cases as last term, many of them being quite important and promise to hang on making the session a long and busy one.

The G. A. R. have published an attractive programme of exercises for Memorial Day, and the occasion will be appropriately observed by the various Army Posts in the county at Auburn, on Friday, 30th. Every body should attend.

Republican National Convention will meet at Chicago June 2nd. To delegates and all others wishing to attend this convention, the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company will sell round trip tickets at reduced rates, good going May 29th to June 2d, good returning until June 13th. The B. & O. offers special inducements, it is the only line running three solid trains daily between the Ohio River and Chicago, making from six to seven hours quicker time than other routes, thro' sleeping cars on all express trains. The B. & O. is the only line landing passengers at the Exposition Building where the convention will be held. Take the B. & O. and avoid omnibus transfers.

[From the Garrett Edition.]

Farmers all planting corn makes business a little dull in town.

Wm. Phillips is with his wife and new boy baby. Set 'em up again to the boys, Wm. Haynes; the blacksmith, talks of leaving Garrett for other fields and pastures new.

Wm. Lore is deputy marshal. William looks after those kids that are jumping on and off trains at the depot.

"A house divided," etc. One-half running an ice-cream parlor; t'other half a jewelry store.

Garrett bought a new wheel road scraper, which seems just the thing in the hands of our new marshal.

The M. E. church will hold what is called "children's day" on the first Sunday in June. All anticipate a nice time.

The political cauldron has not yet begun to boil, but you may look for warm work in Keyser this fall.

Now is the time while you are cleaning house, just to pay a little attention to your back yards and alleys.

Bicknell got "busted" for town dad, but has gone as a delegate to the Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F. at Indianapolis, just the same.

The B. & O. Railroad man that was looking for "the man that struck Billy Patterson" found him, or at least the Doctor that put him together says so.

Our public schools closed last Friday with appropriate exercises. The school board has not yet selected teachers for the coming year.

The Episcopal church will soon once more have regular services. We hope that the cause will receive the hearty support of our citizens.

The infant daughter of Mr. Elder was buried Saturday last. The parents have the sympathy of the citizens of Garrett in their great bereavement.

We see B. D. Thomas out on the street looking greatly improved in health. Biggs has made a grand fight,—all credit to the Doctor—but more to his wife and nurse, Mrs. Thomas and family.

Powell et al say that if the prohibitionists would have kept faith and voted straight, and no scratching of candidates, and 18 or 20 democrats would have voted the republican ticket, why every last one of them would have been elected. Just so. We know how it is ourselves. Your contract was too big, couldn't deliver the stuff.

Annual Meeting of the German Baptist Church (Dunkards) to be held at Miller's Crossing, O. To all desiring to attend the above meeting, the B. & O. R. R. Co. will sell round trip tickets at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be good going from May 29th to June 6th, and will be good returning until June 10th.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

A train on the Parker & Karns City Railway, Pa., went through a bridge yesterday, killing two men.

The initial performance of the Cincinnati May Festival, Tuesday night, was a magnificent success. About 8,500 were in attendance, Arthur's boom, although a little late, is vigorous, and seems to gain in strength as it goes Chicagoward.

Three smart chaps from Lawrence County, Ohio, came to the city to live by their wits. They are now in the Hamilton County Jail.

The English-Peole contested election case was settled yesterday by congress giving the seat to Mr. English.

Mother, father, and daughter, were buried alive in their own home, near Portsmouth, O., Wednesday night.

A six year old girl was outraged and murdered near Detroit, Mich., last Thursday night.

A sixty year old man allowed himself to be robbed to the tune of $600 in a Cincinnati dive.

A Columbus, O., fare dealer has skipped out with a snug sum of money belonging to his employers.

Burglars broke a hole two feet square through the vault in the St. Louis City Clerk's office and carried off everything it contained of value.

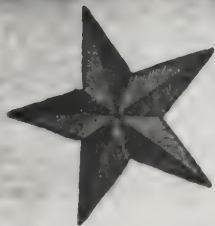

Two ladies took refuge from a thunder storm under a tree at Toledo yesterday, when a bolt of lightning struck the tree, killing one of the ladies, a Miss Fear, instantly.

Senator Hill has completed the report of the committee of the postal telegraph. The report discourages the proposition to secure the control of the Western Union's Telegraph lines.

Big business boom for Arthur Tuesday night by the capitalists of New York City, in which it was set forth that he is the only man possessing the confidence of that particular business community.

Judge Holman believes the "old ticket" will be nominated. In his speech at the convention yesterday, he said that he firmly believed that the ticket nominated by the Chicago democratic convention would be inaugurated on the 4th of next March.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—New York World.—Our learned neighbor, the Tribune, gives four direct and one indirect cause for the recent Wall street panic. We do not think they are sound.

"Finally, there has been some dishonesty and some recklessness," says our learned contemporary, with more respect for truth than for grammar.

Dishonesty, and recklessness have been the true causes of our troubles; dishonesty in public and private life; recklessness in the mad pursuit of wealth and in the methods resorted to for its accumulation.

The shoddy fortunes made during the war inaugurated an aristocracy of money bags. Everybody wanted to belong to it and outshine his neighbor. Grant as President, eager for money, took presents. The members of his Cabinet, eager for money, took bribes. His private secretary entered into a gang of government thieves.

Congress bestowed 290,000,000 acres of the public lands on railroad corporations and the congressional saints grew rich.

Jay Gould, Huntington and other great operators took their lobby to Washington and scattered wealth among the national legislators.

Gould, Fisk and Corbin gave the President's household a practical illustration of the value of a rise in gold in the form of a $25,000 check, and out of this grew Black Friday.

Credit Mobilier came along and Oakes Ames gathered in his Vice Presidents and Congressmen at comparatively low prices.

With Grant's second term came the increase of his pay to $50,000, the salary-grab game and back pay to Congress.

The disgusted people elected Mr. Tilden President, but the Republicans refused to go. By the aid of fraud and forgery they stole the presidency for Hayes, and Hayes rewarded the thieves with public offices in which they could plunder the people.

Then came another election. The chances of the Republicans were desperate. The corporations, monopolies and banks, favored by the party, raised a corruption fund to buy Indiana. Two speculators raised $300,000 to the fund on the pledge of Supreme Court Judgeships for their tools. The army of office holders was assessed. The election was bought. Arthur, then Vice President, after the purchase banqueted Dorsey, its principal manipulator, and publicly extolled the power and efficiency of "soap."

Garfield became President. He cheated those to whom he had pledged patronage. Some of them branded him as a cheat. One of them assassinated him.

The star route robberies, among other public crimes, came to the surface. The robbers were indicted. Through a bogus prosecution they escaped. To reward the unsuccessful prosecuting counsel the Treasury was further plundered.

Is it surprising that with these examples at the head of the government, corruption, greed, dishonor and a determination to make wealth by dishonest means should spread among the people?

When Grant stepped from the presidency into a swindling broker's office, which obtained money from victim's on false pretenses, which sought to impress the belief in its solvency upon its customers by pretending to be interested in heavy government contracts, and which used securities entrusted to its keeping—is it any wonder that the Fishes, Enos, Dodds, Hatches and Senegs came into existence?

The true cause of the panic is easily traced. There were venality, prodigality and dishonesty at the head of the nation. Gift-taking, bribe-taking and dishonesty prevailed at the White House. The presidency was stolen. High officers of the government boasted of their election through the power of "soap." The President was murdered by a disappointed spoils-hunter. Public robbers were protected by the administration. Grant descended from the seat of Washington into the seat of a Wall street shyster's "full" partner, from leading armies to stock-gambling. Monopolists enriched by Congress, in their turn enriched presidents, congressmen and judges. The demoralized people rushed into wild speculations. Values were inflated by fraud and trickery. Then came the inevitable smash, and when it was approaching, men stole and swindled in the desperate attempt to save their money.

The cause of the panic is plain. What senseless folly to attribute it to the tariff, the silver bill, the election and the frightened lambs!

LOCAL JOTTINGS BY FELIX.

Strawberry festivals are now on the slate.

The first one of the season, given not long since by the Methodist church people, was a perfect success in point of numbers and receipts, but the short cake was far from being "a yard wide and all wool;" in fact we may say it was very "shoddy" and the matrimonial chances of the young lady who made it will not be materially increased if her identity is discovered by the prospective Benedict of our village. The supply of berries was limited and this fact being known to "the church folks," prompted them to be on hand early in the evening and gobble up every berry to the discomfiture of the unregenerated sinners who made their appearance later in the evening and found nothing but empty dishes bearing the crimson stains of slaughtered berries. Moral: "Be wise in time," etc.

Why is it that our sidewalks are not repaired? What an aggravation it is to be stumbling over rotten remnants of boards while the saw-mill is merrily buzzing away in plain sight. The graceful gait of our young lady and gentlemen promenaders is becoming sadly impaired by this condition of the walks—"such a climbing up stairs" as is seen on our streets every day is disgraceful, and if something isn't done to improve matters it will not be long until everybody in town will be proficient in profanity and smell of St. Jacob's oil.

"The shadow of the scrub brush" hangs over the heads of three prominent young bolls of our village, as their wedding day is very near at hand. Very soon "six heart will beat as three" and their troubles will commence in earnest. Two of the couples are to be wedded in grand style, bridesmaids, nayers, orange blossoms, begonias and all other gorgeous "fixins," just like rich folks, you know. I've not yet received an invitation, but I'd really love to be the "Jenkins" of the occasion. I think I could write up a description of their toilets and presents that would just break their hearts. Their names will be changed so soon that it's not worth while mentioning them. Wait 'till they assume their "sure enough" names, then you'll know them as they are.

The interest in the Sunday meetings of the W. C. T. U., at the Rail Road reading room, is still very great. Last Sunday "Squires" Bacon delivered a very interesting address upon the duty of citizens to accomplish all the benefit possible by the enforcement of the laws already on the statute books. Sunday week Mr. A. Stewart delivered an address upon female suffrage, which was very interesting, very pretty, but like all other millinery goods very frail; yet a very effective medium of reaching the good will of the mothers and daughters of the land.

Bicknell has an honored and honorable delegate to the Odd Fellows State Convention at Indianapolis, recently, and by his genial manners and sensible conversation reflected great credit upon his constituents. Socially Mr. Bicknell is a diamond of the first water, a genuine "Kobnor," or mountain of light, but politically he is as completely blinded as a mole in winter quarters. He has been kinked and scratched by his republican brothers so regularly that he expects it every election day as a matter of course. He lent his voice to the Blaine boom, the man who permitted Oakes Ames to die that he might live, politically, the man who, in his short but notorious career as Secretary of State, effectually convinced our foreign friends that the American branch of the damphool family had succeeded in securing a prominent representative in governmental affairs; yet Bick. has been rewarded by seeing his man nominated and believes that he will be elected, and he will back his opinion with anything in the shop down to an ounce of caesar oil. We venture to say that when the returns are all in he'll find he has lost the bet and feel as though he'd drank the stake.

The campaign being almost upon us we may expect earnest work soon.

By-the-way, our society man, Sullivan, has a new pair of Mother Hubbard pants that looked very sweet on the promenade Sunday afternoon.

All spotted and spattered by his own political friends, poor Mulligan Jim will be all forlorn when in November he finds himself away up Salt River.

The republicans themselves, at Chicago, furnished abundant reasons why Blaine should be defeated.

Durability of Brick.

It is a noticeable feature of the New York architecture of the day that for the preferred material the builders of that city are returning to the brick of which their Dutch ancestors made their homes. Iron rusts and scales, and stone scales and wears away in that severe climate; brick alone withstands the gnawing tooth of time, and some of the oldest houses in the city are still the best. At last there seems to be some hope of a national architecture in America, judging from the new buildings which are going up, the first step toward which is taken in building houses for use and wear, instead of for show. These brick houses, finished on the exterior with stone and terra cotta, and in the interior in natural woods, have a genuineness that makes one feel quite as much at home as under a tree. It is a luxury for Americans to build a house for the way they are to live in it, and not what the carpenters and neighbors think of it. Brick is, of course, particularly adapted to some climates, and if a severe one it is almost necessary to use it. In mild climates the builder can please his fancy with stone or wood or iron; but if he have the good of posterity in view, and would like to erect a home and monument simultaneously, he can keep his work before the eyes of men longest in the shape of brick. Augustus imposed a fraud upon subsequent humanity when he made that famous declaration of finding Rome a city of brick and leaving it a city of marble. He did nothing of the sort, and there was no necessity of putting on airs about it if he had. The Roman brick, of which many edifices, and some of the finest even in the time of the Emperors, were built, was irregular in size, though usually quite thin, and of remarkable density. It was rather more like our terra-cotta, both in color and quality. The square brick of Nineveh, about the size of those with which we of the present day lay hearths, bears witness to the power of man to make with fire and clay a substance which shall outwear stone.

A PLAIN narrative of any remarkable fact, emphatically related, has a more striking effect without the author's comment.—William Sherston.

It is said that the old omnibus company of London, which runs 650 vehicles, annually loses £70,000 through the dishonesty of its conductors.

The Fatal "13."

English people tell an amusing story of a well-known banker of Liege, Belgium. He gave a little dinner party to which ten guests had been bidden, beside himself and wife, making twelve in all. They were just about to sit down when in dropped a friend from the antipodes and invited himself to dinner, thus making the fatal number thirteen. The banker, to prevent ill luck, rushed down stairs to his office, found the cashier just about to leave for the evening, dragged him up stairs, fitted him with a dress coat, and led him triumphantly into the drawing-room amid the applause of the relieved guests, three of whom declared that they would not sit down to the best dinner ever served if there were thirteen at the table. At that moment the bell rang, and a note was brought for one of the guests whose wife had suddenly fallen ill, and who consequently was unable to remain. Thirteen again! Gloom and despair; and the cashier, finding himself the Jonah of the evening, volunteers to depart. The banker saw him down stairs when—joy!—the family doctor heaved in sight. Him the host secured, and, happy in being able to offer the hospitality of his table to his kind-hearted and sorely-tried employe, the three returned to the drawing-room. Dinner was ordered to be placed upon the table, but just as all was ready the hostess, who was in delicate health, and who had been unduly excited by all the untoward events, fainted dead away, and had to be put to bed. Thirteen again! This time there was nothing for the cashier to do but to go and dine with what appetite he might have at the nearest restaurant.

An Item of News.

"I'm a reporter," said an unsalted youth to the baggage-master, as he planked himself down on a hand-truck near the car. "Got anything new for me?"

"Oh, I upset a can of varnish on that truck just before you sat down, but, as the item is already covered, it will be stale before you can get at it."

The news-gatherer was pried off with a coupling-pin, and sent home by slow freight.—Drake's Traveler's Magazine.

Poultry Notes.

Frequent changes of food for fowls not only insure good health but also a good supply of eggs.

Fowls should have all they will eat clean, but should not be fed so much that any will be left over.

Wood ashes are excellent for fowls to roll in, for the dust penetrates to the skin and is noxious to the vermin.

Poultry houses should be white-washed at least twice a year. A little glue mixed with the lime would make it stick better, and a few drops of crude carbolic acid would act as a guard against vermin.

Feed regularly in cold weather, as the fowls depend entirely on you for their meals, and are hungry and discontented if not fed at their meal-time.

Grain food is the natural demand of all fowls and should be supplied at all seasons of the year.

Exercise is very important with all fowls whether old or young, and especially laying hens, where eggs are to be used for breeding purposes.

The two principal errors most common in the management of poultry are: 1. Allowing too many fowls to mass together. 2. Neglecting to keep the house and yards as clean and as disinfected as they should be.

Fowls should be well fed and sheltered when moulting, for at this period their system is thoroughly drained and they are very liable to disease.

It is desirable, in winter, to have the hen house covered with chaff for the fowls to scratch in, for this keeps them active and gives them the exercise so much needed in cold weather.

Beyond doubt, poultry-keeping with proper attention and management can be made highly remunerative.—H. S. Waldo, in Adams County Farmer.

THERE are eleven States in which women can vote at the elections for School Directors. "Women for these offices," says Susan B. Anthony, "are particularly appropriate, since a large proportion of the school teachers are of the same sex. I find that they show much more tact than men, and, of course, they do in every position." In those eleven States the qualifications for voting are in nearly every instance similar to those of men. In Kentucky, however, a woman has to be a widow to poll, and in Michigan a taxpayer.

True Social Dignity.

To be ashamed of their origin is just now in American society the weakness of the little minds that compose it. The man that rides in his carriage shrinks from the acknowledgement that the money that enables him to have it was earned by his father, with toil and patience, in a tan-yard, behind the counter of a shoemaker, or by honest industry in some other useful occupation below the (so-called) grade of the merchant or professional man; as if the man did not honor the work, and not the work the man.

To such let Daniel Webster speak. Hear him: "It did not happen to me to be born in a log cabin, but my elder brothers and sisters were born in one, and raised among the snow drifts of New Hampshire, at a period so early that when the smoke arose from the rude chimney, and curled over the frozen hills, there was no similar evidence of a white man's habitation between that and the settlements on the rivers of Canada.

"It remains still exist—I make it an annual visit—I carry my children to it to teach them the hardships endured by the generations that have gone before them. I love to dwell on the tender recollections, the kindred ties, early affections, and the narrations and incidents that mingle with all I know of this primitive family abode.

"I weep to think that none of those that inhabited it are now living, and, if ever I fail in affectionate veneration for him who raised it against violence and destruction, cherished all domestic virtues beneath its roof, and, through fire and blood of seven years' revolutionary war, shrank from no toil, no sacrifice, to serve his country, and raise his children to a condition better than his own, may my name and the name of my posterity be blotted from the memory of mankind."

And we add that he who is ashamed of the poor father and mother whose honest labor supported him in childhood, and who daily toiled to give him education, by which he has been able to rise to a condition above the one they occupied, is unworthy to be the associate of wise and good men. All such will despise him; and, no matter how lofty he carries his head, he is nothing in the estimate of America's true noble men.—Lutheran Observer.

An Ocean Courier.

The news of disaster is not more trying and sickening to the heart than the anxious uncertainty which exists when expected tidings of those at sea do not come. After the vessel is due, each day intensifies the agony of the delay. Sometimes the protracted waiting ends in utter despair. Sometimes it is rewarded only by news of tell-tale wreckage, or by a scribbled message which floats ashore on a distant coast.

Captains are always glad to exchange signals with each other, so that their position may be known on a certain date, and no column of the newspaper is turned to more anxiously than that which contains the list of vessels "spoken."

The desirability of being 'able to communicate with the shore is especially felt by those concerned in the transatlantic steamers, which are occasionally delayed by accidents to rudder or machinery. Either of these may happen to a steamer and disable her without leaving her in positive danger. But she drifts about until she falls in with another vessel powerful enough to take her in tow. And in the meantime her owners and the friends of those on board are in harrowing uncertainty as to her fate.

About two years ago a large ocean steamer was not heard from for six weeks, though she at last made port, with a broken shaft, at the Azores.

A proposition has been made to establish floating telegraph stations along the route of the steamers, and this may be done in the future, but at present simpler means of communication are being looked for.

A recent English invention is likely to be of some use. It is called the "ocean courier," and is a hollow spheroid of red india-rubber, to hold messages. It will travel rapidly before the lightest wind, and can be distinguished at a distance of several miles.

Practical tests have been made which show that this invention can be relied upon on narrow seas; and even on the Atlantic, if several of the "couriers" were dispatched from a disabled steamer, carrying information of her position, one of them would probably reach within a few days another steamer, which could help her into port.—Fourth's Companion.

—Blaine can't carry New York, and therefore Blaine can't be elected.

Cure for Diphtheria.

Dr. W. A. Scott, of Milo, Iowa, gives the following cure for diphtheria, which he has found very successful in his practice. It can be found at any drug store, and used by any person without danger:

Take ten grains of permanganate of potassium and mix with one ounce of cold water. As soon as dissolved it must be applied with a rag or sponge, mop or swab to the whitish places in the tonsils, and other parts that have the diphtheria membrane on. Do this very gently, but thoroughly, every three hours until better; then every six hours until well. It does not give pain, but is rather nauseous to the taste. If the tongue is coated white, I mix one drachm of hyposulphite of soda and five drops of oil sassafras in four ounces of sirup made of sugar and hot water, and give a teaspoonful every one to three hours, as needed, when awake. If the tongue is not coated white, I mix twenty drops of tincture of phytolacca in four ounces of cold water and give a teaspoonful every one to three hours, as needed, when awake. The phytolacca is the common poke-root of the South, and, as it loses its strength by drying and age, the tincture should be from the fresh root, or it is worthless.

It is well to apply a little sweet-oil or cod-liver-oil to the outside of the throat to protect it from the action of the air, as the patient must be protected from all danger of getting chilled.

In the beginning of the disease, in mild cases, the above solution of permanganate of potassium is all I use, and all that is needed, as the disease is local at first, but it rapidly affects the whole system when seated. In the stinking form of diphtheria this solution soon destroys all smell, and in every case it destroys the diphtheria membrane without leaving any bad effect behind.

A SOAP mine has been discovered in California. The substance is a deposit of white earth, free from grit and impregnated with a small percentage of potash. It is easily sliced into bars, and for cleansing purposes it is a fair substitute for manufactured soap.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

The Republican Nominees.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer has the following comments on the Republican nominees:

Just now the ruling faction of the republican party is in a state of delirious excitement, and therefore unreasoning and unreasonable. They are vociferous in proclaiming that in the nomination of Blaine they have named their strongest man, and doubtless believe it, as a drunken man believes in the reality of his hallucinations. In this frenzied adoration of their idol, they overlook the fact that while its head may be brass its legs are clay, and a very poor variety of clay at that. When the excitement cools down and the claquers in the course of physical exhaustion cease their clamor, it will begin to dawn upon the minds of even the most blatant Blaine boomers that it will take more than a prodigious noise, to elect so notoriously an unfit man as James G. Blaine is, and that in nominating him the convention chose the weakest, instead of the strongest man from the list of candidates.

This is the deliberate judgment of unbiased men now. It will be the judgment of even the Blaine men when reason returns to them. They will have to face the disagreeable truth that the margin of votes between the two parties in this country is exceedingly narrow at best, and that there is a large element in the Republican party that cannot be induced upon any persuasion to vote for Blaine, and who cannot be influenced in any degree by the wild hurrahing, and vociferous whooping that characterises the political methods of the man from Maine.

Nobody will accuse Blaine of being a man of mediocre ability. Whatever he may be he is not commonplace. But there are plenty of men in the penitentiary who are not commonplace. Mr. Blaine is a positive force, but as apt to be in the wrong as in the right direction. He is not a man of convictions, but a man of policy. He is cunning but dishonest, fertile in resources but unscrupulous and devoid of conscience. Therefore, the better element of his own party distrust and fear him. They see peril to the country in his election to the presidency.

Blaine's record is such that the republicans will be put upon the defensive. His conduct as a public man has been marked by many questionable transactions. He will have to defend himself against charges of dishonesty, of fraud and speculation; charges, too, that are capable of being backed up by abundant proof, and upon which being satisfied of their truth no honest man can vote to make James G. Blaine President.

Gush and sentiment do not make votes nor Presidents, nor will the rhetoric of the orators dull the moral perception of the people. Out of all this din of shouting and frenzy of excitement will come the cold, calm judgment that Blaine is a corrupt man, a dishonest, scheming politician, a man of ill balanced judgment and inordinate ambition, and therefore dangerous to the country, and unfit to be President. This is why the nomination of Blaine was an act of unwisdom. This is why he can never be President.

As for Logan—well, there needs but a word to be said, and that is, that if it should be the ill-fate of this country to have Blaine and Logan elected, the people may well unite in prayer, that Blaine, bad as he is, might live out his full term.

A CERTAIN little 3-year-old likes very much to go to church, and especially enjoys the singing. One day the choir sang "Rock of Ages Cleft for Me," and after she got home the little one was heard singing, very seriously, "Rock the babies, kept for me."—Nursery Tales.

Democratic State Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 28, 1884.
The electors of Indiana, regardless of past political affiliations, who are desirous of co-operating with the Democracy in the support of its principles and nominees, and who are in favor of an honest and economical administration of our public affairs, and opposed to the corrupt practices in the meetings throughout the State for the purpose of selecting representatives to attend a delegate convention to be held at the city of Indianapolis, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1884, at English's opera house, for the purpose of adopting a platform of principles and the nomination of candidates to be supported for the following offices:

Governor,	Lieutenant-Governor,
One Judge Supreme Court	Secretary of State,
Auditor of State,	Treasurer of State,
Reporter of Supreme Court,	Attorney-General,
Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The ratio of representation will be one delegate for each 200 votes cast for Wm. K. Myers for Secretary of State in 1882, and one delegate for each fraction of one hundred or over.

The delegates from each Congressional district will meet on the evening previous to the convention, at places to be hereafter designated by this committee, for the purpose of selecting and reporting to the convention—

- One committee on Permanent Organization
- One committee on Platform and Resolutions
- One Vice-President for the convention
- One Assistant Secretary for the convention
- Two delegates to the National democratic convention.
- Two alternate delegates to National democratic convention.
- One Presidential Elector.
- One contingent Presidential Elector.
- One member State Central committee for ensuing two years
- One Committee on Credentials.

The committee on Platforms and Resolutions will meet immediately after adjournment of District meetings, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the consultation room of Supreme Court, Tuesday evening, June 24.

The committee on Permanent Organization will meet at the same hour in the State Auditor's office.
It will be their duty to name a President and Principal Secretary of the convention, four delegates at large and four alternate delegates to the National Convention, two Electors for the State at large and two contingent Electors, and also to recommend rules for the government of the convention.

The committee on Credentials will meet at 8 o'clock
a. m., Wednesday, June 25, at rooms of the State Central Committee, to determine such contests as may be submitted to them.

Delegate tickets of admission to the convention will be issued to the chairman of each county delegation and to authorized representatives of the press upon the presentation of credentials at the State Central Committee rooms.

By order of the State Democratic Central Committee.

National Democratic Convention.

The National Democratic Committee having met to the city of Washington on the 22d day of February, 1884, has appointed Tuesday, the eighth day of July next, at noon as the time, and chosen the city of Chicago as the place of holding the National Democratic Convention.

Each state is entitled to a representation therein equal to double the number of its Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States.
The Democrats of each organized territory and the District of Columbia are invited to send two delegates, subject to the decision of the convention as to their admission. All Democratic Conservative citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political associations and differences, who can unite with us in the effort for pure, economical and constitutional government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention.

WILLIAM H. BARNUM, Chairman.
FREDERICK O. PRINCE, Secretary.

If James G. Blaine should happen to be elected, and if then, after he had put his friends into the offices, he should happen to have another sunstroke, or if some inspired republican Guiteau should remove him in order to harmonize the party, and if Logan should happen to come in, what would happen to the grand old party? Better look out. Blaine has had one sunstroke, and Logan is as tough as old Joe Bagstock.

Judge Lowry is abundantly able to take care of himself among the congressmen and very soon they will leave him severely alone. The other day in the discussion of the English-Peele contest case, in which Mr. Lowry made the principal speech, he referred to Representative Wise, of Virginia, who had made a disrespectful remark about Ward and Lowry: "The man Wise, who prides himself on his 'affairs of honor,' undertook to reply to our congressman, but was driven back amid the jeers and laughter of the galleries.

The head-line manipulator of the Cincinnati Enquirer pronounces it "A platform that is fearfully and wonderfully made, promising to do something for every body, forgetting nobody, pulling wool over the eyes of the grangers, bribing the soldiers, tickling the laborers, begging of capitalists and corporations, and even appealing to the 'hoodlums' of the Pacific coast, but it strangely omits to 'point with pride' to the g. o. p.'s record, or even to 'view with alarm' the Democratic march to victory."

FRIDAY, JUNE 16, 1884.

The Blaine boomers and strikers, the bummers and howlers, with brass bands, amidst vociferous shouting and hurrahing, carried the day at Chicago, outgeneraling Arthur, of the administration, Sherman, Edmunds, and stamping the life out of the political ambition of the lesser presidential aspirants. The republican nominees, Blaine and Logan, are now named, but the people all over the land cry, "Wait for Tilden."

With this grand old statesman to lead the democracy, the republicans will find the road to the White House blockaded.

The republican party is already going to pieces, and the signs of dissolution are apparent before their opponents have mustered their recruits for action.

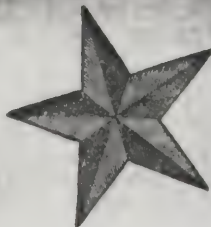

In an article on the impending crisis in the republican party, as a result of the Chicago nomination, the Plain Dealer says: "The revolt has already begun. The better element of the Republican party, the element in which yet lingers some of the old spirit that made the party a power in the days of Lincoln and Sumner and Greeley and Chase, and in which still exist some feeble vestiges of a conscience, has already served notice that it will not support the ticket nominated at Chicago. In New York, where at best, the Republican party had but an even chance, the rupture is complete. The New York Times, the most powerful and influential Republican newspaper of the country, a newspaper that has done faithful work for the party, bolts the nomination of Blaine and urges his defeat as a man unfit to be elected. The Evening Post, another influential Republican newspaper, likewise bolts the nomination and predicts the defeat of Blaine. All over New England, the Republican newspapers, following the lead of the Boston Herald and Advertiser, are in revolt against the nomination. The movement is a formidable one, and another national convention will be called to put an independent ticket in the field."

Nussbaum comes out with a personal card in a late number of the Auburn Courier, and in a terrible struggle with the King's English attempts to explain the situation respecting that little I. O. U. After denying his account and boasting of having obtained judgment in Squire Finch's court for $25.00, he winds up by telling the people what "a nice man he is to do business with." Any robber could do that. If the fellow were not more Shylock than Christian he would blush at such a proceeding. The facts are, Nussbaum never pretended to claim that we owed him over $5 on account, which he confessed in the presence of a witness, and the suit referred to, in which he obtained a judgment for $25.00, was simply a trumped up affair, a sham and a trick, and of course we paid no attention to it. Hence the judgment. As the public cannot be particularly interested in the personal differences between Nussbaum and the editor of this paper, we shall pursue the subject no farther here than to state that he is well aware of the fact that he honestly owes us a considerable balance, and that the account is still for sale.

The editor of the Auburn Republican is conceited enough to imagine that we court his attention, and says he is just now too busy with the democratic lion to pick the insects off the king's back. How funny! By the time Cal. gets through monkeying with the democratic lion, he will be in a worse condition than he was when he collided with a certain jockey and had to be carried home on a stretcher. Wonder whether he has "poked" all the scales off his nose yet? "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," and such is the editor of the Republican.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

Under the caption of "The Other Side," our neighbor of the Courier, in a late issue, reads us a mild lecture for intimating that there was a screw loose at the democratic Richland caucus in the method of choosing a delegate to the State Convention. The article is signed by quite a number of persons alleged to be leading democrats and representative citizens. Well, some of them are democrats and good men, but some of them are not democrats, or patrons of the Headlight, but on the other hand unfriendly to its editor. This is neither here nor there.

The information was voluntarily given to us by an alleged leading democrat of the county, one who had a personal interest in the contest, and therefore ought to know what he is talking about, and these democrats have no right to censure us for giving credence to information that we believed was reliable. But we are happy to learn through the efforts of the sleepless and vigilant aspirant for caucus honors, that "our delegate" has been vindicated and the mark of Cain removed from his marble brow!

We assure Bro. Barnes that it is far from our purpose to injure the democratic cause—we could not do it, and indeed we have not done so; but on the other hand the irrepressible and over officious delegate, having made a sublime fool of himself in this business, bids fair to involve his friends. And now that this modern Falstaff has mustered his recruits, voicing the sentiment expressed to us by one who "signed" his certificate of character, "he can flatter himself that he will go to the State convention with the largest endorsement of any democrat who ever before left the township on a similar commission."

Finally, in the language of Bro. B., "we hope there will be no further trouble," and for the sake of harmony shall drop the subject, but we do not propose to be imposed upon and then keep silent when placed in a false position; but if we hear any more of this racket we shall be constrained to give the conspiracy "dead away," and in that event the informer must necessarily go upon the rocks. Vive vale!

Mr. Tilden's letter to the Chairman of the New York State Central Committee over his own signature, in which he declines to be a candidate for the Presidency, has been given to the Associated Press. Still it is believed that he will accept the nomination when unanimously tendered by the 8th of July convention.

Judge R. Wes. McBride, in a card to the Waterloo Press, contradicts the report circulated that the M. E. Church of that place fought the Prohibition Assembly meeting last Sunday, and brands the author a prevaricator of the first magnitude. The Judge says: "It is to be hoped that a man may be a friend of temperance without favoring violations of the Sunday laws."

Robert Dykes, late Junior member of the firm of J. Helmer & Co., still remains with us as a resident of the village, and we hope he will make this place his permanent home. He is traveling salesman for a leading wholesale Toledo grocery house.

The Democratic State Convention will meet at Indianapolis on the 25th inst., and the National Convention will meet at Chicago on the 8th of July, less than two weeks intervening between the two great conventions.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

One can see the Democratic grass grow since the Independent showers began.

Congress will rush business in order to adjourn by the 8th of July.

Twenty-six sheep were killed by one lightning-bolt in a storm near Rushport, O., Saturday.

Republicans are prophesying that the present "Henry Clay" of their party will land where the original Clay did forty years ago.

Henry C. Work, author of "Marching Through Georgia," and other popular songs, died at Hartford, Conn., Sunday.

In a railway accident, Saturday, on the Pittsburg, Cleveland and Toledo Railroad, ten miles from Akron, O., seven Italian laborers were terribly injured. Two have died, and others can not recover.

A religious monomaniac named Andy Adams, living in Padeston, West Virginia, murdered his mother and sister Sunday. The boy explained his crime by saying the Lord had commanded him to offer a sacrifice.

A REGULAR CYCLONE!

Grant and Conkling Resort the Stranded Republican Craft.

And the Latter Lands in the Democratic Camp.

Independent Republicans Will Support Tilden, if Nominated.

As to General Grant and Conkling Judge Noah Davis, in a New York Herald interview, said: "As for Conkling, no one can account for his course. I hear that he has been elected a member of the Manhattan Club, and it certainly looks as if he was marching straight over into the Democratic camp. The Herald also says that a prominent Republican politician who is excellent authority upon the subject, and that neither General Grant nor Mr. Conkling would do anything to support Blaine in the coming election. He said that General Grant wanted Logan nominated for the presidency, and had made up his mind not to oppose Blaine, but to remain neutral. Mr. Conkling, he said, had accomplished his only desire by defeating Arthur, and would not assist Blaine by word or act. "Both Conkling and Grant," he said, "regard Blaine's defeat as certain." He said that the independent Republicans who bolted the ticket would support Tilden, if nominated, and if not, Flower. The New York and Boston papers have columns filled with Republican "bolts" and "growls." The disaffected are anxiously looking forward to see what the Democratic National Convention will do.

Neither may nominate, but it is cold, other judgment elects. The two seldom run together.

Central Committee Meeting.

The democratic central committee met here on Saturday of last week agreeably to the call of the chairman. They were called to order in the Sheriff's office at 10 A. M., by Mr. Boland, who stated that the first business in order was the election of a chairman to serve for the next two years. T. H. Sprott was put on nomination and elected without opposition. The retiring chairman, Mr. Boland, in a neat little speech thanked the committee for the cordiality with which he had always been sustained in his work and hoped the new board would sweep every thing before them as the former one had done. The new chairman made a brief speech, thanking the members for the honor conferred and said the meeting was now ready to proceed to business. J. A. Barns was elected secretary for the committee. The next in order was to set the time for the county convention. After some discussion the time was fixed for Saturday, July 26. After considerable discussion it was decided that all democrats who attend the State Convention at Indianapolis, shall be entitled to act as delegates and help cast the vote of the county. Committee then adjourned, subject to a call of the chairman. The meeting was very harmonious, and the best of feeling prevailed.

And now comes George William Curtiss, so prominent at Chicago and says: "I was present at the birth of the Republican party, and I very much fear that I am a witness of its death." Henry Ward Beecher also announces that he will not vote for Blaine.

A life-long Republican writing from Massachusetts says, "there is no enthusiasm in Massachusetts for Blaine. It will be easy for the Democrats to beat him if they place a good man in nomination."

THE HEAD LIGHT.

Another Noble County Tragedy - A Suspected Tramp Shot Down while Begging for Bread.

On Thursday morning last a tramp called at the farm residence of Sol. Rosenbury, near Kendallville, and demanded something to eat. Mrs. Rosenbury and her sister being alone on the premises he was ordered off, but he persisted in a boisterous manner declaring his purpose to storm the castle, entered the house and walked up to the cupboard, when Mrs. R. seized a revolver and banged away. The ball took effect in his left breast near the shoulder striking a rib. The tramp was removed to the county infirmary, and on examination the wound was found not to be dangerous. No blame is attached to Mrs. Rosenbury as the woman was acting in self defense. We are indebted to the Kendallville News of the 11th for foregoing facts. While one tramp in a hundred is deserving of charity, the ninety-nine are dangerous characters and should not be tolerated.

Since putting the above in type we learn further particulars of the shooting from a citizen of Kendallville, who got his information at Brimfield, near the scene of the tragedy. It seems the tramp did not enter the house, but approached it and asked for something to eat. He was refused by the woman and ordered to leave, the order being accompanied with a threat to shoot if he came any farther, but the poor fellow, thinking it an idle threat, advanced replying, "you would not shoot me would you, because I want something to eat?" whereupon the woman fired and the tramp fell. The shot proved fatal as he has since died of the wound. The tramp's father, who proves to be a wealthy citizen of Illinois, was notified by telegraph of the tragedy (the tramp divulging his name and family before he died) and came after the body of his son. He said that the boy had only been away from home about six weeks, and that the circumstances did not justify the taking of his son's life. This is probably another chapter in the current history of the day: of a wayward boy leaving a good home to live by his wits, and meeting with a disbarred and untimely death.

These of course are only floating rumors respecting the Noble county tragedy, and should not be taken for the facts.

The attendance at the Prohibition Assembly meeting at Waterloo Fair Grounds Sunday last, fell far short of the expectations of the management. It is alleged that the church people of Auburn and Waterloo took an active part in opposing the meeting, and that the ministers preached against it from their respective pulpits. We had always supposed that the church advocated temperance as the greatest moral reform of the day, and why it should point its batteries at the Prohibition Assembly meeting of Sunday, is more than we can understand. The meeting, however, was a success in respect to the exercises, and very interesting. Speeches were made by Prof. Griffice and Mrs. Wilson, of Indianapolis, Thos. Kelley, of Waterloo, and others.

Thomas Lipsett and family moved to Goshen on Tuesday, where Mr. Lipsett has obtained employment in one of the manufactories. Our citizens will feel the loss of the society of Mr. and Mrs. Lipsett, as they were of our best citizens, and we wish them well in their new home.

C. S. Bruce, of Albion, has bought an interest in the J. R. Kirkpatrick blacksmith and wagon shop. Mr. Bruce is master of his trade and comes highly recommended as one of the best horse-shoers in the country. Farmers and others will make a note of this fact and give Mr. Bruce a call.

The last issue of the Auburn Republican bears unmistakable evidence that the damp-hool killer, on his grand rounds, has forgotten to call at the editorial den of that poor old newspaper concern.

WATERLOO, June 18, 1884.

Frank Blair, of Laporte, spent Sunday here.
Frank McDonald is now officiating as night operator.

Mrs. Chilcote, of Edgerton, spent Sunday in town with her sister, Mrs. Wm. Crane.
John Ettinger, of Springfield, Ill., is visiting his parents here while his engine is undergoing repairs.
Ina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Zimmerman, died last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barnett, Miss Ida Blair, Mrs. J. B. Taylor, and several others, attended the Sabbath School convention at Corunna yesterday.
Mrs. Doctor Shephard and daughter, Addie, have returned from Warren, O.

Warren Hawkins and Miss Ida A. Guelbaker were married by Rev. W. O. Butler last Tuesday.

A Baiter and Logan Club is to be organized here next Saturday. The indications are that the timber for such a club is mighty scarce in this neck of the woods.

The soldiers' re-unions last week did not draw the crowd that was anticipated, owing to the failure of the committee to make arrangements for half fare rates. This was an inexcusable blunder and has caused much hard feeling among those who contributed toward defraying the expenses.

Clerk J. W. Baxter looked in upon us yesterday afternoon while on a flying business trip to the village.

We are glad to see that mine host, Uncle Chas. Imus of the Union hotel, is on his taps once more after a protracted illness.

The soldiers' re-unions at Waterloo, on last Thursday and Friday, is pronounced a success, about 5,000 people being present, including visitors and veterans.

Howard McCord, a clerk in Davenport's drug store, who was seriously injured on Memorial Day at Auburn by the premature discharge of a cannon, is recovering.

It will pay the people of DeKalb County to call on Oop Ralston for prices on groceries, even if you don't buy. If he don't sell you he can show you cheap goods, and make others sell for the same or close up.

Mrs. Chaffee informs us that her Sabbath school class, "Children's Band of Hope," engaged in the work of sending the gospel to the little African children of the Women's Missionary Association of the U. B. church in Sierra Leone, in Africa, contains an enrollment of eighteen members.

Blaine, of Maine, and Logan, of Illinois, mean that New York will go democratic.

Harrison and Hayes were nominated on Friday. Harrison was need up, and so was Hayes, although he did get to eat and sleep in the White House for four years.

The Sunday School Convention.

The annual convention of the DeKalb Co. Sunday School Association met at the M. E. church in this place on Tuesday, and continued the session until Wednesday afternoon.

All of the townships were represented by delegates. Convention met at 10 a. m. Tuesday, and devoted the day to the appointment of the various standing committees, reading of essays, etc.

The evening session devoted to Children's meeting, and the exercises were of a very interesting and instructive character.

Wednesday, the second and last day, was devoted to general discussion and business. Among the speakers present we notice, Revs. Tedrow and Christine, of Waterloo, Finch and Barr, of Auburn, and Jewell, of Newville; editor F. W. Willis, of the Press, Mrs. Jones, of Garrett, and Mrs. J. L. Hines, of Sedna.

There were probably from 100 to 150 visitors and delegates in attendance, and the convention was a decided success. In our next we will give full proceedings.

Nicholas Weirman placed upon our table Thursday morning, seven strawberries of the Monarch variety, cultivated in his garden, that upon measurement averaged five inches in circumference. Next.

We notice that Butt's hotel, Waterloo, is having the field to itself, as about everybody going hang up their hats at this excellent place, which takes front rank under the management of Frank Rynn, the model landlord.

Conductor J. A. Foy had charge of the Lake Shore special for the Prohibition Assembly meeting at Waterloo, last Sunday. Mr. Foy, like a large majority of conductors, possesses patience and good nature, as the management for the occasion was slightly out of joint.

The old and well known Teegarden house, Laporte, Ind., is now under the management of J. C. Gilbert, a hotel manager of large experience. The Teegarden is first-class in all its appointments, and the daily register shows that the traveling public are not slow to discover comfortable quarters.

Rumored that the Lake Shore Railroad will uniform its employees.

The late refreshing showers came in good time to help the growing crops.

The contract for carrying the star-route mail between this place and Angola has been let, dating from July 1st, Consideration $500.

CORUNNA, DEKALB CO., INDIANA, JUNE 30, 1884.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—The Chicago Staats Zeitung, the greatest German republican paper in the West, republishes Blaine, and its editor, Mr. Hessing, says that there is not a German republican paper in the country that is supporting their ticket.

—Plain Dealer: The Blaine organs are complaining that Blaine can carry two or three Southern states. It is the usual thing for the Republicans to claim two or three Southern States about this stage of the campaign. As it doesn't do any harm and may afford the broken backed old party some consolation, nobody will object.

—Plain Dealer: There are two meanings to Mr. Tilden's letter. Mr. Manning, of Albany, telegraphs to St. Louis that Mr. Tilden means what he says. He will not accept the nomination. Tilden will go down in history as the first man since Washington who had the presidency in his reach and who declined it from high and patriotic motives.

—The question in New York, says an exchange, "Is Roscoe Conkling a Republican or Democrat?" He has joined the Manhattan Club. He was elected a member early last week and qualified on Monday. Mr. Conkling has been asked to join Republican clubs and refused. The Manhattan Club aims to be to the Democratic party of New York City what the Union League Club is to the Republican party. Its constitution declares that the object of the club is to promulgate the principles of the Democratic party and promote social intercourse. Mr. Conkling is also a member of the New York Club.

—A telegram from Bucyrus, O., to the New York Herald under date of June 12th, says: Governor Hoadley arrived here last evening to attend commencement exercises, and is the guest of E. F. Finley, Adjutant General of the state. This morning your correspondent showed him a copy of Tilden's letter of declination, and the Governor, having first glanced over it, read it to the gentlemen around him, remarking when he came to the sentence, "Having given to their welfare whatever of health and strength I possessed or could borrow from the future," that was exactly what Mr. Tilden had told him last fall.

Governor Hoadley was reluctant to express any opinion on the letter at present. He regretted the conclusion arrived at by Mr. Tilden and hoped that his declination might not be irrevocable. In the course of conversation, however, he said: "Having read his letter to Mr. Manning very hurriedly, as you see it filled me with mingled emotions of regret and pleasure. I am bound to Mr. Tilden both by political sympathy and personal affection. My regret is that he should feel it his duty to himself to decline what is the unanimous wish of the democratic party."

"The democratic nominations are now to be followed in their order by election and inauguration, which reversing the judgment of the Electoral Tribunal of 1877 and affirming that of the people in 1876, would forever relieve our country of the danger of fraud in case of a disputed presidential succession. My pleasure is founded on the character of the letter, the assurance its contents give that Samuel J. Tilden has not failed in mental strength, but now, as in 1876, possesses forces of intellect fully adequate to the emergency. Neither the country nor the party can, in my judgment, safely forego the opportunity to reverse the record of 1877. My advice to the party is to stand by their guns in the order in which unanimous opinion has arranged them and refuse to take 'no' for an answer. Nominate Tilden and you will elect him. Inaugurate him, and with the aid you can furnish he will satisfactorily begin and as fully achieve, as can be done within four years, the great work of reform."

SAMUEL L. TILDER.

Remarkable Letter in Which He Declines the Presidential Nomination.

New York, June 10, 1884.

Daniel Manning, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of New York:

In my letter of June 18, 1880, addressed to the delegates from the State of New York to the Democratic National Convention, I said: "Having borne faithfully my full share of labor and care in the public service, and wearing the marks of its burdens, I desire nothing so much as an honorable discharge. I wish to lay down the honors and toils of even a quasi party leadership, and to seek the repose of private life. In renouncing a renomination for the presidency, I do so with no doubt in my mind as to the State of New York or of the United States, but because I believe that it is a renunciation of re-election to the Presidency."

Those who think my nomination indispensable to an effectual vindication of the right of the people to elect their representatives—violated in my person—I have accorded a long reserve of my decision possible, but I cannot overcome my reluctance to enter into a new engagement, which involves four years of ceaseless toil. The dignity of Presidential office is above a merely personal ambition, but it creates in me no illusion. Its value is as a great power for the good of the country. I said four years ago in accepting the nomination; knowing as I do, therefore, from fresh experience how great the difference is between gliding through an official routine and working out the form of systems and policies, it is impossible for me to contemplate what needs to be done in the Federal administration without an anxious sense of the difficulties of the undertaking. If summoned by the suffrages of my countrymen to attempt this work, I shall endeavor, with God's help, to be the efficient instrument of their will. Such work of renovation, after many years of inactivity, such a reform of systems and policies which would benefit fully have sacrificed all that remains to me of health and me, is now I feel beyond my strength. I must therefore withdraw from further public service, and the grounds of it, were at that time well-known to you and others; and when at Cincinnati, though, respecting my wishes yourself, you communicated to me an appeal from many valued friends to relinquish that purpose, I reiterated my determination unconditionally.

In four years which have since elapsed nothing has occurred to weaken, but everything to strengthen, the considerations which induced my withdrawal from public life. To all who have addressed me on the subject my intention has been frankly communicated. Several of my most confidential friends, under the sanction of their names, have publicly stated my determination to be irreversible. The appeal made to me by the Democratic masses, with apparent unanimity, to serve them once more, is entitled to the most deferential consideration, and would inspire a disposition to do anything desired of me if it were consistent with my judgment of duty. I believe there is no instrumentality in human society so potential in its influence upon mankind for good or evil as the Government machinery for administering justice and for making and executing laws. Not all the eleemosynary institutions of private benevolence to which philanthropists may devote their lives are so fruitful in benefit as the rescue and preservation of this machinery from the perversion that make it the instrument of conspiracy, fraud and crime against the most sacred rights and interests of the people. For fifty years, as a private citizen, never contemplating an official career, I have devoted at least as much effort and thought to do the duty of influencing aright the action of the governmental institutions of my country as to all other objects. I have never accepted official service except for a brief period for a special purpose, and only when the occasion seemed to require from me the sacrifice of private prefer-to the public welfare. I undertook the State administration of New York because it was supposed that in that way only could the executive power be arrayed on the side of the reforms to which, as a private citizen, I had given three years of my life. I accepted the nomination for the Presidency in 1876 because of the general conviction that my candidacy would best present the issue of reform which the democratic majority of the people desired to have worked out in the Federal Government, as it had been in that of the State of New York. I believed that had strength enough then to renovate the Administration of the Government of the United States, and in the close of my term to hand over the great trust to a successor faithful to the same policy. Though anxious to seek the repose of private life, I nevertheless acted upon the idea that every power is trust and involves a duty. In reply to the address of the committee communicating my nomination, I depicted the difficulties of the undertaking, and showed myself as engaged in it to those of a soldier entering battle, but I do not withhold the entire consecration of my powers to the public service.

Twenty years of continuous maladministration under the demoralizing influence of intestine war, and of bad finance, have infected the whole Government system of the United States with the cancerous growths of false constructions and corrupt practices. Powerful classes acquired pecuniary interest in official abuses, and the moral standards of the people have been impaired. To redress these evils is a work of a great difficulty and labor, and cannot be accomplished without the most energetic and efficient personal action on the part of Chief Executive of the Republic. The canvass and administration which it is desired that I should undertake would embrace a period of nearly five years. Nor can I admit my illusion as to their burdens. Three years of experience in the endeavor to reform the municipal government of the city of New York, and two years of experience of renovating the administration of the State of New York, have made me familiar with the requirements of such a work.

At the present time the considerations which induced my action in 1880 have become imperative. I ought not to assume a task which I have not the physical strength to carry through. To reform the Administration of the Federal Government, to realize my own ideal and to fulfill the just expectations of the people, would indeed warrant, as they could alone compensate, the sacrifice which the undertaking would involve. But in my condition of advancing years and declining strength I feel no assurance of my ability to accomplish these objects. I am, therefore, constrained to say, definitely, that I cannot now assume the labors of an administration or of a canvass. Undervaluing in no wise that best gift of Heaven—the occasion and the power sometimes bestowed upon a mere individual to communicate an impulse for good—and grateful beyond all words to my fellow-countrymen who would assign such a beneficent function to me, I am consoled by the reflection that neither the Democratic party nor the Republic for whose future that party is the best guarantee, is now, or ever can be, dependant upon any one man for their successful progress in the path of a noble destiny. Having given to their welfare whatever of health and strength I possessed or could borrow from the future, and having reached the term of my capacity for such labor as their welfare now demands, I but submit to the will of God in deeming my public career forever closed.

Old Settlers' Meeting.

The several societies of the Pioneer Association of DeKalb county met on the grounds of the Northwestern Indiana Agricultural Association just north of Waterloo, on Thursday, June 6, 1884. The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. by W. L. Blair, Pres. The speaker not having arrived the time was spent in listening to music by the band and choir, and prayer was offered by Rev. Meese, of Ellettsburg.

At 12 a. m. recess was taken until 1 p. m. Music by the band. Remarks by L. Blair, and E. D. Hartman. Report of officers for the last year. Election of officers for the ensuing year as follows: O. C. Clark, Pres.; Nelson Griffith, Vice-Pres.; W. L. Blair, Secy.; Cyrus Bowman, Treas.; John Butt, Biographer.

Executive Committee: Butler township, Phillip Noel; Jackson township, William Gam; Concord township, R. G. Edwards; and Dr. J. Emanuel; Newville township, Geo. Webster; Wilmington township, W. H. Mathews; and W. L. Blair; Union township, W. W. Ralston; and Henry Willis; Taylor township, B. P. Moody; Richland township, T. D. Bailey; Fairfield township, Willard Childs; Smithfield township, Henry Matthews; and his township, M. Waterman; Troy township, O. P. Learned.

Uncle Ed. Wright, of Sedan, offered a pair of fur gloves to the oldest resident present from DeKalb county, also the oldest man Steuben county. The gloves were presented to Samuel Wasson, of DeKalb county, who located here in Nov. 1833, and in George Harding of Steuben county. Mr. Harding has lived in that county since June 20, 1836.

W. L. Blair, Pres.

Joe Blair, Secy. pro tem.

A committee appointed by Hon. R. W. McBride, Judge of the DeKalb Circuit Court, composed of members of the County Bar, adopted resolutions expressive of the feeling of the Bar of said Court in the death of Hon. James L. Worden, formerly a member of this Bar and prosecuting attorney and Judge of the Court after the last judicial year, a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, and at the time of his death, Judge of the Superior Court of Allen county. The sentiment of the Bar accorded to Judge Worden the highest encomiums, that "the State in his death has lost one of its most upright, able and learned Judges as well as of its purest and noblest citizens."

John Robinson's Great Circus Festival.

John Robinson's Great Circus Festival is advertised to commence in Allen county July 20, and will give two performances, afternoon and evening. In addition to the usual day parade, there will be an illuminated parade in the evening, which of itself will be worth the price of admission. All the daily papers in the cities where they have exhibited speak in high terms of the company and of the performance. The Cincinnati Daily Commercial says: "The ten united circus tents are all new, and made expressly for the ten circus companies, which will appear on the occasion of the first grand circus festival. The circus tents, which will be filled with the most sensational riding acts, are all completed, and the daily exercising of riders and horses has been most satisfactory to the managers. There are many new aerial acts invented especially for John Robinson's ten combined shows which are marvels of gymnastic ingenuity. The female Samson, who pulls against elephants, the Siberian skaters, the performing domestic animals and the pyramidal building elephants, and over one hundred and fifty special acts and new features are to be offered."

The failure of G. R. Messenger, a well-known Toledo tobacconist, is announced. Liabilities, $20,000.

The Wheeling, (W. Va.) Volksblatt, the only German paper in the state, bolts the Blaine ticket.

Commodore Garrison, a noted steamboat owner of the olden time, and lately a large owner and operator of railway lines, has failed for $5,000,000.

Mr. Tilden's letter declining the democratic nomination for President tendered unanimously by the democracy, is a document with the ring of grand statesmanship and patriotism and will command the admiration of every one who reads it.

The trial of Charles W. Butler, charged with the murder of his wife, Lavina Abbie Butler, at Pierceton, Kosciusco county, some time ago, was concluded at Columbia City on the 18th and resulted in a verdict of guilty and the death penalty affixed. The crime of Butler was an atrocious one, and a plain case of brutal murder, but as usual the plea of insanity was set up but justice prevailed in this instance and the scoundrel will swing.

A correspondent says that Mr. Tilden told Mayor Neeley, of Leavenworth, Kansas, that he was in favor of the nomination of Governor Cleveland for President. In substance, Mr. Tilden said that Cleveland would take his place at the head of the democratic hosts and would lead them to victory. He said that he had watched Cleveland's course with great interest. At first, through inexperience, Cleveland had made some mistakes, but on the whole he had made an excellent Governor, and he felt sure he would make an admirable President.

It is claimed that Tilden favors Cleveland and Hoadly.

The doorknockers of the Democratic National Convention will be from Pinkerton's force of detectives. None but those holding tickets will be admitted.

The boys say that the sore-eyed nymphs in a certain Main street dive are giving 'editor' Willis of the Waterloo Press a heap of trouble. Sorry to hear it, but our radical Bro. should be virtuous and then he will be happy.

Convention Hall, Chicago, will have 10,500 seats—2,000 for delegates, alternates, officers and committees, 800 for the press, 1,200 to Senators and Representatives and 1,500 for the city.

It will pay the people of DeKalb County to call on Coop Ralston for prices on groceries, even if you don't buy. If he don't sell you he can show you cheap goods, and make others sell for the same or close up. 3t

Robt. F. Kinnaird succeeds Geo. B. Campbell as General Ticket Agent of the F. W. C. & L. Railroad. The June time-card of this road went into effect on the 8th and will be found elsewhere revised and corrected.

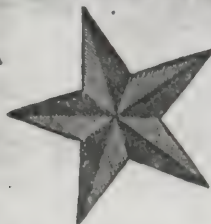

Sam Pommert is the Dutch barber at the county seat, who shaves your face and gives you taffy at the same time. But Sam has a nice, cozy place and serves his customers in a manner that tends to draw the crowd and therefore enrich his exchequer.

It is stated that satisfactory arrangements have been effected between Governor Hoadly and Payne, whereby the Ohio delegation will be instructed to present the name of the former at Chicago for the second place on the Presidential ticket.

The Saratoga, New York State, democratic convention adjourned on the 19th, and resulted satisfactorily, both Tammany Hall and Irring Hall democrats uniting, and the delegation will go to Chicago harmonious. The choice lies between Cleveland, Payne and Hoadly.

The next time the 'editor' of the Press reads an essay before a Sunday School convention he should repeat the Ten Commandments. In fact this pious (?) chap, who is now rattling around the Press office in Charley Baxter's old shoes, should keep the document pasted in his No. 5 hat for his own special benefit.

In our Merchant Tailoring department we have surprised all with our large, new and magnificent display of piece goods. Our Cutter, Mr. Charles Stahler, is a proficient and expert designer, and therefore we guarantee better fitting garments than have ever been made heretofore in this city. We invite you one and all to visit our new store and convince yourselves that we have spared no pains in the selection of our goods.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

The Republican State Convention, which was held at Indianapolis on last Thursday, drew a large crowd. The statesmen named for the gubernatorial candidacy were: Hon. W. H. Calkins, of Laporte, Colonel W. W. Dudley, of Wayne, and General P. C. Shanks, of Jay. General Gresham was not presented. Calkins was nominated on the first ballot by a majority of 34, the ballot standing: Calkins 594, Dudley 512, Shanks 48. The nominee is the representative in Congress from the Laporte district and is by no means the strongest of the three gentlemen named, but as the outlook in Indiana this fall for the republican party is anything but promising, naturally there was no fight over the empty honors of being its standard-bearer. On reporting the platform Will Cumback in a brief speech took occasion to rake the republican party for timidity upon the temperance question. Inasmuch as the platform was a ready-made affair and all amendments and substitutes choked off, the speaker graciously submitted to the inevitable. Thus was the prohibition plank in the republican elastic State platform of 1884 conveniently fired.

Judge McClellan's new residence at Auburn, which is being built adjoining the First National Bank building, is approaching completion, and when finished will be one of the handsomest and most aristocratic looking edifices at the county seat. Mr. McClellan is president of the First National, carries the biggest end of the bank's stock and it looks as though he had come to stay. He is one of the solid and enterprising men of the burg, and personally a gentleman of liberal and social attributes, than whom there are none in the county more deserving of the kind regards of his colleagues and fellow citizens.

6000 miners are in the Pennsylvania mine strike.

The Supreme Court of Ohio declared the Scott Liquor Law of that State to be constitutional. This measure was passed by a republican legislature and has been a great bone of contention. The Supreme Court being democratic the responsibility must rest with the democratic party, but the conclusions are wise and the people will sustain the action of the court.

Hon. Helster Clymer, a prominent iron manufacturer, railroad manager and politician of Pennsylvania, who died recently at his home in Reading after a short illness, it is supposed committed suicide by taking morphine. The body will be disinterred and an examination had by the Coroner to ascertain the facts.

Sam Randall is the advance guard of the Democratic National Convention, and it is reported that he has established his headquarters at the Commercial hotel, and proposes to adopt the Blaine plan by hiring a mob of strikers to bowl himself into the Presidential nomination. Randall will learn that this scheme won't work in a democratic convention.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

John Sherman made a powerful argument in the Senate on the 23d in opposition to the arrears of pension scheme reported by Senator Ingalls and adopted in the republican national platform at Chicago. The defeat of the scheme will save the tax payers of the country $200,000,000, and the result of its defeat is due to the courage of Senator Sherman who refused to be bound by the pension declaration in the republican platform or by the caucus degree. While the Senate should do everything reasonable to care for needy and disabled soldiers of the late war, he agreed that it should not be unmindful of the common good of all the people of the entire country; this was not a time to make enormous demands on the Treasury. In reply to Mr. Ingalls, who rebuked him for ignoring the Chicago platform, Mr. Sherman said:

"The Chicago platform was framed by forty-two men, in sweltering heat for four hours, men who had never seen each other before, and suddenly called upon to frame a platform, embracing every object of public policy, every desire of the republican party, and put them in a set phrase in four hours. To call a document framed under such circumstances a guide for Senators to influence them in the deliberate exercise of their public duty is an extraordinary spectacle. I have as much respect for my party associates as anybody else, or as anybody ought to have, but it is the Congress chosen under the constitution that must prescribe the laws of the country."

Editor W. W. Armstrong, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, has been chosen a delegate from Cuyahoga county to the Democratic National Convention over the opposition of a little ring of Cleveland time-serving democrats.

Barber Poles and Signs in Germany.

There are no barber poles in front of the German barber shops. The nearest approach to a barber-pole, I have seen in Europe is the Flemish flag-staff, which is striped around in white and red, after the manner of base ball and some other stockings that I have heard of. These barber-pole flag-staffs may be seen sticking out of nearly every second and third-story window in Brussels and Antwerp, and when they are decorated with bunting they give those cities a decidedly gay and gaudy appearance.

The barber sign in Germany is a brass plate, about the size and form of a saucer. These are sometimes fastened to a hanging sign, but are usually screwed against the door-frame. Some barbers have only one, others have three, and others are not contented until their entire shop front is spangled with them. You needn't ask me why these brass plates are used for signs, or what they mean. I don't know, and I wouldn't deceive you for anything. If they were hung and screwed in front of a lawyer's office one might be able to give a pretty good guess, but the lawyers here don't need them any more than they in the United States. There is no brass around their premises except during office hours, or when the lawyers are in. But let me not digress.—Chemnitz Cor. Chicago News.

A CAREFUL father was about entering his library when he heard some one indulging in shocking profanity. He listened, and discovered that the culprit was his 14-year-old son. "I'll skin him!" he hissed in an undertone, seizing a small cane, and bursting into the library. His anger quickly vanished, however, when he discovered his mistake. His son was simply reading aloud one of Bret Harte's dialect poems.—The Judge.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

The Indiana State Sentinel offers the following excellent reasons why young men should vote the democratic ticket:

1. Because the leaders of the republican party in the campaign of 1880 were composed of star route thieves, and received the money, knowing it to be stolen; to buy poor men's votes with.

2. Because every man who has stolen from the United States in the past twenty years is a republican.

3. Because every man who cries down with a solid South is a stay-at-home republican, and dare not face cannon in the hour of our country's needs, but now cries out "Solid South."

4. Because every man who fights the giving of a disabled soldier a pension is a republican.

5. Because every man who bought government bonds when gold was worth $2.00, and voted ever since not to pay the soldier in the front the full value of his contract, but to pay him in a depreciated currency, is a republican.

6. Because the man who assassinated President Garfield was a republican—a "Stalwart" of the Stalwarts.

7. Because the man who would destroy the religion of our forefathers by denying there is a God is a leader of G. M. P. and a republican.

8. Because the men who are supposed to be honorable and whose position is such as to inspire the people that a claim before them would be decided according to law and evidence, and who voted in every contested electoral vote in 1876, no difference what the evidence was, to seat his fraudulency, Hayes, as President, were republicans.

The Shirt of an Aborigine.

Over both shoulders and down the full length of each arm are embroidered broad bands of brightly colored porcupine quills, and from both arms hang a very heavy buckskin fringe twenty inches in depth. At intervals along the fringe on the left arm are woven in scalp-locks, fourteen in number, showing the number of enemies that its wearer had slain. Hanging down at the front and back are two pointed ornamental flaps, about eight inches long and three broad at the top, trimmed with a fine buckskin fringe and beautifully ornamented with bead-work. On the front and back are painted or stained, in a manner known only to the untutored red, sixty representations of horse shoes, showing the number of horses and ponies that its proud owner had stolen from his foes. But even a Sioux chief, bedecked with all the grand trappings that delight his race, must himself succumb to the grim warrior Death at last; and a small bullet hole in the left shoulder of the shirt, with stains of blood still visible down the front, tells plainly the manner of its former owner's taking off.—Fargo (Dak.) Republican.

Chinese Superstition.

One great difficulty the employers of Chinese labor have to contend with is the superstition of these queer people. Their religious worship consists chiefly in propitiating the malevolent spirits of the dead. If a Chinese domestic fancies there is a ghost in the house he departs at once, and leaves an inscription behind to warn his successors. It often happens that a family will be unable to keep a servant longer than a single day. Man after man will come and go without giving any reason for his abrupt departure. At last the warning sign is found in the kitchen or the servant's room and expunged; then there is no more trouble. Not long ago two Chinamen were killed in Oregon by the premature explosion of a blast on a new railway line. One of their fellow workmen declared that just before the explosion he saw two devils come to the opposite bank of the river and heard them talking. Thereupon the whole gang of forty men dropped work, and could not be induced by threats or persuasions to return to the spot.—The Century.

Extinguishing a Bore.

Macaulay need to tell the following story of an incident which happened to him during his residence in India. He arrived late one night, desperately tired, at the bungalow of the Chaplain of an out-of-the-way station, and, having supped, was desirous of getting to bed as soon as possible. But his host, having got hold of a "Hon," was determined to make the most of him. He at once mounted his favorite hobby, and skipping his impatient guest, who in vain tried to escape, said, in a tone of great solemnity: "Mr. Macaulay, I positively cannot let you retire until you give your opinion as to the number of the boat in the Revolution." To confess ignorance would have ruined his reputation for omniscience, and perhaps have exposed him to the risk of a lengthy imprisonment. "I was driven into a corner," Macaulay would say, in telling the story, "and answered on the spot. 'I have no doubt as to what was forebadowed by the mystical number' (660), 'the British House of Commons, the members elected, 658; the three clerks at the table, the sergeant-at-arms and the deputy-sergeant, the librarian, and the two door-keepers making the exact number, 660,' and rushed to my couch, leaving my host dazed and bewildered as much at the promptitude and volubility of my reply as at the startling novelty of the theory it contained."

An Argument in Its Favor.

Although butter alone is nearly indigestible, yet the relish that good butter imparts to bread makes it more healthful than the bread alone would be. The human stomach will digest almost anything that is eaten with a relish, though scarcely anything that is not. This is a point which the objectors against the use of butter should carefully note. This is also true in feeding stock, as well as in supplying the wants of man.

ROBERT LOWRY.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State Convention closed its deliberations at the state capitol yesterday and accomplished a glorious day's work.

The incoming trains of the day previous were loaded down, and by midnight the city swarmed with people until the hotels were packed. It was the largest political gathering in the history of the state for many years.

Senator Daniel W. Voorhees presided, and the proceedings were conducted with harmony and good feeling, an other evidence that the democracy are united for battle all along the line.

As anticipated, the gallant Colonel Gray was chosen to lead the democratic hosts to victory, as their candidate for Governor, with General Manson for the second place.

The present state officers were re-nominated by acclamation.

The platform is broad, clear, comprehensive and liberal, enunciating a set of principles that bear no uncertain sound and upon which the democracy of Indiana will march to victory next November.

Mr. Wm. H. Dills, of Auburn, was nominated for Presidential Elector from DeKalb. In their make up of the ticket the convention chose wisely in selecting Mr. Dills to fill so important a position, and in common with his many friends we tender our congratulations.

(From the Garrett Edition.)

Miss Ella Carpenter has returned home from a visit in Ohio.

Bill Lore is a holy terror for fishing and dogs.

The Town Board meets in Bacon's office, hence Covell's anguish.

Covell says the Town Board can't fool with him.

C. E. High is in some trouble in regard to letters written to our town Marshal.

Superintendent Merics is seeing the lions in Chicago this week.

Miss Sherman, the revivalist, is holding meetings at the M. E. church.

By reason of sickness B. D. Thomas has resigned as County Commissioner. Biggs was a good commissioner.

Last Sunday the B. & O. ran an excursion train to Cedar Beach. Garrett was well represented.

Daniel Sterling says that Frits Robe hit him with a broom handle, and asks the state to assist him in getting even.

The County Commissioners selected Henry Probst to succeed B. D. Thomas as commissioner.

We notice several would-be candidates hovering around Garrett. Lightning is a frisky thing and a little uncertain.

Our Convention will soon be called and it stands democrats in hand to use good judgment in selecting candidates.

A. H. Phillips attended the Republican State Convention, and he has the sand to say that Calkins will be elected. But our friend Alex. is "most always" too previous in his political predictions.

Dr. W. M. Mercer and F. Snyder, and John Buchanan, attended the Republican State Convention at Indianapolis last week. Dr. Mercer says that Calkins is the most available man the republicans could have chosen for their standard-bearer.

The frogs are not all dead by a jugfull. A certain "Doctor" got a thousand miles from Corunna kept a man "hill," called it a treatment for dipomania, and then charged him a fee of $16.00. That's a fine scheme, but a pretty load bill for a few compounded French drinks. We suggest that the Dr. D. smash his medicine case and start a gin-mill.

Our railway station master, J. M. Carena, wears a broader smile than usual about these days, and quite a number of the boys have also "smiled" at his expense. The secret of Jack's unalloyed happiness may be attributed to an important event at his home recently. The heir apparent to Jack's expectations is a girl baby and a bright cherub at that. We most heartily congratulate the proud parent and wish him many returns.

During Blaine's brief career as Secretary of State he came nigh involving this country in war with two or three foreign nations, and in every instance he was compelled to take water in order to keep up out of a scrape. Blaine would be a fine man to place in the Presidential chair. He is such a level headed cuss.

Music in Negro Medical Practice.

A peculiar set of negroes, who rely partly on their songs of incantation for mercenary trickery, are the "lizard" doctors. Almost every negro community has one or more of these quacks. A negro is seized with some acute disease, and, particularly if he is bilious, is very apt to imagine that a lizard is making havoc with his vitals. So the lizard doctor is summoned. He makes an examination, sings one or two "charm" songs addressed to the lizard, then gives the patient some simple emetic. After the medicine has operated the fellow juggles a live lizard out of his sleeve and shows it triumphantly to the sufferer, whose natural recovery is often surprisingly hastened by the effect on his imagination. A higher grade of doctors are a class of old black women called locally "grannies," who unite with their medical practice some of the songs and rites of the Voodooes in Louisiana, further down the Mississippi. But these grannies really know some secret decoctions of herbs very efficacious in a certain class of diseases, and which the white doctors have tried hard, but as yet in vain, to detect. These medical secrets are transmitted carefully from generation to generation of grannies, who are much respected as well as feared by the superstitious blacks.—New York Post.

An Irish Way Around a Difficulty.

Two Irishmen came to a guidpost on a wide and desolate plain. It was getting dusk and the unfenced trails were scarcely distinguishable. "Five miles to Glenairlie," read one of them, putting his face close to the board. "But which ay them goes to Glenairlie, sure?" asked his companion, looking dubiously at the two trails. After a few moments' meditative silence, the first Irishman replied: "We can try one ay thim and then the other." "But how will we find the way back ay we get lost?" "Sure we will take the board a'ong wid us," replied the first. And so the two pilgrims lighted their pipes and marched cheerfully away with the guideboard between them.—Burlington Free Press.

AS THE world had no window glass up to the beginning of the nineteenth century, then the proverb about "people who live in glass houses" is not "as old as the hills."

Editorial Notes & Comments.

The Ohio Democratic State Convention is in session at Columbus as we go to press (Wednesday), and a great crowd is in attendance, attracted by the importance of the occasion; in addition to a State ticket to be nominated delegates-at-large will be chosen to the National Convention, and the former is buried in the scramble for positions for the latter, although harmony prevails. The Plain Dealer says editorially:

The Democratic State Convention has thus far got along harmoniously, and we presume will finish its labors today to the satisfaction of everybody but the republicans. There are no evidences of discord outside of that caused by the few cranks who are inevitable in all political conventions.

The nominations will doubtless be made as indicated in the dispatches, as there is no contest over them. For delegates-at-large gentlemen will be selected who will represent the sentiment of the democracy of the state and all elements of the party. They will go to Chicago pledged to no man, but free to cast their votes and influence for whoever may appear to be the best man to nominate.

A dispatch from Washington says that Cleveland is still regarded as the leading democratic candidate in spite of the talk by those who are urging Bayard, McDonald, Field and Flower, that Tammany being opposed to him he cannot carry New York State. The Star says that among democratic members of Congress it is probable that six out of ten speak out for Cleveland. Nearly all the democratic members from New York, including some that are Tammany men, are for the Governor. Outside of the Tammany crowd, the general expression is that its opposition will not hurt him in the state or outside of it.

Political Pointers.

The Democratic Congressmen will go to the Chicago Convention from Washington in a special train of police cars.

Governor Cleveland's private secretary gives it out that Cleveland has 60 out of the 73 delegates from New York, and that he will be nominated on the first ballot.

The Cincinnati Enquirer thinks that although Tilden may be paralyzed, he can nevertheless pit the Republican party in the same condition.

The Indiana delegation to Chicago will be headed by Thomas A. Hendricks and D. W. Voorhees, delegate-at-large, and will support McDonald for President, Mr. Hendricks making the nominating speech.

VOLUME VI. No. 118.

CORUNNA, DEKALB CO., INDIANA, JULY 15, 1884.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Boston Herald: The party could not survive a Blaine administration, even if it triumphed over a Blaine nomination.

—New York Telegram, (Rep.): When a great party which has controlled the destinies of this country for the past twenty-four years, around which cling so many hallowed memories, deliberately stoops to the disgrace of selecting for its standard-bearer a man who is the synonym of political corruption, the first feeling on the part of every right-minded citizen is profound grief.

—The Boston Herald (Independent republican), says: "If the campaign is wisely directed, the electoral vote of Massachusetts can be secured for the democratic Presidential candidate. * * The warrant of 'a divine right to bolt' is not needed to justify conscientious voters in refusing to vote for Blaine. Common honesty is a sufficient inspiration."

—Indiana State Sentinel: Mr. Blaine was walking, side by side with General Garfield when Guitau's first bullet reached the President. When the second shot was fired Mr. Blaine had slipped clear to the depot door. Mr. Blaine is very sorry. By the way, where was he during war-times when rebel bullets were flying thick and fast? He gathered the fruits of the war early—even of the first crop the magnetic man of Maine was a very generous reaper.

—Ligonier Banner: The Republicans at Indianapolis manifested their contempt for Union soldiers, notwithstanding their pretense of being the soldiers' friends, in the nomination of a notorious Netherkite, who never smelt gunpowder, over a mailed hero of the Union army. The nomination of 'Rhody' Shiel over Major Runyan cannot be looked upon in any other light than a great outrage and a studied insult. To make the matter worse, fraud was perpetrated in order to make Rhody Shiel's nomination sure. An erroneous record of the vote in Marion county was purposely made so that Mr. Shiel should be counted in. The Indiana soldiers will remember this fact when they come to vote, and Rhody Shiel will be sent where the woodbine twineth, by an unprecedented majority.

—Exchange: Mr. Blaine is a great statesman. There's no doubt about it. He once called Mr. Conkling a turkey-cook. He allowed the Fort Smith railroad company to sneak its land-stealing bill through congress. He destroyed the Mulligan letters that would have shown his connection with that job. He 'alooshed around' quite frantically in a good many bloody-shirt debates with Confederate brigadiers in congress, whom he never interfered with in the field. He wrote some pretty savage letters to the British government about a canal that we didn't have and are not likely to get. He tried to push the swindling claims of an adventurer against a little, crippled South American republic. He egged Garfield into a row with Conkling, and has lately written an unreliable history. Is anything more needed to prove that Blaine is a great statesman?

—Springfield (Mass.) Republican: These nominations are revolutionary. They are such as the Republican has never before presented, and will carry dismay and alarm to thousands of men who have regarded this as the party of safety, of integrity, of principle and of high moral ends. They portend deserved disaster and defeat to the Republican party and a revolution in the National Administration.

—New York Times (Rep.): Blaine's nomination means a disastrous defeat for the Republican party, and from that defeat the party would never recover, except under other leaders, and, perhaps, under another name. The party has assuredly fallen upon evil days. It has been stained and dishonored by men who have no part in it save for their own selfish and ignoble purposes.

The Philadelphia Telegraph (Blaine Rep.) says: "The character of the first Independent meeting in Boston fully confirms the gravest fears of those Republicans who have anxiously regarded the movement. It will be simple madness for the managers of the Chicago June nomination to undertake to ignore this revolt, organized by the chairman of the last Republican State Convention and many of the old-time leaders of the party."

Central Europe Swarming.

From all accounts the emigration from Germany will continue to increase yearly unless a great change takes place in the empire. The condition of things in the fatherland is deplorable. While the population increases the price of land is steadily falling. All the economic measures of Bismarck have been failures. His protectionist policy has ruined the farmers, while his military system has taxed all the resources of the state. The change from silver to a gold basis brought woes innumerable upon the monetary system of the country; but the greatest disease of all has been the recent floods, which have ruined the vineyards on the banks of the great rivers, submerged the finest farming land in the empire, and destroyed untold quantities of property. German families in this country are in constant receipt of letters from relatives and friends calling for assistance to get away from their old homes. Meanwhile Socialism has become more rampant than ever. The system of blood and iron will die with Kaiser William and Bismarck, and the great empire which conquered Austria and France will fall apart because of internal weakness. In the meantime this country will profit by immigration, and because of the decay of agriculture in Central Europe. — Democrat's Monthly.

Poets and Critics.

The genuine work of the world in poetry, or pictures, or industries, is done by the people who do not pause to hear the echo of their own voices. The poetic temperament, however slightly flavored, is always the artistic temperament, and by its nature suffers keenly. But that this subjective emotion is weakness, and that it may be in great measure overcome, is a vital truth of life. It may be submitted, too, if it is not one of the moral duties to overcome this feeling which is productive of so much discomfort, both to the poet and his immediate circle of friends, who are taxed to sympathize with the trials, largely imaginary, that he suffers from the injustice of a cold, unfeeling world. — Boston Traveller.

THE use of coke on locomotives is one-third more costly than coal. The fact that there is no smoke will not compensate for the extra cost of coke.

Hammer that Achieved an Object.

An interesting reminiscence comes to hand of the late Ernst Dohn, editor of the Berlin Kladderadatsch. Some years ago when the Princess Caroline of Rouss secured a dowry for her daughter by imposing a tax upon her propositus, only petty principalities, he "improved the occasion" by writing and publishing a satirical poem, which was received with hearty guffaws by the public, but which greatly incensed the Princess. She brought a libel suit against Dohn and succeeded in having him sentenced to five weeks' imprisonment, despite his protest that the punishment was too great for an offense against so petty a personage, and that for it he ought to have the privilege of abusing the Prime Minister himself. To jail he went, and a few days later home in triumph came the troops to Berlin from the Schleswig campaign. Thereupon his colleagues on the Kladderadatsch staff brought out a cartoon representing all the city rejoicing, save Dohn, who pined in solitude, imprisoned by the crinoline of Caroline! This Kaiser Wilhelm saw, and was so tickled by the fun that he spoke to Bismarck about it and had Dohn at once at liberty.

The Queen and the News.

The Queen has her own Parliamentary reporter, and whether she is in the far North or the Isle of Wight, she is acquainted with the proceedings of both houses long before any of her subjects. On ordinary occasions brief abstracts of the debate are telegraphed to her Majesty, but should the discussion be of exceptional importance, fuller reports are sent, and continued down to the close of the debate and the taking of the division. Beside the telegrams received by her Majesty from both houses, the leader of the House of Lords and the Prime Minister in the House of Commons write her a short account of the debate. Outside the walls of Parliament the Queen is probably the first to know that the Ministers have gained a victory or suffered a defeat. In time of war, too, the Queen is kept fully informed of the progress of events day by day and hour by hour, and every dispatch from the Commander-in-Chief to the War Office is forwarded direct to her Majesty by special messenger. — Cassell's Magazine.

Richland Census.

The democratic voters of Richland township are expected to meet at the school house, on the 5th of July, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the County Convention, to be held at Auburn the 24th instant.

According to the reportment as set forth in a paper recently published elsewhere, giving the vote of 1882 on Secretary of State by townships and precincts, Richland will be entitled to a delegation of seven men in the county convention.

The Prohibition Presidential Convention meets at Pittsburg July 28d; eighteen states have elected delegates and alternates, 1,000 of whom are expected. The prominent names are, ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas, Oliver T. Stewart, of New York, O. R. H. McDonald, of California, C. B. Fisk, of New Jersey, and John Russell, of Michigan.

Cash premiums to the amount of $5,000 are offered to competitors, and the programs in the speed department is varied and attractive. Every citizen of the county should take a live interest in our home fair and make the exhibition prosperous.

County Convention.

The secretary of the County Central Committee has prepared the following table for the information and guidance of townships in selecting delegates to the county convention:

The democratic county convention meets in Auburn, July 26. The different townships and precincts are entitled to one delegate for every ten votes cast for secretary of state in 1882, and one for each fraction of half or more than half of that number. This will be shown by the following table:

TOWNSHIPS AND PRECINCTS.	VOTES 1882.	No. Del.

Keyser West.....	155	16
Totals.....	2559	258

The townships in holding their caucuses for the selection of delegates, should be guided by this table as to the number of delegates. Care should be taken to locate the delegates in such a way as would best secure a fair and equal representation for all parts of the township or precinct. We have no doubt but that this arrangement will be made in such a spirit of fairness that all conflicting interest will be satisfied and we be enabled to enter on this important campaign united and harmonious.

Railroad Land Grants.

The table below shows the total land grants made by the United States down to 1880, as given in "The West in 1880."

States and Corporations.	Acres Granted.	Acres Certified.
Illinois.....	2,046,013	2,046,006
Wisconsin.....	2,046,360	1,828,006
Iowa.....	4,704,527	3,844,770
Michigan.....	4,714,490	3,928,067
Minnesota.....	4,828,056	3,872,803
Kansas.....	5,902,941	5,928,301
Illinois.....	5,970,041	5,861,586
Pacific railroad.....	159,438,766	5,841,674
Total.....	215,208,807	12,847,409

These grants, amounting in the aggregate to 215,208,807 acres, or over 355,000 square miles, is only about 6,000 miles less in area than all the original thirteen States of the Union taken together, and is more than 70 per cent. greater than the total area of the German empire. Fortunately for the country, a number of these grants have been forfeited; yet, as above shown, 42,847,409 acres, or more than the total area of England and Wales together, had been actually certified to the States and roads named before June 30, 1870; and many acres have been certified since that time. The exact amount down to date is not yet published. To avoid taxation, the railroads entitled to public lands delay taking their certificates until the settlement of the country and opportunity for selling make it to their interest to do so. A large amount of the land covered by the above grants will be certified to the grantees on demand.

Why He Kept His Temper.

A small-sized colored man was roundly abusing a brother of color on Antoine street large enough to eat him up. After the abuse had continued for a long time without result a white man said to the party of the second part, "Why don't you pick him up and mop the snow with his legs?" "I could do it, boss." "Then why don't you?" "Well, I was considerin'. If we have a bout I shall prob'ly be 'reasted.' If I'm 'reasted my name will be in de papers. If I got to de papers de man up on Calhoun street who owns de house dat I moved out ob in de night will know what to find me, an' gently elucidate de information dat he wants de fo' months' back rent."—Detroit Free Press.

Labor and Culture.

In Nashua, N. H., a large part of the best society is made up of those who have some time been employed in the mills. One writer says that, among the leading people, a woman over 50 years who has never worked in the mills is an exception. And yet nowhere in New England is there more culture and refinement, and it speaks triumphant proof that labor and culture are not in any degree incompatible.

Born to Be Great.

"Charlie," remarked Fogg, "you were born to be a writer." "Ah," replied Charlie, blushing slightly at the compliment, "you have seen some of the things I have turned off?" "No," replied Fogg; "I wasn't referring to what you had written; I was simply thinking what a splendid ear you had for carrying a pen. Immense, Charlie; simply immense."—Boston Transcript.

After a recess there were named for vice president General Rosecrans, Governor Glick, General John C. Black, Joseph E. McDonald, and Thomas A. Hendricks. The formal ballot proceeded for a short time, when Hendricks was nominated by acclamation.

—The Chicago Times, which cannot by any means be claimed as a democratic "organ," has the following pointed convention notes:

Mr. Cleveland may easily be distinguished from the republican nominee. He wears no plumes and is not tattooed.

As Cleveland has no long, bad record to defend, his letter of acceptance should be brief and speedily forthcoming.

Mr. Cleveland is not a Jingo and has never had a Jingo foreign policy. There is nothing in his candidacy to frighten business interests.

Mr. Blaine has gone too far now to decline the nomination, and he must go into the fight if he loses every feather and comes out of it looking like the parrot that had had a head of a time.

Mr. Blaine's friends have all the time declared that nothing would so much please him as the nomination of Cleveland. Mr. Blaine must therefore be indulging in some very hilarious rejoicings, but why he prefers to be defeated by Cleveland rather than by any other man has not been explained to millions of curious voters.

Just the Thing.

Fill the Bill to a Boy, and no Things Get Hot Politically Everybody will Want It.

The special edition of the B & O Red Book, devoted to the history of the Republican party and its antecedents, is an almost indispensable publication to those at all interested in the development of the campaign of the year. Great care is manifested in the compilation of data, and while everything is stated in the most concise manner, the information is so clear and explicit as to be readily comprehended. The chapter devoted to the origin of the party and its national outcome from the dismemberment of prior parties is of exceeding interest, as is also the points showing party policy as expressed through Congressional action. The condensed proceedings of the National Conventions of the various parties from the earliest period of the country's history to the present, is, of no ordinary value, and it is a thing never before attempted in such form of publication. Indeed, it would be difficult to tell of all the important information gathered together and shown so intelligently in the little book.

Those who desire so invaluable a text-book for handy reference, as matters grow interesting, will not delay long in enclosing a two-cent stamp with their address to C. K. Lord, Baltimore, this being the only requisite to secure a copy. In addition to the data having direct bearing upon the one party, there is a vast amount of information given as regards both parties, and with the Red Book at hand no one need be at loss for an authority to settle almost any question as to political history which may come up. In common with all the B & O publications, it is a model of perfect typography, the make-up and type used generally being very far above the average of political text-books.

The appearance of Ben Butler, the laboring man, in the convention would have been effective and picturesque if he had carried his dinner-pail and eaten his noon lunch in presence of the audience. —Chicago Times.

—The Chicago Times, a paper that represents the Independent faction of the late republican party, says: "Blaine may be able to buy Tammany, but he will not be able to buy the New York independents. The men who oppose the republican party because of the record of its candidates, as well as those who oppose the party because of its pledge to support tariff robbery, will vote for Cleveland. Obituary.

THOMAS—In Garrett, Indiana, Saturday A. M., of Bright's disease, Bruce D. Thomas, aged 49 years, 10 months and 20 days.

By the death of B. D. Thomas, which occurred at his residence in Garrett on Saturday morning, 28th ult., the town, as well as DeKalb county, loses a most worthy and valuable citizen. Mr. Thomas had been quite an invalid for nearly a year, his disease being Bright's disease of the kidneys, which within the last six or eight months had assumed a dangerous form and latterly confined him to his room, and considering the fatal consequences of this dread disease his death was not unexpected.

Mr. Thomas was elected county commissioner on the democratic ticket in 1882, and he filled this important position up to a short time before his death, having resigned on account of failing health. He was selected by the democratic county central committee to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Christian Shoets, the democratic nominee for the southwest district. Mr. Thomas' election followed by a majority in excess of his colleagues on the ticket, which showed his personal popularity at home.

Mr. Thomas took his seat at the December meeting of 1882, where his superior executive ability in county finances was made manifest, and at subsequent sessions he made the same careful and economical record, but owing to periodical attacks of the disease that culminated in death, he was at times unable to meet with the board. At the appointed time of the June session he was in quite an enfeebled condition, but owing to the absence of commissioner Sewell from sickness, which left the board with but a single member to act, at the solicitation of Mr. Widney, the remaining member, Mr. Thomas, appreciating the urgency of the case, reported for duty and remained until nearly the close of the term when failing strength admonished him to retire, and he resigned. Mr. Henry Probst being appointed his successor.

Mr. Thomas was born in Fayette county, O. July 30, 1837, and consequently was nearly 47 years of age at the time of his death. He resided at London, Madison county, in 1862, and was elected treasurer of that county, and filled other positions of trust. In 1875 he emigrated to Garrett, being among the pioneer settlers of the place, and during his residence became prominently identified in real estate transactions, banking, etc. He leaves a widow and a family of several children, who have the heartfelt sympathy of all in their present bereavement.

The funeral obsequies took place on Sunday, June 29th, being conducted under the auspices of the I. O. O. F., of which order the deceased was an honored member. The remains were taken to Waterloo Cemetery for interment, Mr. Thomas selecting this for his last resting place. A special train on the B. & O. was detailed for the occasion, so that the greater number could join in paying a last tribute of respect to the memory of their esteemed fellow citizen.

Lynchings.

VINCENNES, Ind., June 24.—At 12:30 last night a mob of about fifty persons went to the jail and battered down the door with a rail taken from the track, and took Oliver Canfield, who murdered Mrs. Mollie Gerkin some time ago, and hanged him to a telegraph pole. The body was left hanging until 5 a. m., when it was put down by his friends. The mob was quiet but determined. The Sheriff was at the jail but was overpowered, and no resistance was made. The murder was an atrocious one, Canfield killing the woman from jealousy.

When they got it in Defiance county, O., they have it bad. George Garst left a wife and five children and Mollie Parr a husband and three children and eloped.

Wilson Bros. manufacture the best Shirts and Neck-wear, and keep the best Furnishing Goods in America. They take pains to secure a clean durable stock. Their goods are sold by all leading dealers, from New York to California. B. Hunsel, Garrett, is handling them. (19me8).

It will pay the people of DeKalb County to call on Coop & Haisan for prices on groceries, even if you don't buy. If he don't call you he can show you cheap goods, and make others sell for the same or close up. 31

Cleveland and Hendricks.

Cleveland and Hendricks, New York and Indiana once more. These men are the chosen nominees of the National democratic convention.

For President, Grover Cleveland has made a national reputation as the reform Governor of New York, and when elected president he will take his reform methods into the new administration and purify the government.

It was a fitting thing to do, placing Thomas A. Hendricks, Indiana's favorite son, on the ticket for vice-president, a position that was stolen from him in 1877 by a gang of republican thieves and plunderers. Now the people have an opportunity to rebuke the outrage and the people will do it.

We hail the ticket with a happy heart, believing that the men comprising it are clean and untarnished by official corruption, loyal and true representatives of democracy and the people, and that the ticket will be triumphantly elected next November we have not a shadow of doubt.

The platform covers considerable space, and deals at length with all live issues, "a plain unvarnished tale" that all who read may understand.

The plank awakening the chief interest was that relating to the tariff, which says that a change is necessary as is proved by the existing surplus of more than a hundred millions dollars, yearly collected from the suffering people. The Democracy pledges itself to purify the administration, restore economy, revive respect for the law, reduce taxation to the lowest point consistent with a due regard to the preservation of the faith of the nation to creditors and pensioners, to revise the tariff in a spirit of fairness to all interests and in method conservative and cautious. The platform declares all taxation should be limited to the requirements of an economical government. Reduction must and can be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor. Sufficient revenue to pay all expenses of the government can be got from duties and articles of luxury, relieving articles of necessity. It calls for a change in government to remove the abuses of the advocates of gold and silver coinage, public lands to be kept for settlers and unearned grants to revert to the government. It demands the exclusion of the Mongolion, and insists upon protecting citizens at home and abroad. The platform ends in a brilliant eulogy of Tilden.

The concert, recently given by Miss Edith Orr, of Kendallville, proved to be an entertainment of considerable merit. It was largely attended and all went away well pleased with the performance.

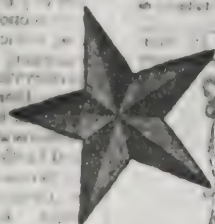

John Clark, living near Auburn Junction, was instantly killed by a kick from one of his horses on the afternoon of the 4th, while in the act of whipping the team. Mr. Clark was a son of the late George Clark. He leaves a young wife, nee Eva Wise, a daughter of Mr. Wise of this place.

William Shock, of Michigan, is visiting his friends in the village. Mr. Shock has declared himself an uncompromising temperance man and will vote hereafter "the way he talks," and fight all political parties that antagonize his principles. Looks as though William meant business.

Jacob Kranev, the popular Kendallville restaurateur of the True Blue Bakery, fed several hundred hungry people on show day. Jake has concluded, in order to protect himself, to advance the price of meals to 25 cents on public days. Ordinarily the price will remain at 25 cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

TREASURER.

The many democratic friends of BENJAMIN L. DUBOIS take this method of presenting his name to the democratic convention of DeKalb county, as a candidate for the office of county treasurer, subject to the decision of said convention.

REPRESENTATIVE.

EDITOR HEADLIGHT:—Having learned from what we consider a reliable source that the Hon. Freeman Kelly, of Smithfield township, will accept the nomination for representative for this county on the democratic ticket, and will take an active part in the coming campaign, and realizing the necessity of having an active, thorough-going democrat at the head of our ticket, we hereby announce his name for that important office, and hope to see his nomination secured unanimously by the active support of his friends all over the county. In this hope we submit his name to the favorable consideration of the democratic convention that meets at Auburn, July 26, 1884. Signed by

The Fourth was a quiet day in Garrett. Not even a candidate in town, nor a dog fight.

Several of our citizens have taken stock in the Building Loan Association of Indianapolis, and contemplate building at an early day.

The Corunna band furnished some beautiful music at the funeral of B. D. Thomas.

The boys were a fine appearance to the funeral.

Ben. Butler, the cockeyed man of destiny, didn't go through Garrett as per advertisement.

We think Ben made a mistake.

Several of our citizens both ladies and gentlemen were at Auburn attending Robinson's show.

They came home in grand style—in a gravel train, caboose.

The Odd Fellows installed their new officers on last Wednesday night.

Charles Camp, N. G. L. Lockwood, Y. G. T. S. Morris, Secretary, B. F. Bombardier, Treasurer.

Chairman Britton has issued a call for a caucus of the Richland democrats next Saturday, 10th, to select delegates to the county convention.

It is desired that there be as full an attendance as possible.

Johnny Cunnany died at Altona yesterday of consumption. He will be buried today in the Corunna cemetery by the side of his father, the late James Cunnany.

George W. Lackey was at Fort Wayne celebrating the Fourth. George says that one day at the show with a baby on each arm, and the next day "celebrating" is a little inclined to break a man all up.

The cholera continues to rage with unabated fury at Marcellus. It is estimated that 120,000 people have left the place and Parisians are making preparations to fly. It is predicted that the plague will spread over Europe and that America cannot escape.

The democratic county convention will meet at Auburn on Saturday, 26th inst. The official call has not yet been handed to the press, and as this is our last issue before the assembling of the convention, we will be unable to lay the document before our readers.

Returning from Chicago the other day via the B. & O., we formed the acquaintance of Kirby Smith who has the right run to Detroit. Kirby was formerly in the employ of the Lake Shore company, and he is an old-time railroader who has honorably earned his spurs.

That book agent had better look "heedful" for a cyclone would be but as a gentle zephyr in comparison to the lively wrath of the head of the household. Remember the scriptural injunction: "Thou must not vex thy neighbor's wife nor his ass."

Mr. Britton the popular and courteous superintendent of the B. & O. at Garrett, gave a fine display of fireworks on the night of the Fourth at his residence. Many railroad men and citizens were present and thrived on the display. All join in returning thanks to Mr. Britton and his handsome wife for their entertainment and hospitality.

Our townsman, Biggs D. Thomas, after a long and terrible sickness of nearly one year, surrendered his life to the "King of Terrors." He died in the full possession of his mental faculties, displaying to the end great fortitude in his long suffering. Mr. Thomas was a man of more than ordinary ability, strong in his friendship, utterly opposed to drink and tobacco, a kind neighbor, and a man whom the people cannot well spare. He died with no fear of the great hereafter.

The funeral services were held at the family residence at 2 p.m. by the Rev. S. C. Orpen, of Lima, Ind., and also by the Odd Fellows of Garrett. The remains were taken to Waterloo for burial.

A biographical sketch of the deceased, under the heading of "obituary," will be found on another page of this paper.

The Chicago Times, speaking of the candidate for illustration:

The lack of a "political record," as the phrase is, was also available to him (Cleveland). The whigs asked, in 1864: "Who is James K. Polk?"—yet Polk had been speaker of the house. Before his elevation to the position of previous governor by Republican majority, Cleveland had been mayor of Buffalo. But, in 1860, Illinois was known only as the man who had made a brilliant conquest of Illinois against Douglas, wherefore, it was said, Douglas had made him president. Cleveland is best known as the man who beat the selected candidate and whole power of the Washington government in a canvass for governor of New York. The administration, then, as Tammany and anti-Tammany, have had to do in making Cleveland a Candidate for president against Blaine.

The chapters of his political biography are few and short. He has beaten the administration. He has beaten Tammany. He has beaten "the field." Will he beat the candidate and representative of all the rest of the voters?

It was a rooming meeting, a convention composed of the largest body of men that ever congregated for a similar purpose. And they were representative men of the great democratic party of the nation, particularly noted for intelligence, and in striking contrast to the general make up of the late republican convention.

The Herald puts at the head of its column the democratic ticket for president and vice-president of the United States. It says: "We congratulate the democratic party upon the work of its convention at Chicago, and the opportunity it offers to American people through a nation of patriotic voters, by what else, to redeem the country from the disgrace and peril to which the republican party has placed to expose it by the thoroughly and nominations of Blaine and Logan.

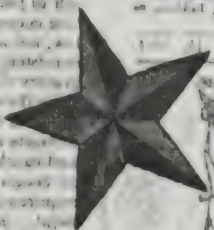

Boston Herald: She was employed on a daily newspaper. She conceived the idea of making a little pleasure trip, and proceeded to ascertain the southern editorial wisdom. She consulted the meteorological editor, the astronomical editor, the shipping editor, the mining editor, the astrological editor, the occult editor, the political prophecy editor, the critical editor, the go-as-you-please editor, and the cut-up-all-the-else-see-then editor. The unanimous verdict was one of unanimous approval and unqualified satisfaction. The newspapers gave strange cheerful approval. She felt that the enthusiastic acquiescence with her project was the reverse of complimentary, and with true feminine logic she resolved to stay at home.

Grover Cleveland represents the better element of New York democracy, while independent republicans count among leading bankers and merchants will rally to his standard. The opposition of John Kelly and his Tammany Democrats will have but little influence against the ticket in the city. The county democracy are a unit and will roll up a large vote.

The lack of a "political record," as the phrase is, was also favorable to him (Cleveland). The whigs asked, in 1884: "Who is James K. Polk?"—yet Polk had been spoken of the house. Before his elevation to the station of a provincial governor by a phenomenal majority, Cleveland had been mayor of Buffalo! CORUNNA, DEKALB CO., INDIANA, JULY 30, 1884.

PUBLIC OPINION.

—Springfield (Mass.) Republican, Rep.: The independents will not put up a third candidate, but will heartily support Cleveland and Hendricks.

—Pittsburg Leader, Ind. Rep.: Cleveland has shown a remarkable strength of will, and a laudable absence of all that goes to make up the demagogue in all that he has done as governor.

—Altoona Sun: The action of the convention is generally approved by men of all parties who desire to see the administration of the government in clean hands. The nomination is a strong one.

—Newark (N. J.) Journal: We have all along been satisfied that had Mr. Tilden felt as liberty or deemed it becoming and modest to indicate a preference it would have been for Governor Cleveland.

—Maryland Republican: We feel that we may heartily congratulate our countrymen, irrespective of party, upon the nominations at Chicago, and the assurance of a new and brighter era in national government.

—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, Republican: We think the more conservative of both political parties regard a change at Washington as certain to occur in the next few years, and are ready to welcome it as the result of the coming election. Such a change will bring the wheels out of a rut in which they have run too long, and will expose for cleansing the foul places it has been the interest of so many to conceal.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer: As we understand the matter Governor Cleveland's veto of the five-cent bill was based on plain provisions of law that could not be evaded. Governor Cleveland is no demagogue, and would not violate his oath of office and do no unlawful act even for popular applause as Jim Blaine or Ben Butler would have done. To have allowed the five-cent fare bill to go into effect would have been to do violence to chartered rights possessed by the railroad company.

—Jeffersonville News: New York's great reform Governor cannot be beaten. He is invincible. The old guard will rally around him. He is spotless and pure and he will beat the scarred and tattooed candidate who is a fit representative of the foul method of modern republicanism. We will have the independent vote; the clean, intelligent republicans will help us. The star-eyed goddess of reform smiles upon us. Every omen is promising. The republican party must go. Cleveland is the man who can drive her minions from power if a political earthquake is at hand. The seething lava of public indignation is boiling in awful incandescence below the foundations of the g. o. c. p. (grand old corrupt party). Good-by Credit Mobilier, Black Friday, Belknap, Star-route and congenial jobbery and robbery. Up with the people's party. Let none falter.

—The Kansas City Times well says: The nomination by acclamation of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks for Vice-President was a fitting finale of the enthusiastic and harmonious convention, which has acted so wisely in the formation of its platform and the selection of its ticket. Mr. Hendricks will bring great strength to the party and meets in a measure at least that devoted and loyal sentiment so often shown for the old ticket during the canvass. He is one of the foremost statesmen of the country, and his bold upon the affections of the democratic masses is equal to that of any other man in the United States, except Mr. Tilden. His spontaneous following for the first place on the ticket created at the convention, shows how deeply is his name cherished in the hearts of his fellow democrats. His nomination makes Indiana a sure democratic state and makes a democratic victory almost certain.

GROVER CLEVELAND

Grover Cleveland was born in Caldwell, Essex county, New Jersey, Mar. 1837. When he was quite young his parents removed to Fayette, Onondaga county, New York. At the age of fifteen he was sent to the academy at Clinton, Onondaga county, but his studies were of short duration. When he was sixteen years old he was obliged to accept a position as clerk in a country store, but soon after was offered and accepted a position as teacher in the New York asylum for the blind, where he remained for one year. While thus employed he was persuaded by a young companion to start for Cleveland, Ohio, to seek his fortune. Stoping at Buffalo, on the way to visit an uncle, Hon. Lewis F. Allen, he was dissuaded from proceeding further and soon after began the study of law. He was admitted to practice in 1859, and in 1862 was appointed district attorney for Erie county, in which position, although but twenty-five years old, he displayed great ability. In 1865 he was nominated by the democrats for district attorney, but was defeated by the republican nominee by a small majority. He then resumed his private practice of law, being a member of the firm of Laning, Cleveland & Folsom.

In the fall of 1870 he was elected sheriff of that county and held the office three years. In 1874 he was elected mayor of Buffalo, receiving hundreds of republican votes, although he was the democratic candidate. As mayor he confirmed the good opinion entertained for him by honest men of all parties. Exercising the veto power unsurprisingly, he was the means of defeating many corrupt municipal jobs originating in his own as well as the republican party, and by the utmost care and vigilance he saved to the taxpayers many thousands of dollars, which, if he had performed his duty less conscientiously, might have been ruthlessly squandered. It was while administering this office that he came into notice outside of his residence.

When a successor was to be elected for Governor Cornell the democrats nominated Grover Cleveland, and his election over Mr. Folger was one of the most remarkable events in American politics. He carried the state by a majority of 196,000. He carried almost every county in the state.

That the character and record of Grover Cleveland had something to do with the collapse of the party in the state there can be no doubt. His manly bearing, the failure of his enemies to find a single vulnerable point in his record and the fact that many staunch republican newspapers were enthusiastic in his support, gave him increased strength daily. His partisanship was not of the brutal, unthinking kind, and that made him more acceptable to fair men driven temporarily from their own party.

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS

Thomas A. Hendricks was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, September 7, 1819. In 1822 his father settled in Shelby county, Indiana. He graduated from South Hanover College in 1841, and was admitted to the bar two years later at Chambersburg, Pa., after which he returned to Indiana, when he began the practice of law. He was elected a member of the Indiana legislature in 1845, and in 1850 was a delegate to the state constitutional convention. He represented the Indianapolis district in congress from 1851 to 1856, and from the latter year to 1859 he was commissioner of the general land office, having been appointed to that position by President Pierce. In 1868 he was chosen by the Indiana legislature to represent his state in the senate of the United States, where he served on the committees on claims, public buildings, judiciary, public lands and naval affairs. Just before the democratic national convention of 1868 Mr. Hendricks' name was prominently mentioned for the nomination for the presidency, and at the convention which was held in Tammany hall, New York, he received 192 votes to 1863 cast for General Hancock. The name of Horatio Seymour was proposed, when it was seen that the contest between Hancock and Hendricks would be a long one, and Seymour was nominated. In 1869 he was defeated by Henry L. Lane for governor of Indiana, and in 1868 by Conrad Baker, but was successful in the race for governor in 1872. At the national democratic convention, held in St. Louis in 1876, his name was again mentioned for the presidency, but, as is known, Mr. Tilden secured the place, and Mr. Hendricks was given the second place on the ticket. Since 1876 Mr. Hendricks has attended to his law practice.

HENRY CLAY AND PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

Henry Clay used to take special delight in annoying Mr. Buchanan, who had, he believed, started the report that he had made a bargain with John Quincy Adams, by which he secured the election of the Massachusetts statesman as President, receiving in return the appointment of Secretary of State, which had been up to that day a stepping stone to the Presidency. On one occasion, as Mr. Buchanan was defending himself against the charge of disloyalty during the war of 1812, he having been "an old Federalist," to prove his loyalty stated that he had entered a company of volunteers at the time of the battle of North Point, and marched to Baltimore. "True," he said, "I was not in any engagement, as the British had retreated before I got there."

Mr. Clay—You marched to Baltimore, though?

Mr. Buchanan—Yes.

Mr. Clay—Armed and equipped?

Mr. Buchanan—Yes, armed and equipped.

Mr. Clay—But the British had retreated when you arrived?

Mr. Buchanan—Yes.

Mr. Clay—Will the Senator from Pennsylvania be good enough to inform us whether the British retreated in consequence of his valiantly marching to the relief of Baltimore, or whether he marched to the relief of Baltimore in consequence of the British having already retreated?

The Senators and the occupants of the galleries roared with laughter, and Mr. Buchanan, red with anger, prudently made no reply.

"Do you really believe that an ass ever spoke to Balham?" queried a man who prided himself on his intellect. Coleridge to whom the question was put, replied: "My friend, I have no doubt whatever that the story is true, I have been spoken to in the same way myself." The man of the inquiring mind retired for meditation.

THE BUCKET SHOP.

A simple-minded Peasant who had heard a great deal about Bucket Shops entered one of them one day and asked: "What will it cost me to get a Bucket?" "Five dollars is our lowest Figure," was the reply.

The Peasant handed over his cash and was told to watch the Ticker and the man who chalked on the Blackboard. He watched until weary of the Occupation, and then said:

"I guess I'll take my Bucket and jog along home, as it is about time to feed the Pigs."

"Why, sir," replied the owner of the Cooper Shop, "the Bottom dropped out of your Bucket half an hour ago."

"Then I will take the hoops home to show my Wife that I speculated and lost."

"Base ingrate!" shouted the proprietor, "is it not enough that you have not had your pockets picked and your head mashed with a club? After having put us to the trouble of taking your money you would now squeal! Go hence! Come here no more! Hereafter get yourself robbed on the highway or buy Mining Stocks!"—Alfred Frost.

HOW TO "RAISE A SWEAT."

When Quin, the actor, was in his last illness, the faculty were much divided in opinion concerning his recovery, but his apothecary never had any doubt about it; one day after he had felt of the patient's pulse, Quin asked him what he thought now? "I think," he answered, "you'll do very well if we can but raise a sweat." "Then," said Quin, "only send your bill, and I warrant you the thing is done."

A JILTED paragraphist says: Just let a delicate girl, too weak to walk or wield a broom, get interested in a conversation with her bean over the telephone, and she will stand on tip-toe at the wall, holding a listener to her ear, meanwhile giggling and screaming, for half a day.

Blaine, the Demagogue.

Mr. Blaine, having taken the time to it, has produced a volume of considerable length, and which few people will have the courage to undertake to read it, and having read it, there will be no more what it is all about. Like all the public utterances of Blaine it is windy and demagogical, full of insinuation, full of misrepresentation, and full of falsehood. The production of an earnest trader and fiscal demagogue, and one who is not at all averse to the use of fair words.

Mr. Blaine announces that he is in favor of a protective tariff, but admits the necessity for a revision of it. All the Democrats insist upon. He combats the idea of free trade, which is the policy of the country. He asserts that all our national property to a protective tariff, which is a monstrous assumption without any foundation in fact. He asserts that it is the policy and purpose of the Democrats to entirely destroy the protective principle in the tariff, which is a misrepresentation and a falsehood, as they only seek for himself by reading the democratic platform. Throughout his whole discussion of the tariff question, Blaine, with the impudence characteristic of the man, misrepresents the position of his opponents, attempts to belittle what he and every man of sense knows to be a taken gross misrepresentation as to facts, and on this important matter of assumption and falsehood builds a sophistical argument in favor of the policy of the party whose course and whose policy he represents.

In his discussion of the national foreign commerce, Mr. Blaine in a still greater degree displays the character of a demagogue. He admits the truth of the accusation against the republican party that under its rule our merchant marine has vanished from the seas, and the flag of the country has become a stranger to the seas. He admits that the carrying trade of this country has passed into the hands of other nations. He admits that under the blighting influence of republicanism the foreign commerce of this country has withered away into nothingness. He admits all this because he cannot help it but demagogue, that he turns the issue into another channel, by asserting that our commerce consists in our imports and exports and that it is immaterial that the carrying trade is almost altogether in the hands of other nations. He goes on to give figures showing that our "commerce" that is to say our buying and selling, has increased enormously in the last twenty years, and therefore it is of no consequence at all that our shipping has utterly vanished from the seas. And having admitted, as he is constrained by the figures he quotes, to admit, that the total amount of this commerce, is about equally divided between imports and exports, or, in other words that in twenty years we have sent out of the country as much, or perhaps a little more money than we have brought in, Mr. Blaine has the cheek to say that this result is beneficial and that our "commerce" is all right. As well might Mr. Blaine argue that the man who in twenty years has made ten thousand dollars and spent it all and perhaps a little more has grown richer and is on the sure road to prosperity.

But Mr. Blaine reaches the climax of audacious misrepresentation and falsehood when he lays this "prosperity," such as it is, to a protective tariff. He goes on to say that the protective tariff maintained by the republican party has been and is a boon to the farmers because it gives them a home market for their grain and obviates the necessity of sending anything abroad. Having in one breath stated that the country is growing prosperous because a protective tariff has enabled the people of this country to export cereals (because in point of fact they do not export much of anything else), and they are prosperous on that account. In the next breath he congratulates the farmers that a protective tariff insures them a home market, and not being under the necessity of exporting anything, they are prosperous on that account. In other words the country is asked to thank the republican party for a policy that at one and the same time induces prosperity by promoting exportation of products and increases that prosperity by making the exportation of products impossible! Mr. Blaine knows, as every well informed man knows, that because of the high rates of duties that are put upon manufactured articles, we are utterly unable to compete with other nations in the markets of the world with any of our manufactured products. We cannot sell them, because we cannot sell them cheap enough. We are shut up to exportation of people and agricultural products, and the farmers and planters are put in direct competition with the pauper labor of India and the East. Yet they must sell for what they can get for their "commerce" that Mr. Blaine would not will come altogether, a result that Mr. Blaine seems to anticipate with pleasure, that the policy of the republican party, that having destroyed our carrying trade, and having shut our manufactured products out of the markets of the world, will eventually shut our cereals and raw materials out also, making us a nation of buyers, but selling nothing whatever! In other words Mr. Blaine would have the nation prosper, as he would have an individual prosper who kept continually transferring his available cash from one pocket to another, all the while dependent upon outside help for the means to live.

We have reviewed this preposterous mixture of contradictions and absurdities, as usual in the demagogue's speech, at some length.

merely to show the demerit, and the utter lack of any true element of statesmanship in this man Blaine. The remainder of his letter, treating on other topics, is equally bombastic and absurd. He pretends that he has a favor of maintaining peace with neighboring nations, and at the same time announces that he would continue his policies of meddling with and bullying of other nations that he began when Garfield's Secretary of State, a policy that involved the country in a frightful scandal, attended with humiliation and disgrace, and which would certainly have involved the nation in an expensive, unequalled and useless war, if the plot of Gullapo had not cut short the reckless career of Blaine as an "arbitrator" in the concerns of other nations, where he was upon a saddle at all. "We seek the conquest of peace," says Mr. Blaine, and yet he maintains that he would, if elected, prosecute a policy of insolent interference in the affairs of other countries that would keep up a constant irritation, and in all probability provoke armed conflict. He pretends that he is in favor of civil service reform, and at the same time accuses it to be understood that he would have nobody but republicans hold office. He is opposed to polygamy in Utah, but admits that in twenty-five years of power his party has done nothing to suppress it, and he himself proposes no solution of the difficulty. With the facts of the star route robberies before their eyes, and with one of the star route thieves managing his campaign, he pretends to believe that the government is carried on honestly. With the full knowledge that of the two last republican presidents one was coated by the blackest fraud and the other elected by the most venal and debasing methods, he pretends that he is in favor of maintaining the purity of the ballot. From one end of his intolerably long and tedious manifesto to the other, the true character of James G. Blaine as a politician of low cunning and low mathematics, and as a blatant, audacious and reckless demagogue is apparent in every line.

COLORS.

In nature, seen under ordinary daylight, there are for the healthy human eye about 1,100 distinguishable colors. For 102 of these Regat has names; but the number of color names in modern French is said to be not short of 500. Alma Tadema reproduces his color impressions of the antique world by a palette of twelve colors, while the palette of Virgil's vocabulary contains twenty-seven terms of high colors, and fifteen more for shades due to excess or deficiency of illumination.

LEARN SOMETHING OF THE TACTICS OF THE ALLIGATOR.

Learning something of the tactics of the alligator, he never entered the water without his double-bladed knife, which he carried in a sheath bound to his side by a slender belt. After an hour's vigorous exercise in the water one morning, he climbed upon a solitary rock about 100 yards from the beach. While here he noticed at a distance coming in his direction a large-sized alligator, and, considering his resting place an unsafe one in case of an attack by such a formidable antagonist, he plunged into the bay and started for the shore. Having his attention wholly centered on the enemy first discovered, he paid little attention to anything else, and before he knew what he was about he ran plump against another alligator that happened to be resting quietly in the water in a shallow place where the rushes partly hid him from view. The alligator appeared to be quite as much astonished at the unceremonious meeting as the swimmer.

Striking the alligator in the region of the tail, he bounded back and prepared for battle. The heavy wag of the animal's tail enabled Webb to throw himself back far enough to be beyond the reach of the first blow that was aimed at him. A moment more and the alligator rolled over and made a dive at him. His presence of mind saved him. He stood in the water, facing his enemy, with his head and shoulders above the surface. With his double-edged knife he received the monster, and when his jaws came down the swimmer dived away, leaving the knife in the mouth of the reptile, transfixing both jaws and locking them together. At this juncture the animal first seen was rapidly approaching, but the swimmer soon reached the shore, and, by means of a rifle, soon made victims of them both.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Editorial Notes & Comments.

The temperance of Butler held a long-remembered meeting Saturday evening, 19th.

"A telegram was read from the president of the New York produce exchange stating that the business of New York were sold for Cleveland.

A Blaine club in the 6th ward of New York, numbering over a hundred republicans led by John A. Jones, a life-long republican, have revolted and joined the Cleveland ranks.

The Auburn Republican and the Butler Record, a brace of able radical journals, have passed derogatory opinions upon the democratic presidential nominees and consigned the ticket to oblivion. That settles it.

This talk about Tammany democrats opposing Cleveland is simply republican gas. The members of the Tammany organization have already declared for Cleveland, and the remainder will eventually follow suit.

Secretary Chandler, whom Boston Conkling gave the expressive title of "political tramp," took umbrage at some criticism made by Mr. Hendricks, of the corruption practiced in the navy, department, and proceeded to lecture Indiana's favorite son in an open letter published Monday. Mr. Hendricks responded in Tuesday's edition, and in a manner that must have produced a fine, but edifying to the secretary of the navy.

The following paragraph, embodied in the proceedings of the democratic convention at Chicago, needs no comment, as it comes from one of the best business authorities in the country: "The Blaine aggressive campaign doesn't seem to be very aggressive. Mr. Bill Chandler was bold enough to make a push at Mr. Hendricks and was knocked out in one round. As for Mr. Blaine he is explaining his record.

The continued spread of cholera in France, and the fact that regular lines of steamships are regularly running between the cholera-infected ports and the United States, has led the President to issue a proclamation, calling attention to the danger, directing officials of the Government to be vigilant, and cautioning people everywhere to enforce proper sanitary regulations. The epidemic is likely to be brought direct from the Mediterranean and may make its appearance on ships at our Atlantic ports any day.

Crover Cleveland was elected Sheriff of Buffalo; he was elected Mayor of the city and Governor of the State without a question as to the purity of his private character—but now that he is a candidate for President the smut-mills of the republicans are charging that he is a man grossly and notoriously immoral—indeed, that the people of Buffalo and New York State have been honoring a man who should not be tolerated outside the penitentiary. It is late in the day to commence this business—for were the charges true they would have seen the light long since.

Fort Wayne Sentinel: Congressman Lowry, of this city, was interviewed on the Chicago nominations and said: "Cleveland's position is misunderstood. It is the most difficult thing in the world for an executive of New York to adapt himself to the different divisions of the party in that state. There are so many conflicting interests that a bold and upright man, intent on discharging his duties according to his convictions, must necessarily create enemies." His veto of the Elevated railroad bill was a necessary result of the enforcement of the existing provisions of the law. The law provided there should be no legislative interference with fares unless the capital stock was paying more than 10 per cent. The existing rates are five cents from 6 to 8:30 a. m., and from 1:15 to 7:30 p. m. covering a period of time when the laboring classes are traveling on the road. "The tariff plank in the platform," Representative Lowry said, "would be acceptable to the democrats of Indiana."

HINDOO IDEAS OF DEATH.

Perhaps the opinion of a native Hindoo doctor, practicing at Calcutta, by name Mr. Seta Nath Ghose, may not be amiss. He says the matter is one of importance, and that he always makes strict investigation as to how his patients die, in order to come to the magical point. For he is the recommender, lying with the head East. To support this view he quotes two stanzas, or verses, from a part of the Smriti Shastras, called Anhika Tittwa:

Gurgo says: "Man should lay down with his head placed eastward in his death-chamber, until he has longed for death. He should lay down with his head to the southward. In foreign places he may lay down with his head placed even westward, but never and nowhere should he lay down with his head northward."

Markandeya says: "Man becomes learned by lying down with his head placed eastward, acquiring strength and longevity by lying down with his head southward, becomes troubled with disease and dies by lying down with his head placed westward, and brings down on himself disease and death by lying down with his head placed northward." — Cor. New York Sun.

A Baltimore man who disappeared from his accustomed haunts about a week ago, returned the other day looking seedy and discouraged, and, in answer to the query as to what had happened him, he replied:

"I left here for Kansas with every prospect of making a fortune, but luck was against me."

"No sir; I organized a fire-insurance company."

"That ought to have paid!"

"Of course it had; but just as I got the thing to running one of the insured up and busted out and took upon me for $300 damages, and that busted me up."

THE HEADLIGHT.

THE MAN WITH THE HOLLOW PLACE.

John Todd, son of the former Governor of Ohio, is considerable of a wag. About once a week he has a "stag" card party at his house in Cleveland, and the same circle of friends meet together, and practical jokes are in order. Among these is a "hollow place" which he makes a respectable fortune and is wisely about to retire at the age of 40, as to give his time to reading, philosophy and friends. On the card-party night it was the method of this friend to prepare himself for the abundant supper that was always served. He took a dinner on that day and but a little lunch, and therefore his good appetite was remarked and incited these wags to a scheme. As Caudin came to the party on a particular evening the host remarked that his cook had gone and that there was a great deal of an accident, and that there unfortunately was nothing to eat but bread and cheese. Brother Cannon, who had a large hollow place in his bread-basket, thereupon philosophically fell to the bread and cheese, just observing that the plate was pushed to him frequently, and as the cards performed their part game after game, thus passed away about a pound of cheese and the same weight of crackers, staying his appetite, though somewhat differently than his preconceptions. Suddenly, when it was observed that he would have no more cheese or crackers, the door of the dining-room flew open and there was disclosed quail on toast, sweet-breads with peas, potatoes, and the most delicious things in the market. The others, who had played off on the crackers and cheese, raised a loud roar of laughter, they rushed in and overwhelmed the guest, already full, with supplications for a return to the New York Tribune.

Senator Blair, of Nevada, says that Blaine's strength in the West has been very much overestimated, and that California and Nevada will go for Cleveland without a doubt, while a number of other Western States are not impossibilities.

Proceedings of the National Convention
The Richland democratic county meeting on the 14th was not so largely attended as the occasion called for owing probably to the busy season, still there was a fair representation in quality if not quantity.

The meeting was called to order at half past four p. m. by chairman Britton, and on motion the editor of this paper was chosen secretary with J. M. Carrens as assistant.

The chair having stated the object of the meeting, viz: the selection of seventeen delegates to represent Richland township in the county convention, to be held at Auburn, on Saturday, July 20th, 1869, on motion a committee of seven were appointed to select said delegation, with instructions to make the same as practicable, the committee consisting of N. McIntyre, R. Orr, T. F. Franks, C. E. Kagey, J. M. Gontsching, J. B. Pugh and N. Griffith.

After retiring for a short time the committee submitted the following report, which on motion was accepted and the committee discharged:

RESOLUTIONS

N. McIntyre, M. McIntyre, R. Orr, J. M. Carrens, Lewis Olliger, Will Franks, Nelson Griffith, Levi Hewitt, Levi Truesch, J. M. Gontsching, Dan Thomas, Jacob Kandall, C. E. Kagey, J. B. Pugh, James L. Smith, George Beard and C. G. Doss.

A resolution, granting all democrats who attend the convention the privilege of consultation respecting who shall be nominated, was unanimously adopted.

Some one suggested Mr. Britton's name as a candidate for Representative, and the gentleman having consented to allow his name to go before the convention, upon a vote being taken he was made almost the unanimous choice of the assembly for that position.

A call being made upon the chairman, who absent present for an expression of opinion on the situation, Mr. Britton responded and addressed the meeting in a few well timed remarks, in the course of which he briefly reviewed the action of the late Chicago convention, pronouncing a handsome eulogy on the meeting. He declared that great convention, composed of the most distinguished democrats in the nation, in the selection of Cleveland and Hendricks as the national standard-bearers of the great Democratic party, whose nomination have been hailed with singled praise and joy by all classes, that Cleveland and Hendricks were grand names to adorn our banner, and that if every democrat did but perform his simple duty, the democracy would certainly triumph in the present contest.

After adjournment, the magnetic force of ex-Representative D. D. Mitchell, of Auburn, was discovered in the crowd, and being brought forward he enlivened the boys for a period of time, until the lengthening shadows admonished the speaker that a midsummer evening was closing in, but for all that the speech was in Dave's peculiar magnetic vein of oratory and it was well received.

Day by day the democratic column rises higher and higher by accession from the republican party.

Senator Yeerkes says that Indiana is as sure to go Democratic in November as is Kentucky.

Throughout the entire length and breadth of the land magnificent ratification meetings follow the nominations of Cleveland and Hendricks.

The New York Evening Post says editorially, that Blaine's letter is a lot of "platitudes, trimmed, planed and sand-papered, till there's nothing to catch hold of."

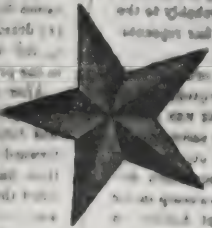

"We are coming, Ather Abraham, one hundred thousand strong." The tide of revolt is rising. One hundred thousand republicans in New York refuse to support the tainted men from Maine.

"Blaine's letter is the most masterly piece of demagogism I have ever seen in my life," says a prominent republican business man. "He goes upon the principle of giving everything to everybody, not forgetting himself. Blaine has put his feet too far forward, keep his cloven foot behind."

"I think," says Mr. Horace White, of the New York Evening Post, (Ind. Republican) "that Mr. Blaine desires to make tariff the issue of the campaign, but it does not appear to me that he will be able to do so, for the reason that the democratic platform does not furnish him sufficient grounds upon which to work."

In order to make a show the republicans of Waterloo are forming the little boys into a club by the inducement of a display of tinseel and feathers. These lads, as they grow older will learn wisdom, and long before they arrive at voting age the republican party will be buried. The scheme is altogether too thin, and serves to illustrate the desperate straits of the old party for campaign material.

Finally, to remember and adhere to an established rule of the democratic party submission to the will of the majority. The ticket, which is composed of average good men, is in the field and we entrust our democratic brethren, however unpleasant the duty may be, to lay aside their personal differences and rally for victory at the polls. This is no time to fall to the roar, and your enemies knowing the fact evidently took advantage of the circumstances. Time will vindicate you. Remember Cleveland and Hendricks and up with the democratic flag. Col-

When the republican papers are telling about "who are for Blaine," they singularly neglect to mention the Star Route gang, all of whom endorse him.

Ex-Senator Barnum has been elected to the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. Mr. Barnum will prove a march for star-route thief Elkins of the republican gang.

At a rousing ratification meeting in St. Marys, Kansas, Saturday night, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That the Irish-American citizens represented in this ratification meeting, having seen it represented in Republican papers that the Irish are opposed to Grover Cleveland and in favor of James G. Blaine, we take this method of resenting the insult by pledging ourselves to use every honest endeavor to elect Grover Cleveland and the Democratic ticket, and we say we are unalterably opposed to the endorsement of Minister Lowell by J. G. Blaine, to his Mulligan method, and to his Chief Marshall Star Route Elkins.

The expedition sent out in search of the crew composing the Lady Franklin Bay expedition have been successful in rescuing seven of the survivors. Their names are: Lieutenant Greely, Sergeant Loeb, Sergeant Fredricks, Sergeant Leonard, Sergeant Ellison, Hospital Steward Holdrege and Private Cornell. They were found by the Polar ships Thetis and Bear, five miles off Cape Sabine in Smith's Sound. Sergeant Ellison was very badly frost-bitten and died at Godhavn, July 6, after undergoing a surgical operation for relief. The ships Thetis and Bear, with the survivors, are now at St. Johns, New Foundland. Seventeen of twenty-five persons composing the expedition perished by starvation. Twelve bodies of the dead were recovered and eight are now on board the Thetis and Bear.

That was a provoking blunder on the part of the Bryan band, which advertised a cheap excursion to Boise City last Friday over the Air Line, the principal attraction being a lecture before the Island Park Assembly by Rev DeWitt Talmage, the celebrated Brooklyn divine. When the train was due at this place nearly one hundred people had assembled to embark but the train, which was literally packed with scarcely standing room sped by without stopping. The announcement that Talmage would lecture before the Assembly naturally drew a large crowd, and the band management should have anticipated this fact and notified the railway company to provide ample accommodations. As it was the tickets sold here were redeemed, and the excursionists pocketed their cash and their wrath and returned homeward. It was reported that 2,000 tickets were sold at Fort Wayne.
